THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

WHEN LACK OF LIGHT MAKES ROSES LAG

To make two blades of grass grow where only one grew before—that famous achievement strikes one as being highly commendable, sometimes, but not especially difficult. But to increase the crop of roses in the gloom of midwinter—that is a task so big as to require a grower's best skill.

By CHARLES N. COTTER, of Lake View Rose Gardens, Jamestown, N. Y.

YEAR with punctilious regularity, commencing about January 1 and continuing until the middle of February or thereabouts, trade reports from all the important flower sections east of the Rockies abound with comments on the pronounced dearth of roses. One reads that wholesale florists are driven almost to the point of desperation in futile efforts to fill orders; that each wholesaler is refusing to accept business from retailers who had not been discreet enough to form at least a speaking acquaintance with his products before the stringency became a reality instead of an expectancy; that relief is weeks away.

Unavailing Regrets.

With mingled feelings of grief and consternation, growers see the daily production decrease to numbers most minute. They observe with dismay the upward trend of prices, and figure the profits that might be theirs if it had been possible for them earlier in the season to devise some arrangement whereby they would have been able to regulate growth to their own particular fancy. And yet, why not? Affiliated with the trade are men of rare genius; men who could, if they would but concentrate their minds upon the project, evolve a method which would increase January and February production or at least assure a satisfactory continuity of growth. The latter possibility would at all events place January and February on a par with other months as far as production is concerned.

The minimized productivity during the two months in question has been attributed to three potential causes; namely, lack of sunlight in November and December, lack of sunlight in January and February, or lack of sunlight during the entire four months.

As the majority of explanations of the various phenomena of vegetable organisms are hypothetical and based on the observations of the one expounding, it is in part permissible for one to advance his own particular contention concerning the matter in question.

Old Sol Is King.

On that basis the following theory is presented, not with the idea that it is incontrovertibly correct, but with the sincere belief of the writer that it is at least as plausible as any theory on the subject at present available, and worthy of being advanced as an argument toward the correct solution of the problem.

Extension of plant growth is only possible through the influence of the sun's rays. The fundamental element of all the building compounds manufactured in the cells of the plant (carbohydrates) is thus created. The leaves through their stomata appropriate carbon dioxide from the air and conduct it inward through their canals, to cells, whose protoplasmic contents contain chlorophyl, a substance having the capacity, through the action of the sun's rays upon it, to work up this atmospheric gas. The oxygen is separated from the carbon and a large portion of it is expelled back again to the atmosphere from which it was taken. The carbon is retained and, according to botanical demonstrations, is used in building up the fibrous parts of the plant.

The carbon and oxygen, after being worked up by chlorophyl under the influence of the sun's rays, are joined by hydrogen to make compounds known as carbohydrates. These are recognized as the most important organized compounds in plant life, as they enter into the combination of all other compounds —albumens, starch, etc.—either directly or indirectly.

Thus the important part played by the sun on fundamental growth is apparent. Without it the world would become a bleak and desolate waste.

When the Plants Start Growth.

To explain properly the effect of the sun or lack of sun during the months of November, December, January and February, on rose production during January and February, our theory makes it necessary to start our observations and explanations immediately after the carried-over rose bushes are pruned and started into growth in July or August, or, in the case of young stock, from the time they are benched.

However, as the effect of the sun's rays is the same at both ages of the plant, we will take the carried-over plants as our point in the case.

After the pruning is finished and water is applied, with judicious additions to the soil in which the roots reside, and after leaf growth has made its appearance with rapid increase, then the manufacturing of building compounds, from the nutrient food salts absorbed by the roots from the soil and from the nutrient food gases absorbed from the air by the leaves, begins in the cells of the leaves.

Contemporary growth utilizes part of these compounds, and the balance of them is stored away in cells the purpose of whose existence is to serve as repositories for reserve material, pending the time when the plant will have use for it.

During August, September and October the percentage of sunlight is high. Day in and day out the leaf cells work incessantly, creating compounds out of raw material, transporting as much as is required to points where growth is going on and transporting the balance to the reserve or repository cells.

Using Reserve Energy.

Then comes November, bleak, cold November, with its shortening days, cloudy skies and cold atmosphere. Sunlight is decreased to a point inadequate to meet the current requirements of growth, and, according to the system under which cell extension is conducted, the plants should pass into a semi-comatose condition. This will happen and should happen if the plants lacked sufficient leaf area during August, September and October to permit provident provision against such an exigency.

Plants whose growth during those months of maximum sunlight was sufficient to permit the manufacturing and storing away of reserve building materials are now able to continue expansion without perceptible hindrance. Chemical action withdraws, as needed, the reserve materials from the storage cells and conveys them to the parts where growth is going on.

When the Reserve is Exhausted.

Observation and theory, based partly on scientific knowledge and partly on conjecture, seem to indicate that the supply of stored up nutrients is only sufficient to properly mature December growth, or, in trade parlance, Christmas crops.

As soon as this growth is severed from the plants, a recurrence of activity in cell expansion is markedly slow. The plants seem to stand still and do not begin to produce satisfactorily again until around the middle of February. Sunlight during the interval is more prevalent than was the case in November and December. This fact in itself seems to sustain the theory that growth during the first two months of the discussed period is able to go forward without perceptible retardation, through the utilization of the building materials manufactured and stored away during August, September and October, and that growth during the last two months of the dark-weather period is only extended in proportion to the building materials manufactured in the leaf cells during the hours of sunlight occurring in these two months, January and February.

Will Electricity Solve the Problem?

The big proposition to be solved by the constituents of rosedom, in order to obviate this ostensible cause of annual January and February rose dearth, is the substitution of artificial light for solar light during the dark weather in November and December.

Electricity would solve the problem. But would the cost of the installation and operation of the necessary apparatus, augmented by the cost of current, be reasonable enough to afford a small margin of profit from the sale of increased production?

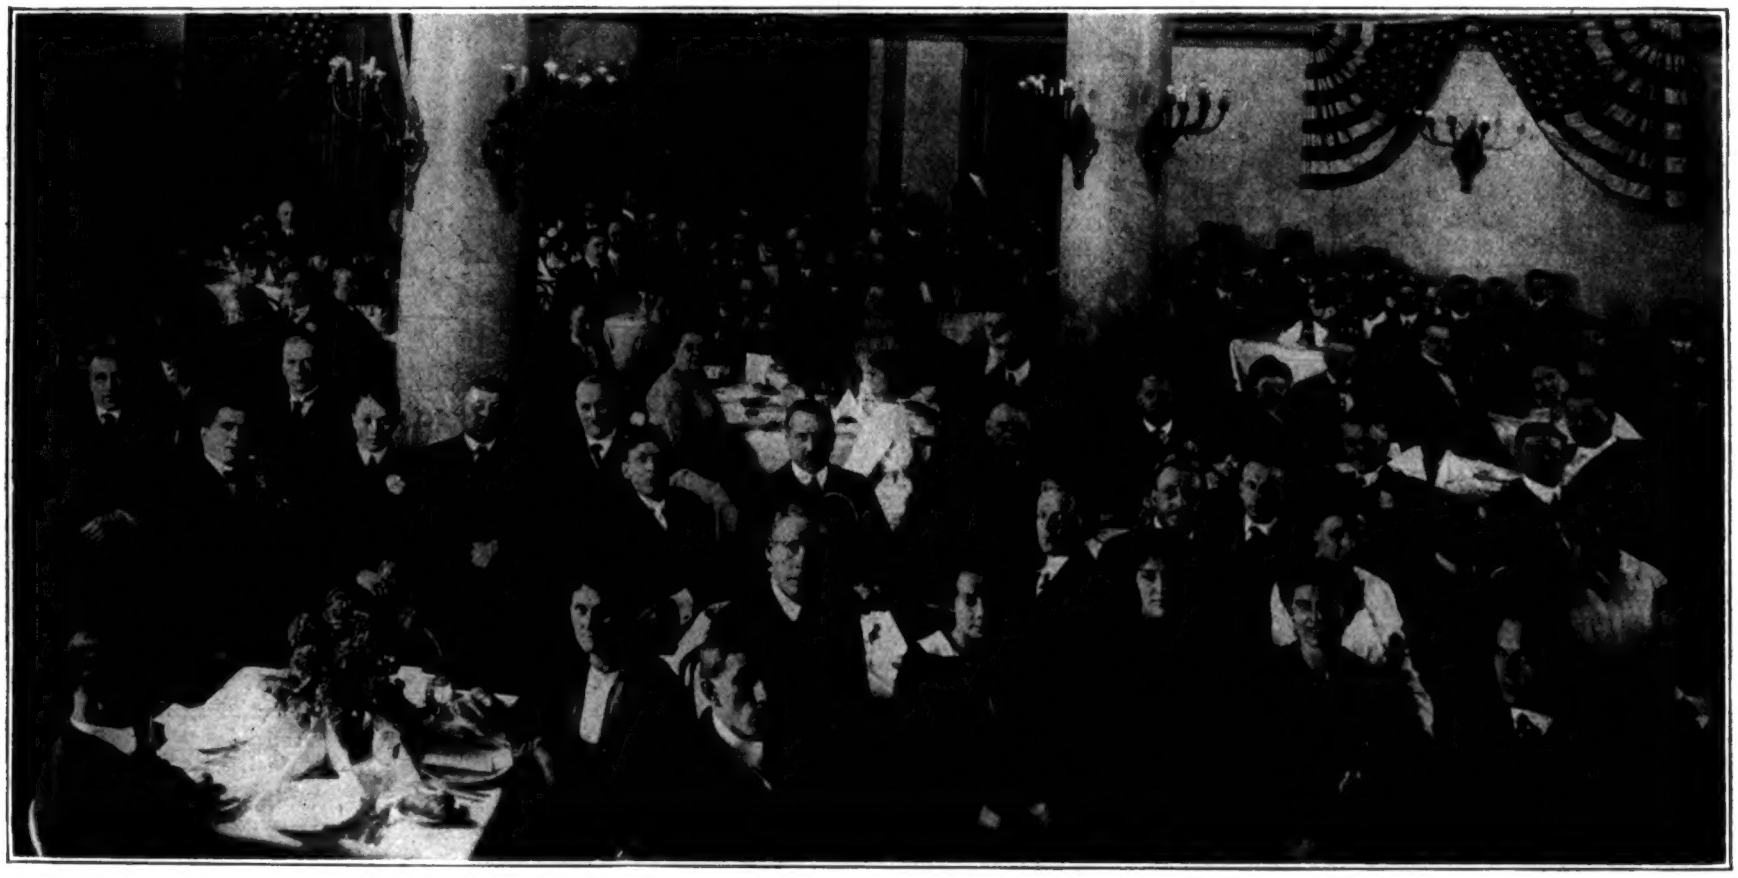
Better still, could not electricity be generated in the power plant of every greenhouse at a small advance over the average cost of steam generation? Some day some of our geniuses will get their heads together and this dream will be transformed into an actuality.

Fancy the sight some of our large rose establishments would present on a cloudy November day! Myriads of arc lights over the roofs of the houses, radiating a golden glow and imparting energy to the plants within, causing them to perform an honest day's toil in payment of the heat expended on them, and eliminating the rose growers' bugaboo, low January and February production!

Present Possibilities.

Until such a boon is possible it will behoove the rosarian to utilize the modes of circumvention now within his reach. Keep all sashbars, supports and structural work immaculately clean. Paint them with aluminum bronze. Remove as much as possible of the shadow-producing material. Try to produce as much leaf growth as possible on your plants during the summer and early fall. At all times bear in mind that it is the province of the leaves to absorb the colored rays of the sun, and the condition of the structural work should be such as to permit its reflecting the rays that fall upon its surface downward onto the leaves of the plants.

To see that all these admonitions are heeded will result in at least a small increase in productivity.



AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The Banquet.

The twenty-fifth anniversary meeting of the American Carnation Society, reported in full in The Review for January 27, closed with a banquet at the Planters' hotel, a fine affair in which 150 guests and local florists participated. Mrs. David Scott Geddis distinguished herself by singing several selections with the excellent orchestra that furnished music through the evening. The tables were handsomely decorated with carnations from the exhibition hall. After cigars had been passed President-elect J. F. Ammann, the toastmaster, praised the heads of the local committees for the great work they accomplished and gave them full credit for the success of the meeting. He then called upon George Asmus, of Chicago, chairman of the National Flower Show committee. Mr. Asmus spoke in glowing terms of the show to be held in Philadelphia next month and urged all to attend.

President Joseph Hill spoke of this year's meeting as the best the society has ever held and said, from the comments of the other members, St. Louis can have the meeting whenever it wants it.

was next called on. Mr. Vesey said it was too early to talk of next year's show at Indianapolis, but promised the time of their lives to all who attend.

Wm. Nicholson, of Framingham, Mass., was called on and gave five minutes of good, sound talk on this and former exhibitions. One always can depend on Mr. Nicholson to be with the society whenever it holds its meeting.

The next speaker was Robert C. Kerr, of Houston, Tex., vice-president of the Society of American Florists. Mr. Kerr gave some good reasons why the members should attend this year's S. A. F. meeting at Houston. He spoke particularly of the Texas weather conditions in the good old summer time and cited the case of his friend, Philip Foley, who spent a month with him last summer and lost no weight. "Anyone coming to Houston next August," he said, "will find the cooling gulf breezes next to a summer resort and a good, big time is assured."

The Closing Day.

During the afternoon of the second day the visitors were taken in hand by the local committee for an automobile trip through the city, which ended at the Missouri Botanical Garden, where Manager W. W. Ohlweiler supplied guides for a tour through the garden, which was much enjoyed by all.

The Planters' hotel was never so crowded by St. Louis people as on the two days of the exhibition. The local retailers distributed 20,000 tickets to their customers, and, according to the visiting florists, it was the most successful meeting and exhibition the society has ever held.

THE BANQUET AT GLEN COVE.

The members and friends of the Nassau County Horticultural Society, to the number of seventy-five, assembled at the Oriental hotel, Glen Cove, January 25, to celebrate the society's tenth annual dinner. The tables were decorated with plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, Primula malacoides, freesias, narcissi, etc. Because of illness, President James MacDonald was absent, and Vice-president Joseph Adler presided. Mr. Adler made an address of welcome to the guests and members and asked each one to do his full share toward disposing of the dinner. His bidding was strictly carried out.

When the cigars were in order Mr. Adler introduced Charles H. Totty as toastmaster of the evening. Mr. Totty's anecdotes and verses were enjoyed by everyone. The first speaker called on by Mr. Totty was James Cox, supervisor of Nassau county, who ably responded to the toast, "Our Country."

The toast, "The Trade Press," was eloquently taken care of by W. Stewart, while J. Austin Shaw in his own inimitable manner fairly outdid himself in the response he made to "The Ladies." The seed trade was spoken for by J. A. Deamund, George Burnett, Wm. J. Collins and W. A. Sperling.

William Duckham responded for the Morris County Horticultural Society, and in the course of his remarks urged the support of our members at the International Flower Show, to be held in New York. Thomas Lee spoke for the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, and James Duthie for the Oyster Bay Horticultural Society. Other speakers were Charles McCarthy, Frank Browne, Lester Ortiz and John Davis. TULIP CASE DECIDED

DUTY CUT IN HALF.

Court Acts on Importer's Appeal.

For the future, or until an act of Congress makes a change, the duty on tulip bulbs will be 50 cents per thousand. The court of last resort has so decided.

The United States Court of Customs Appeals has rendered its decision in the case of the appeal of Maltus & Ware, of New York, from a decision of the Board of United States General Appraisers upholding the assessment of the collector of customs, who held certain tulip bulbs to be dutiable at the rate of $1 per thousand under the second clause of paragraph 210 of the Tariff Act of October 3, 1913. The importers claimed that the sixth clause thereof, known as the catch-all provision, providing a duty of 50 cents per thousand, was applicable to the importation.

Text of the Decision.

In a decision handed down by Judge Barber, the Court of Customs Appeals states:

"The determination of the issue requires not only an examination of paragraph 210 but its predecessor, paragraph 263 of the Act of 1909, as well, and we here insert them:

210. Orchids, palms, Azalea Indica, and cut flowers, preserved or fresh, 25 per centum ad valorem; lily of the valley pips, tulips, narcissus, begonia, and gloxinia bulbs, $1 per thousand; hyacinth bulbs, astilbe, dielytra, and lily of the valley clumps, $2.50 per thousand; lily bulbs and calla bulbs or corms, $5 per thousand; herbaceous peony, Iris Kaempferi or Germanica, canna, dahlia and amaryllis bulbs, $10 per thousand; all other bulbs, roots, root stocks, corms, and tubers, which are cultivated for their flowers or foliage, 50 cents per thousand; Provided, That all mature mother flowering bulbs imported exclusively for propagating purposes shall be admitted free of duty.

263. Orchids, palms, azaleas, and all other decorative or greenhouse plants and cut flowers, preserved or fresh, twenty-five per centum ad valorem; lily of the valley pips, tulip, narcissus, begonia, and gloxinia bulbs, $1 per thousand; hyacinth, astilbe, dielytra, and lily of the valley clumps, $2.50 per thousand; lily bulbs and calla bulbs, $5 per thousand; peony, Iris Kaempferi or Germanica, canna, dahlia, and amaryllis bulbs, $10 per thousand; all other bulbs, bulbous roots or corms which are cultivated for their flowers or foliage, 50 cents per thousand.

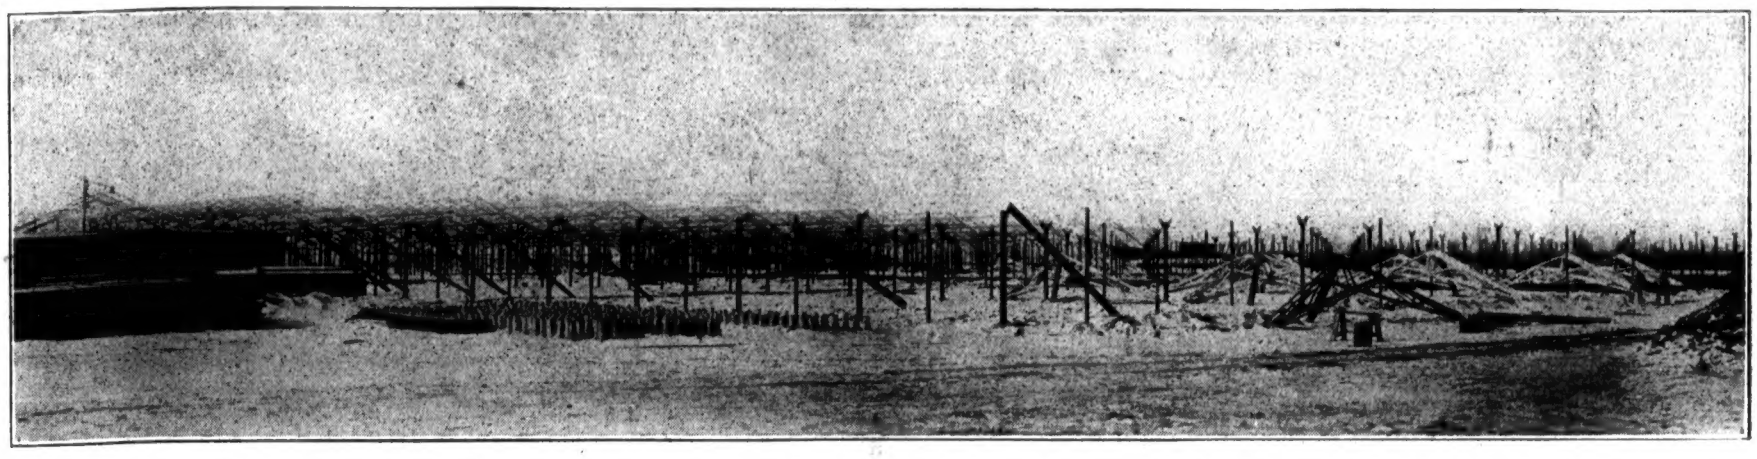
"At once it appears that there are in each of these two paragraphs six separate clauses providing for different rates of duty, while in the corresponding clauses the rates are the same. We are here interested mainly in a comparison of the second clauses respectively, because, if these tulip bulbs are not dutiable under that clause of paragraph 210, it seems to be conceded that the sixth clause thereof is applicable.

Grammatical Construction.

"In the earlier paragraph the second clause provided for 'lily of the valley pips, tulip, narcissus, begonia, and gloxinia bulbs,' while that clause of the paragraph now in force reads 'lily of the valley pips, tulips, narcissus, begonia, and gloxinia bulbs.' In the earlier statute the word tulip is grammatically an adjective modifier of bulbs, while in the latter paragraph the word tulips is not grammatically an adjective modifier, but is a noun, and the importer's claim here is founded wholly upon this change in the language of the two clauses.

"It is unnecessary to cite authorities to the proposition that the fact that the language of a statute is changed ordinarily presumes a legislative intent to correspondingly change preëxisting law, and, further, that unless a statute is ambiguous there is no occasion to invoke rules of construction. It must be understood and applied according to the natural import of the language employed. Accompanying this latter rule is another well recognized that, if construed in its ordinary meaning and grammatical construction, the application of the statute leads to manifest contradiction of the apparent purpose of the enactment or to absurdity, hardship, or injustice, not intended, the courts will, if the same is possible, interpret the language employed to avoid these consequences. Endlich On Interpretation of Statutes, section 295; United States v. Kirby, 74 U. S. 482; Church of Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457; Lau Ow Bew v. United States, 144 U. S. 47, 59; United States v. Riggs, 203 U. S. 136; Reide v. United States, 2 Ct. Cust. Appls. (T. D. 32166).

History of the Paragraph.



"The government here in effect urges that although grammatically construed the statute may warrant the importer's contention, nevertheless, in view of the history of the paragraph, its context and spirit, it should not be given that effect and suggests that the addition of the letter 's' to the word 'tulip' in the earlier clause was the result of a typographical error.

"It appears that when the tariff bill was first introduced in the House the paragraph of the act of 1913 under consideration was identical with paragraph 263 of the act of 1909 except that the letter 's' was added to tulip. Comparing the paragraph as introduced with the same as finally enacted, we find numerous changes have been made therein; words have been stricken out, others have been inserted or added, a proviso attached, and with respect to the duty rates, synonymous forms of expression have been employed. The only change made in the second clause, it is true, is the use of equivalent language for declaring the same rate of duty, but, in view of the fact that the entire paragraph was the subject of such careful consideration and close inspection, we cannot believe that the change from tulip to tulips was overlooked. When it is also considered that the paragraph, as a part of the bill, underwent various reprints in its legislative journey, the conclusion seems irresistible that the letter 's' was purposely introduced and deliberately retained.

"Neither are we at all clear that it can be said that the results consequent upon enforcing this clause according to its grammatical construction are such as to conflict with the spirit or context of the paragraph, are absurd, unjust, or presumably not intended. Under the earlier paragraph tulip bulbs fell within the second clause; under the latter they are relegated to the sixth clause and pay one-half the duty formerly assessed thereon and one-half the duty now assessed upon articles within the second clause. Congress may well have thought it a wise policy to change the classification of tulip bulbs in this manner and as to the wisdom of such policy we have no power to inquire. The context of the paragraph is adapted as well to the one as to the other construction, and it is also consistent therewith to impose upon tulips the rate of duty that was formerly assessed upon tulip bulbs.

Congress Had a Purpose?

"The whole issue and its determination may be summed up as follows: Congress has apparently deliberately substituted 'tulips,' the noun, for 'tulip,' the adjective, is presumed to have intended to do so, and no sufficient legal reason exists to justify the court in saying such was not the intent. No strained construction should be indulged unless clearly necessary to accomplish the execution of a congressional purpose, and where two constructions are equally probable that one should not be adopted which results in the imposition of the higher tax.

"In Breck v. United States, 2 Ct. Cust. Appeals 26 (T. D. 31576), an analogous question was considered, cases were examined and, quoting from Endlich on the Interpretation of the Statutes, it was said, 'It is a well settled rule of construction that the grammatical sense must be adopted unless there are within the statutes cogent reasons indicating a contrary intent upon the part of the lawmakers.'

"The judgment of the Board of United States General Appraisers is reversed."

Refunds Now in Order.

The effect of this decision by the court of last resort in such cases is to fix the duty on tulip bulbs hereafter imported during the life of the law at 50 cents per thousand.

A large number of protests have been filed and are pending awaiting this decision and it is to be presumed the Board of General Appraisers now will act on these protests in the light of the judgment of the court. This will open the way to claims for refund in each case in which a protest was filed before the date of the decision, but in no other.

NO BUDS ON BOUVARDIA.

I have a bed of bouvardias, from which I had a good cut at Christmas, but about one-half of the shoots are growing up to three feet in height and do not seem to set buds. Any information on this would be appreciated.

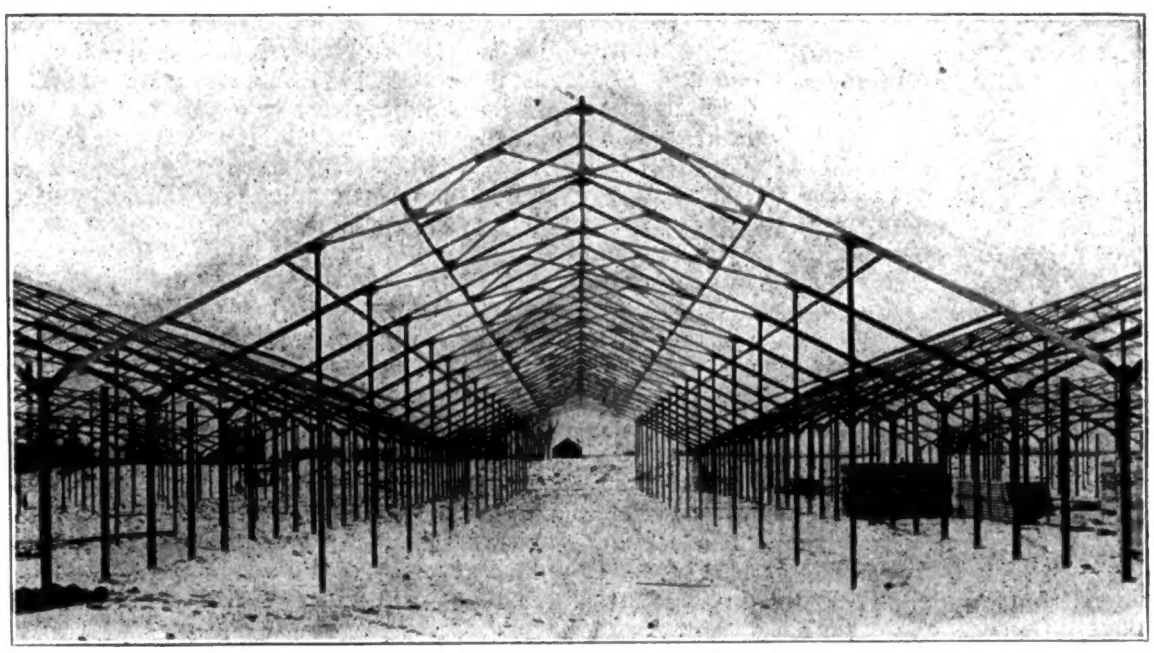
A. T. F.—R. I.

It not infrequently happens that bouvardias are left outdoors a little too late and that the embryo flower buds are destroyed in the ends of the shoots. It is not necessary for the temperature to fall as low as the freezing point to do this damage. Have you practiced reducing the number of shoots on your plants? If not, try it another year. Cut away all the weak shoots and you will be surprised how small a proportion of them fail to flower. C. W.

TIMING LILIES AND HYACINTHS.

What heat should we maintain at night for a new crop of giganteum lilies, after they have budded and have been placed on the bench, to bring them in for Easter? We have 10,000 hyacinths in pots. How long will it take them to flower from the time they are taken out of the ground, well rooted? What heat should be maintained at night? G. G.—S. C.

In South Carolina, Lilium giganteum wanted for Easter should now be in a night temperature of 60 degrees. This heat probably will bring them about right, although much depends on the weather from now on. If you can see the buds five weeks before Easter, a night temperature of 65 to 70 degrees will bring them on time and allow a few days to harden them off. If you can see the buds by March 1, 60 degrees at night will bring them on and they probably can be run much cooler the last two weeks.



Hyacinths, well rooted and brought into a night temperature of 60 degrees the first week of February—which is quite early enough for the first batch—will flower in twenty-one days. As the season advances they will take less time and less heat. To have them for Easter, allow them two weeks in a coldframe. Raise the sash one foot back and front and shade with hay to keep the plants cool. L.

THE AMLING PICTURES.

On this page are reproduced the first photographs of the new range of the A. F. Amling Co., Maywood, Ill. This is the largest building project thus far reported this season. There are nine steel frame connected houses each 44x550, nine feet to the gutters and twenty feet to the ridge. Material is being supplied and erection done by the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., which booked the contract November 22 and expects to turn over the completed range, ready for planting, early in March.

One of the illustrations is a bird's-eye view of the job after the posts had been set and while the steel was going up. At the left in this picture can be seen the end of one of the buildings erected to house the workmen employed on the job. The other view shows the detail of the framing.

John Johnstone spoke for the Nassau County Horticultural Society and said that among other things which the society was proud of was that one of its members, John W. Everitt, has had the honor of being president of the National Association of Gardeners.

The toast, "The Trade Press," was eloquently taken care of by W. Stewart, while J. Austin Shaw in his own inimitable manner fairly outdid himself in the response he made to "The Ladies." The seed trade was spoken for by J. A. Deamund, George Burnett, Wm. J. Collins and W. A. Sperling.

William Duckham responded for the Morris County Horticultural Society, and in the course of his remarks urged the support of our members at the International Flower Show, to be held in New York. Thomas Lee spoke for the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, and James Duthie for the Oyster Bay Horticultural Society. Other speakers were Charles McCarthy, Frank Browne, Lester Ortiz and John Davis. A pleasant feature of the evening was the presentation of a pair of gold cuff buttons to Ernest Westlake, in appreciation of his efficient services as president of the society during the last year.

TULIP CASE DECIDED

DUTY CUT IN HALF.

Court Acts on Importer's Appeal.

For the future, or until an act of Congress makes a change, the duty on tulip bulbs will be 50 cents per thousand. The court of last resort has so decided.

The United States Court of Customs Appeals has rendered its decision in the case of the appeal of Maltus & Ware, of New York, from a decision of the Board of United States General Appraisers upholding the assessment of the collector of customs, who held certain tulip bulbs should be at the rate of $1 per thousand under the second clause of paragraph 210 of the Tariff Act of 1913. The importers claimed that the sixth clause, known as the "bulb" provision, providing a duty of 50 cents per thousand, was applicable to the importation.

Text of the Decision.

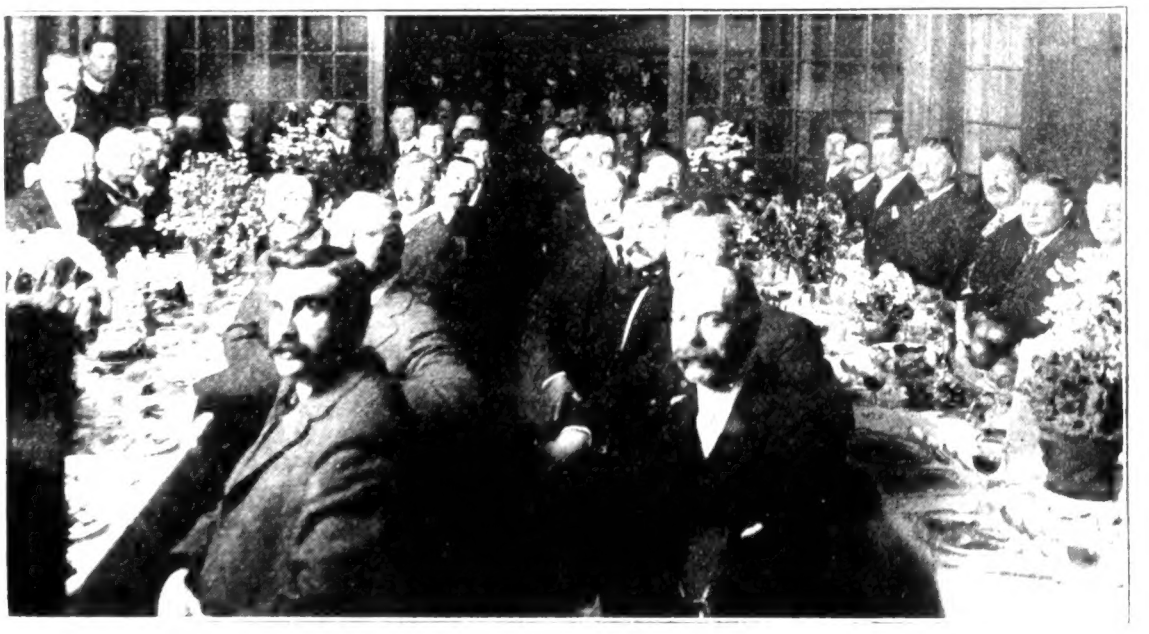
In a brief handed down by Judge Barber, the Court of Customs Appeals states:

"The determination of the issue requires not only an examination of paragraph 210 of the present tariff act, but also of paragraph 263 of the Act of 1909, as well, and we give them:

Azalea, lily of the valley pips, tulip, narcissus, begonia, and gloxinia bulbs, and other bulbs, roots, and tubers, not specially provided for in this paragraph, 20 per centum ad valorem.

Lily of the valley pips, tulips, narcissus, begonia, and gloxinia bulbs, 50 cents per thousand.

"In the earlier paragraph the second clause provided for 'lily of the valley pips, tulip, narcissus, begonia, and gloxinia bulbs,' while that clause of the paragraph now in force reads 'lily of the valley pips, tulips, narcissus, begonia, and gloxinia bulbs.' In the earlier statute the word tulip is grammatically an adjective modifier of bulbs, while in the latter paragraph the word tulips is not grammatically an adjective modifier, but is a noun, and the importer's claim here is founded wholly upon this change in the language of the two clauses.



"It is unnecessary to cite authorities to the proposition that the fact that the language of a statute is changed ordinarily presumes a legislative intent to correspondingly change preëxisting law, and, further, that unless a statute is ambiguous there is no occasion to invoke rules of construction. It must be understood and applied according to the natural import of the language employed. Accompanying this latter rule is another well recognized that, if construed in its ordinary meaning and grammatical construction, the application of the statute leads to manifest contradiction of the apparent purpose of the enactment or to absurdity, hardship, or injustice, not intended, the courts will, if the same is possible, interpret the language employed to avoid these consequences. Endlich On Interpretation of Statutes, section 295; United States v. Kirby, 74 U. S. 482; Church of Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457; Lau Ow Bew v. United States, 144 U. S. 47, 59; United States v. Riggs, 203 U. S. 136; Reide v. United States, 2 Ct. Cust. Appls. (T. D. 32166).

History of the Paragraph.

"The government here in effect urges that although grammatically construed the statute may warrant the importer's contention, nevertheless, in view of the history of the paragraph, its context and spirit, it should not be given that effect and suggests that the addition of the letter 's' to the word 'tulip' in the earlier clause was the result of a typographical error.

"It appears that when the tariff bill was first introduced in the House the paragraph of the act of 1913 under consideration was identical with paragraph 263 of the act of 1909 except that the letter 's' was added to tulip. Comparing the paragraph as introduced with the same as finally enacted, we find numerous changes have been made therein; words have been stricken out, others have been inserted or added, a proviso attached, and with respect to the duty rates, synonymous forms of expression have been employed. The only change made in the second clause, it is true, is the use of equivalent language for declaring the same rate of duty, but, in view of the fact that the entire paragraph was the subject of such careful consideration and close inspection, we cannot believe that the change from tulip to tulips was overlooked. When it is also considered that the paragraph, as a part of the bill, underwent various reprints in its legislative journey, the conclusion seems irresistible that the letter 's' was purposely introduced and deliberately retained.

"Neither are we at all clear that it can be said that the results consequent upon enforcing this clause according to its grammatical construction are such as to conflict with the spirit or context of the paragraph, are absurd, unjust, or presumably not intended. Under the earlier paragraph tulip bulbs fell within the second clause; under the latter they are relegated to the sixth clause and pay one-half the duty formerly assessed thereon and one-half the duty now assessed upon articles within the second clause. Congress may well have thought it a wise policy to change the classification of tulip bulbs in this manner and as to the wisdom of such policy we have no power to inquire. The context of the paragraph is adapted as well to the one as to the other construction, and it is also consistent therewith to impose upon tulips the rate of duty that was formerly assessed upon tulip bulbs.

Congress Had a Purpose?

"The whole issue and its determination may be summed up as follows: Congress has apparently deliberately substituted 'tulips,' the noun, for 'tulip,' the adjective, is presumed to have intended to do so, and no sufficient legal reason exists to justify the court in saying such was not the intent. No strained construction should be indulged unless clearly necessary to accomplish the execution of a congressional purpose, and where two constructions are equally probable that one should not be adopted which results in the imposition of the higher tax.

"In Breck v. United States, 2 Ct. Cust. Appeals 26 (T. D. 31576), an analogous question was considered, cases were examined and, quoting from Endlich on the Interpretation of the Statutes, it was said, 'It is a well settled rule of construction that the grammatical sense must be adopted unless there are within the statutes cogent reasons indicating a contrary intent upon the part of the lawmakers.'

"The judgment of the Board of United States General Appraisers is reversed."

Refunds Now in Order.

The effect of this decision by the court of last resort in such cases is to fix the duty on tulip bulbs hereafter imported during the life of the law at 50 cents per thousand.

A large number of protests have been filed and are pending awaiting this decision and it is to be presumed the Board of General Appraisers now will act on these protests in the light of the judgment of the court. This will open the way to claims for refund in each case in which a protest was filed before the date of the decision, but in no other.

NO BUDS ON BOUVARDIA.

I have a bed of bouvardias, from which I had a good cut at Christmas, but about one-half of the shoots are growing up to three feet in height and do not seem to set buds. Any information on this would be appreciated.

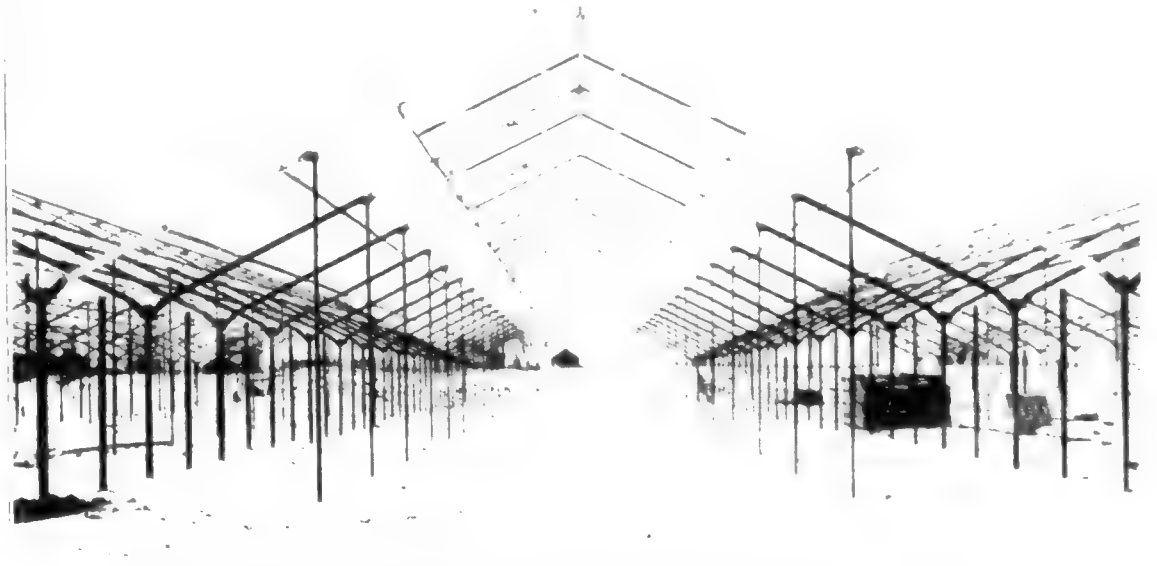
A. T. F.—R. I.

It not infrequently happens that bouvardias are left outdoors a little too late and that the embryo flower buds are destroyed in the ends of the shoots. It is not necessary for the temperature to fall as low as the freezing point to do this damage. Have you practiced reducing the number of shoots on your plants? If not, try it another year. Cut away all the weak shoots and you will be surprised how small a proportion of them fail to flower. C. W.

TIMING LILIES AND HYACINTHS.

What heat should we maintain at night for a new crop of giganteum lilies, after they have budded and have been placed on the bench, to bring them in for Easter? We have 10,000 hyacinths in pots. How long will it take them to flower from the time they are taken out of the ground, well rooted? What heat should be maintained at night? G. G.—S. C.

In South Carolina, Lilium giganteum wanted for Easter should now be in a night temperature of 60 degrees. This heat probably will bring them about right, although much depends on the weather from now on. If you can see the buds five weeks before Easter, a night temperature of 65 to 70 degrees will bring them on time and allow a few days to harden them off. If you can see the buds by March 1, 60 degrees at night will bring them on and they probably can be run much cooler the last two weeks.



Hyacinths, well rooted and brought into a night temperature of 60 degrees the first week of February—which is quite early enough for the first batch—will flower in twenty-one days. EUONYMUS FOR CHRISTMAS.

During the Christmas holidays in this locality, northwestern South Carolina, the outdoor Euonymus Japonica formed a picture not readily forgotten by those interested in berry-bearing plants. There were hundreds of old bushes and hedges that were a perfect glow of color, fairly outrivaling the holly. A few days before Christmas a lady came to me with an armful of the euonymus branches and wished to know the name of the plant. She remarked that she had been born and reared in the south, but could not remember having ever before seen anything so beautiful. She asked me to go with her to see an old hedge of this euonymus, growing in front of a negro's shanty. It surely was a beautiful sight. She asked the old negro "mammy" how long the bushes had been growing there. The reply was: "Sure, Honey, dey's been dar ebber since the days of freedom" —referring, of course, to the Civil war.

Any florist who could put these plants on the market, berried as they have been in this vicinity, could sell them faster than they could be produced, and no salesman would be required to dispose of them; they would sell themselves. The great curse of the euonymus is its liability to be infested with scale, but, starting with clean stock, it is not a difficult matter to keep this pest under control. H. J. Corfield.

LIME-SULPHUR FOR STEM-ROT.

In response to Isaac A. Passmore's request in The Review of January 12 for further details on the use of lime and sulphur for stem-rot of carnations, I want to say that I covered everything in my article of November 11, 1915, on page 38, under the title of "Stem-rot and Other Diseases." At that time I said I had not lost one plant out of 5,000 and that none of them was diseased in any way. At this later date I can again say that out of the 5,000 plants in the benches not one have I lost, nor have any of them showed a sign of any disease. They are all in strong growth and have been blooming all winter, and are full of buds and blooms now.

I am a great believer in lime in the soil for carnations. I learned this when William Scott was the leading pink; Daybreak, the light pink; Lizzie McGowan, the white; Portia, the red. The way I discovered the use of lime was peculiar. There is an old Indian mound near my former place and this mound is at least one-third oyster and clam shells. Plants grown in the soil of this mound made a much stronger growth and the stems of weak-stemmed varieties were stiffened. I decided that it was the lime in the soil. I limed a part of a bench for experiment. In the course of two or three weeks there was such a marked improvement that the plants limed appeared to be a different variety. Since then I add a four-inch potful of hydrated lime to a large barrow-load of soil, which is thoroughly mixed. Air-slaked lime is not as beneficial as the hydrated.

When transplanting to the field in early spring, I use hydrated lime on the soil at the rate of about 1,500 pounds to the acre. After the ground has been spaded or plowed, the lime is applied and thoroughly raked or harrowed in.

When lifting in the fall, I dip the tops of the plants in a fungicide prepared as follows: Put twenty-five pounds of quicklime in a 50-gallon barrel; add enough water to slake, and while it is boiling add ten pounds of flowers of sulphur. Keep this well stirred with a shovel or paddle until it is thoroughly slaked; then fill up the barrel with water and stir thoroughly again. Then let it settle and it will form a golden-colored liquid. Use one part of this liquid to one part of water. For mildew on roses and all fungous diseases, I spray the foliage and the ground around the plants, as well as the plants in the houses, with this solution. Dipping field-grown plants in this fungicide kills all red spider and the spores of most of the diseases that the carnation is heir to.

This liquid will not evaporate in the barrel, as it forms a scum over the top. After using the first mixture, fill the barrel again with water and stir thoroughly. After it has settled, use the resulting liquid clear, not adding any water.

My theory is that lime is a preventive of stem-rot and kindred diseases and that the dipping of the plants in the lime-sulphur solution not only kills red spider, but also the spores of any of the fungoid diseases that the carnation is heir too. Geo. N. Tyler.

CATERPILLARS ON CINERARIAS.

I am sending some small gray moths which fly around my greenhouse at night; also, small green worms which are found on the under side of the leaves of my cinerarias and other plants. Last fall these worms destroyed foliage and some blooms on chrysanthemums. The worms are extremely small at first, growing to one-half inch in length and forming a cobweb-like nest on the under side of the leaves. I have tried strong nicotine, also Slug Shot, with no apparent effect. Can you tell me what they are and how to get rid of them?

E. S. H.—N. Y.

These moths can be caught in considerable numbers if you will hang sticky fly papers here and there in your house. Fumigation has no effect on the caterpillars which commonly attack chrysanthemums, cinerarias and some other plants. Nicotine juice sprayed on the foliage will often kill these, but the safest remedy is to go over the affected leaves and squeeze the worms between the finger and thumb. The worm is probably the same one which often attacks lettuce. Pyrethrum powder mixed with flour has been found efficacious as a remedy if dusted on the foliage. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Allamandas.

Plants of A. Williamsi or A. Hendersoni which have been resting for some time should be pruned back now and sprayed freely, but watered moderately until they start to break, at which time necessary top-dressing or potting can be done. A. Hendersoni is a splendid climber. A. Williamsi, with smaller flowers, makes either a climber or bush plant. For the latter purpose it is most valuable, flowering profusely in the hot summer months when flowering pot plants are scarce.

Heliotropes.

Heliotropes can be propagated easily from either cuttings or seed. Recently there has been an increased call for standard heliotropes. These are excellent, either for pot and tub culture or bedding out, using low growing plants beneath them. Seedling heliotropes make the best standards, possessing, as they do, more vigor than cuttings. Keep the seedlings potted on, selecting the most vigorous for standards. Keep them staked and run them up without pinching until they have a sufficient length of stem, which may be anywhere from eighteen to thirty-six inches long. Rub off all side shoots as they appear and, after pinching out the top, as the shoots break away pinch them before they come into flower. It takes a year or more to develop good standards, but they can be kept for several years and always command a good figure.

Rambler Roses.

It is now about three months to Easter and if the rambler roses wanted in bloom at that time are housed now and started fairly cool, 45 to 50 degrees at night, and later given 55 degrees at night, they will be on time. Cut out all dead and weak wood and bend around the strong leaves so that they will break more evenly. Each grower has his own favorite varieties, but half a dozen good sorts are Tausendschon, Hiawatha, Lady Gay, Dorothy Perkins, Excelsa and American Pillar. If a white is wanted, try White Dorothy, but colored varieties sell much better for Easter.

Buddleia Asiatica.

Anyone who has not yet grown Buddleia Asiatica should do so. To have it at its best grow it fairly cool, about 50 degrees at night; then the pure white racemes possess more substance. This is a most graceful plant and one of such easy culture that no one need be afraid to try it. From cuttings put in now—which root as easily as heliotropes—strong plants in 8-inch or 9-inch pots can be had in flower next January. Cuttings put in as late as September will make nice little plants in 4-inch or 5-inch pots.

Bouvardia Humboldtii.

In order to propagate Bouvardia Humboldtii, the popular, sweet-scented, pure white bouvardia, prune back one or two of the old plants which have been resting and place them in a warm, moist house. The plants will soon throw out a fine crop of succulent cuttings. Rub these off with a heel and insert in a warm cutting bench. They will soon root and can be potted on in a warm house, gradually hardened and planted outdoors early in June. Eight or ten weeks in a well prepared piece of land will give you quite nice plants the first season. While most of the bouvardias are best if propagated from root cuttings, B. Humboldtii is an exception.

CALLAS NOT FLOWERING.

My callas were planted in solid beds and were partly dried off after last season's growth. These were started about August 15 and have made fine, strong, healthy growth, but do not send up any flower stalks. The night temperature is 52 degrees. Can you tell me the cause of the trouble?

G. K.—Ill.

Your plants have too much root run and for that reason will not flower freely early in the season, like pot-grown ones. I do not know what you can do to hurry along the flowering. You will have to wait until the plants are heavily rooted and you will probably get lots of flowers in late winter and spring. Another year try your callas in pots and they will start to bloom in October and continue until early summer. Three tubers in each 8-inch pot will give fine results. Feed with fine bone as a top-dressing, in addition to using liquid manure, and you will get a wonderful crop of flowers.

C. W.

A COMBINATION WREATH.

If men in general are known by the company they keep, a florist is as surely known, in many cases, by the character and financial standing of the patrons he keeps—or fails to keep.

Customers of small means may have to be satisfied sometimes with inferior flowers or designs, or at least they must accept the floral "seconds" with as good grace as possible if they have not enough money to purchase anything better. If beggars must not be choosers, neither must buyers be choosers beyond the limits prescribed by their pocketbooks. If they cannot afford to deal with the florist who furnishes first-class stock, arranged with exquisite artistic discrimination, they must needs go to a second-class florist and buy second-class wares—unless, perchance, they find one of those resourceful florists who cater successfully to "all sorts and conditions of men."

But wealthy people are not under the necessity of trading with any florist who has not established the right sort of reputation. If they are willing and able to pay for the best, they will go to the florist who can supply the best.

There seems to be reason, then, for drawing a fairly positive inference in regard to the character of the flowers and designs furnished by A. Kottmiller, of New York city. The Review of November 25 contained a picture of a wreath that was made by Mr. Kottmiller for the tomb of C. P. Morosini, a partner of Jay Gould, and the illustration on this page shows another wreath that was prepared by Mr. Kottmiller for one of the leading families of his big and rich city. The character of such patronage is a testimony to the character of his merchandise.

In the present case, however, the wreath speaks for itself, and speaks convincingly, as the picture is clear enough to do a fair degree of justice to the original. The flowers used are orchids and valley, and they are so arranged as to form what is designated as a "combination father and mother wreath," ordered in memory of the parents.

TESTING CANNAS IN TENNESSEE.

Selecting Good Varieties.

We decided this season to make a fairly complete test of cannas in our grounds in the vicinity of Nashville, Tenn., so that we could be sure we were growing the best, and so that our customers could come to our place and make their selections for next year's planting. One of our neighbors, an amateur grower, decided to make a test also, and he grew the few commercial varieties not in our fields. This makes our test pretty complete, and as our summer was unusually cool, with no excess of rain, the results ought to tally pretty closely with those obtained in the north.

We used ordinary garden soil, naturally a heavy clay, which had been manured pretty well in the past, but was not manured this season. It was convenient to use plenty of water and this was done. My neighbor used similar soil that had been heavily fertilized with stable manure. His plants showed rather better growth than ours, but produced no better blooms.

It is my purpose to state our results with some of the newer and more widely advertised varieties, whether they have been a success or not, and then to give our decision as to the best varieties of each color for general use. Varieties that have no especial merit above other varieties of the same general color and height will not be mentioned. Unfortunately, neither of us was able to secure either Blanche Wintzer or the three Dreer novelties, as we got our orders in after these were sold out. I mention this so that no one may conclude that they have done poorly with us. We have not seen them.

The cannas under my care were all started in the greenhouse and were set in the field about the middle of May. Some were set during the first part of May, but not many were ready at that time. My neighbor planted only dry roots, in the first few days of May. We can see no difference in results in any way. The quantities varied from only one of some of the 1915 novelties to 500 or 1,000 of some of the varieties we handle in the largest quantities. But the conditions have been exactly the same throughout.

Desirable White Sorts.

Mont Blanc Improved grew poorly and gave inferior blooms in the first part of the season, but in the last three months of the season the plants were vigorous, growing fully four feet tall and producing a constant show of practically white flowers in good, large heads, held well above the foliage. This is so much better than any of the other whites that no other will bear comparison with it, except Flag of Truce.

Flag of Truce is the best in a way that we have in our test. It is more nearly white than the most faded Alsace; in fact, it is almost equal to Mont Blanc Improved at its best. It is faintly dotted with pink, especially toward the center. Of course the dots are not seen at a distance of two or three feet. But the color is not the great thing with this canna. It is one of the most vigorous growers we have, having thrown nineteen shoots by the middle of September, though started as a small 3-inch pot plant. The plant reached a height of six feet and has not shown fewer than three heads of bloom since June. The flowers are large, measuring from five to five and one-half inches in diameter without spreading the petals, or from six to six and one-half inches across with the petals straightened out. The petals are fully two and one-half inches broad. This means a flower as large as the best King Humbert. The foliage is green, large and luxuriant. The spikes have all branched into four good bloom heads, and the heads are as large as those of the largest red varieties.

Various Shades of Pink.

Mrs. Alfred Conard has been a mass of the most exquisite watermelon-pink flowers of the largest size, all summer. The heads are large. The plant lacks somewhat in vigor and so needs good care. It has scarcely made four feet in height. We showed a vase of the blooms at an educational convention recently, and the color was so unusual that few recognized them as canna blooms. It will not be cheap for a while yet, as it is a somewhat shy multiplier.

Canna rosea gigantea is a counterpart of Mrs. Alfred Conard, as nearly as two cannas could be counterparts, all but color. It is a bright, handsome carmine pink, and so different from Mrs. Conard in color that there will always be a difference of opinion as to which is the more beautiful.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson is a tall, strong-growing canna, with an abundance of green leaves and enormous heads of large flowers, resembling rosea gigantea in color, only a shade more nearly carmine. There are not a dozen varieties in our test that have made more shoots or more blooms. Where a canna five feet or more in height is desired, it cannot be excelled in its color.

Maid of Orleans is one of the most beautiful cannas we have ever seen. Even if it did not bloom, it is worth growing for its exquisite green foliage, the most beautiful of all canna foliage. The flowers are of the largest, and the color is a mottling of cream and crab-apple-blossom pink. It grows four and one-half feet or a little more in height. Its only fault is that it is somewhat shy in blooming.

Loveliness is a dwarf canna that is only of value as a border for other cannas, or where it is desired to have plenty of beautiful blooms with plants that will not reach a height of over three feet. The flowers are large, and if there is such a thing as a ruby pink, it is seen in this canna. It is one of the varieties that never fail to be singled out for comment. The foliage is green.

Wabash is one of the ten or twelve cannas that can easily be called the best. In foliage it is equal to any of the bronzes. Its constitution is vigorous and the height is just right, five feet with us. It is a free producer of extra large flowers, carried well above the foliage, and the color is one of the best carmine pinks. It has been called a bronze-leaved rosea gigantea, but it is better and larger than that variety and much more vigorous.

Pocahontas is a taller and more vigorous Wabash, and better than that variety if possible. The color is not quite identical, but one would not need both. As soon as it is cheap enough, it will be the best pink canna with bronze foliage. It is one of the most rapid multipliers we have ever seen.

Duke of York, Jennie Walls, Fahnline, Lorraine Improved and Minnehaha are a real surprise to all who see them. They are similar in appearance, and I doubt if the average grower needs more than one. All are free, have large flowers and good foliage, and are as beautiful as the most fancy roses. All are to be classed as exquisite peach-pink, mottled with white or cream. They are not so gorgeous as some of the reds or yellows in large beds, but where real beauty is desired they cannot be beat.

Many Rivals in Red.

There are two new reds that are rivals for the place of the best red canna with green foliage; namely, Firebird and Wintzer's Colossal. Each is a wonder in its own way, but each has serious weaknesses. The flowers are not far from the same size, about seven to eight inches across. Colossal has the wider petals, but that is its one weakness. The flowers are so heavy that they do not stand out when wide open, but hang over. Firebird has strong, stiff petals, that stand out so that the flowers show their full size. Were the individual flowers to settle the matter, it is easily the superior of the two. But Colossal is a free bloomer, has plenty of good foliage and appears to be a good doer in every way. Firebird, on the contrary, is rather shy in blooming, and it has poor foliage and not enough of it. It will never endure neglect. As the matter stands, we do not consider either to be the best red canna for the ordinary grower. We have succeeded in seeding Firebird this year and hope to get something good from the seed. Colossal has not seeded with us, and we fear we shall not be able to get it to do so. Firebird blooms on Colossal plants would be about ideal. B.

FLOWERS FOR MOTHERS' DAY.

What bulbs or seeds can be started now in a night temperature of 50 degrees in order to have bloom for Mothers' day? Would gladiolus bulbs do, and which size should be planted, first or second? R. H. W.—Ohio.

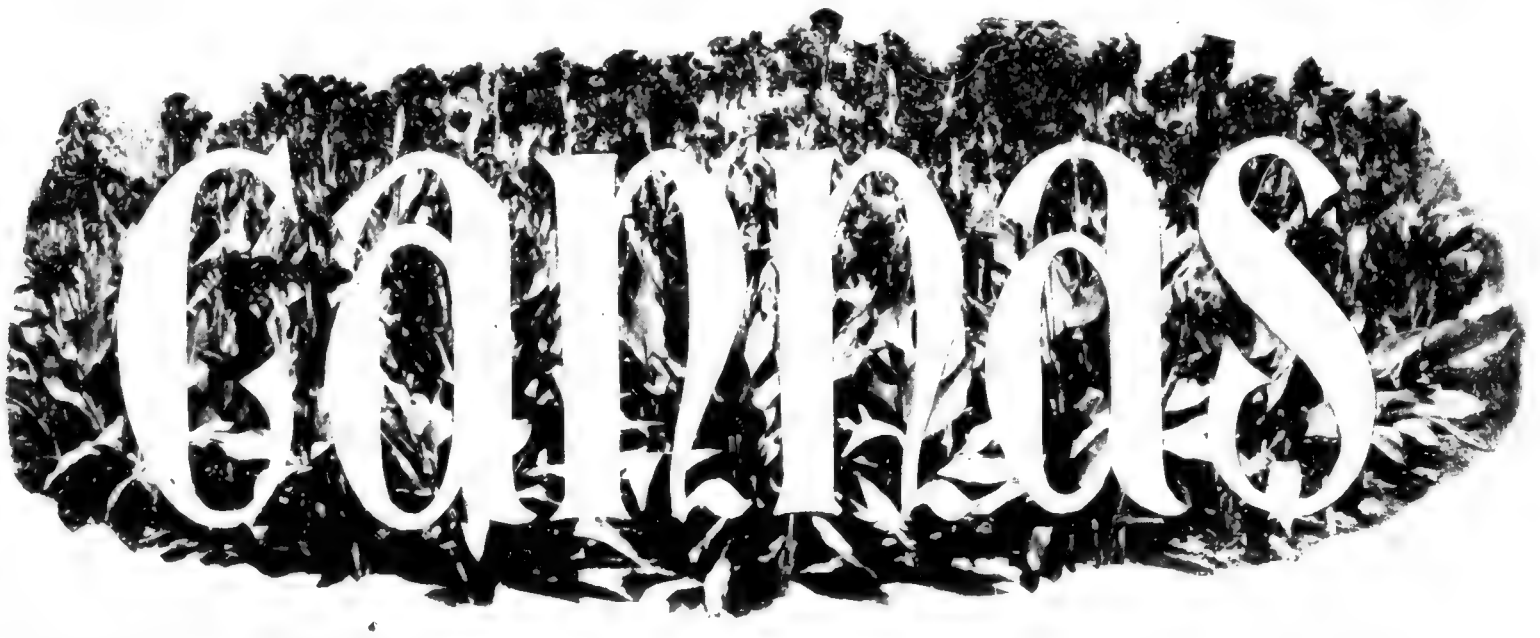
Such gladioli as Peace, May, Augusta, Mrs. Francis King, Brenchleyensis, America, etc., if planted in a night temperature of 50 degrees, would come in flower, or at least a good many of them, for Mothers' day. Seeds of ten weeks' stocks will produce flowers at the same time. Pot off the seedlings and later bench them. Annual larkspurs, candytuft, calendulas and Dimorphotheca aurantiaca are other crops you could get from seed. I would advise first size gladiolus bulbs, as these will give the finest spikes. C. W.

MR. CRAIG GOES VISITING.

I recently called on Littlefield & Wyman, of North Abington, Mass., to see their new carnation, Miss Theo, at home. Having grown a small batch of this variety a year ago, I had a good opinion of it. This was emphasized when I saw some thousands of it at home. The color is a pure rose pink, without a trace of magenta. It is wonderfully free-flowering and I did not notice a single burst calyx. It is an easy propagator. There is no other carnation of this color which can at all approach it in floriferousness. It is not a big, fancy flower, but when one can see as many as six open flowers on a single plant in January it shows that it is a money-maker. There is little wonder that it has become popular in Boston.

Seedling No. 44, shrimp pink in color, which scored eighty-seven points at Buffalo last year, is a splendid variety. The color is better than that of Enchantress. It is a double flower, but the stout calyx holds it together finely. A large batch of this is grown. A seedling of medium size, similar in color to Prosperity, is a wonderful bloomer. Up to January 1 it had produced nine and one-half flowers per square foot. Several other promising seedlings were noted.

Of the standard varieties, Matchless, White Wonder and White Perfection are grown, but the last named will be dropped. Beacon proves superior to Champion as a scarlet. Fenn still holds sway as a crimson, Benora as variegated, and Alice is grown in preference to Pink Delight.



In addition to carnations, one house is devoted to Godfrey callas in pots, which bloom with great freedom. Among sweet peas Yarrawa loomed up strongly. A large business is done in nursery stock, evergreens being a specialty. I noticed a grand batch of Daphne Cneorum, many of the plants of immense size. W. N. Craig.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

THOMAS J. WOLFE.

IT has been said of Tom Wolfe that he was born in England, raised in India, turned out to grass in Texas, dehorned at Beaumont and domesticated at Waco. At any rate, big, broad-gauge, up-standing men as so many of those Texans are, Wolfe is a leader among them—and one of the most likable fellows you meet. He was born in England, September 19, 1870, but spent his boyhood in the British East Indies. It was in 1890 that the family came to America, locating in Texas, first at Beaumont and later at Waco, where the father established a florists' business in 1892 and the son became a builder. But the responsibilities of the greenhouses fell on the son when the father died, in 1904. Incorporated in 1913, Wolfe now has one of the largest ranges of glass in the Lone Star state.

TESTING CANNAS IN TENNESSEE.

Selecting Good Varieties.

We decided this season to make a fairly complete test of cannas in our grounds in the vicinity of Nashville, Tenn., so that we could be sure we were growing the best, and so that our customers could come to our place and make their selections for next year's planting. One of our neighbors, an amateur grower, decided to make a test also, and he grew the few commercial varieties not in our fields. This makes our test pretty complete, and as our summer was unusually cool, with no excess of rain, the results ought to tally pretty closely with those obtained in the north.

We used ordinary garden soil, naturally a heavy clay, which had been manured pretty well in the past, but was not manured this season. It was convenient to use plenty of water and this was done. My neighbor used similar soil that had been heavily fertilized with stable manure. His plants showed rather better growth than ours, but produced no better blooms.

It is my purpose to state our results with some of the newer and more widely advertised varieties, whether they have been a success or not, and then to give our decision as to the best varieties of each color for general use. Varieties that have no especial merit above other varieties of the same general color and height will not be mentioned. Unfortunately, neither of us was able to secure either Blanche Wintzer or the three Dreer novelties, as we got our orders in after these were sold out. I mention this so that no one may conclude that they have done poorly with us. We have not seen them.

The cannas under my care were all started in the greenhouse and were set in the field about the middle of May. Some were set during the first part of May, but not many were ready at that time. My neighbor planted only dry roots, in the first few days of May. We can see no difference in results in any way. The quantities varied from only one of some of the 1915 novelties to 500 or 1,000 of some of the varieties we handle in the largest quantities. But the conditions have been exactly the same throughout.

Desirable White Sorts.

Mont Blanc Improved grew poorly and gave inferior blooms in the first part of the season, but in the last three months of the season the plants were vigorous, growing fully four feet tall and producing a constant show of practically white flowers in good, large heads, held well above the foliage. This is so much better than any of the other whites that no other will bear comparison with it, except Flag of Truce.

Flag of Truce is the best in a way that we have in our test. It is more nearly white than the most faded Alsace; in fact, it is almost equal to Mont Blanc Improved at its best. It is faintly dotted with pink, especially toward the center. Of course the dots are not seen at a distance of two or three feet. But the color is not the great thing with this canna. It is one of the most vigorous growers we have, having thrown nineteen shoots by the middle of September, though started as a small 3-inch pot plant. The plant reached a height of six feet and has not shown fewer than three heads of bloom since June. The flowers are large, measuring from five to five and one-half inches in diameter without spreading the petals, or from six to six and one-half inches across with the petals straightened out. The petals are fully two and one-half inches broad. This means a flower as large as the best King Humbert. The foliage is green, large and luxuriant. The spikes have all branched into four good bloom heads, and the heads are as large as those of the largest red varieties.

Various Shades of Pink.

Mrs. Alfred Conard has been a mass of the most exquisite watermelon-pink flowers of the largest size, all summer. The heads are large. The plant lacks somewhat in vigor and so needs good care. It has scarcely made four feet in height. We showed a vase of the blooms at an educational convention recently, and the color was so unusual that few recognized them as canna blooms. It will not be cheap for a while yet, as it is a somewhat shy multiplier.

Canna rosea gigantea is a counterpart of Mrs. Alfred Conard, as nearly as two cannas could be counterparts, all but color. It is a bright, handsome carmine pink, and so different from Mrs. Conard in color that there will always be a difference of opinion as to which is the more beautiful.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson is a tall, strong-growing canna, with an abundance of green leaves and enormous heads of large flowers, resembling rosea gigantea in color, only a shade more nearly carmine. There are not a dozen varieties in our test that have made more shoots or more blooms. Where a canna five feet or more in height is desired, it cannot be excelled in its color.

Maid of Orleans is one of the most beautiful cannas we have ever seen. Even if it did not bloom, it is worth growing for its exquisite green foliage, the most beautiful of all canna foliage. The flowers are of the largest, and the color is a mottling of cream and crab-apple-blossom pink. It grows four and one-half feet or a little more in height. Its only fault is that it is somewhat shy in blooming.

Loveliness is a dwarf canna that is only of value as a border for other cannas, or where it is desired to have plenty of beautiful blooms with plants that will not reach a height of over three feet. The flowers are large, and if there is such a thing as a ruby pink, it is seen in this canna. It is one of the varieties that never fail to be singled out for comment. The foliage is green.

Wabash is one of the ten or twelve cannas that can easily be called the best. In foliage it is equal to any of the bronzes. Its constitution is vigorous and the height is just right, five feet with us. It is a free producer of extra large flowers, carried well above the foliage, and the color is one of the best carmine pinks. It has been called a bronze-leaved rosea gigantea, but it is better and larger than that variety and much more vigorous.

Pocahontas is a taller and more vigorous Wabash, and better than that variety if possible. The color is not quite identical, but one would not need both. As soon as it is cheap enough, it will be the best pink canna with bronze foliage. It is one of the most rapid multipliers we have ever seen.

Duke of York, Jennie Walls, Fahnline, Lorraine Improved and Minnehaha are a real surprise to all who see them. They are similar in appearance, and I doubt if the average grower needs more than one. All are free, have large flowers and good foliage, and are as beautiful as the most fancy roses. All are to be classed as exquisite peach-pink, mottled with white or cream. They are not so gorgeous as some of the reds or yellows in large beds, but where real beauty is desired they cannot be beat.

Many Rivals in Red.

There are two new reds that are rivals for the place of the best red canna with green foliage; namely, Firebird and Wintzer's Colossal. Each is a wonder in its own way, but each has serious weaknesses. The flowers are not far from the same size, about seven to eight inches across. Colossal has the wider petals, but that is its one weakness. The flowers are so heavy that they do not stand out when wide open, but hang over. Firebird has strong, stiff petals, that stand out so that the flowers show their full size. Were the individual flowers to settle the matter, it is easily the superior of the two. But Colossal is a free bloomer, has plenty of good foliage and appears to be a good doer in every way. Firebird, on the contrary, is rather shy in blooming, and it has poor foliage and not enough of it. It will never endure neglect. As the matter stands, we do not consider either to be the best red canna for the ordinary grower. We have succeeded in seeding Firebird this year and hope to get something good from the seed. Colossal has not seeded with us, and we fear we shall not be able to get it to do so. Firebird blooms on Colossal plants would be about ideal. B.

FLOWERS FOR MOTHERS' DAY.

What bulbs or seeds can be started now in a night temperature of 50 degrees in order to have bloom for Mothers' day? Would gladiolus bulbs do, and which size should be planted, first or second? R. H. W.—Ohio.

Such gladioli as Peace, May, Augusta, Mrs. Francis King, Brenchleyensis, America, etc., if planted in a night temperature of 50 degrees, would come in flower, or at least a good many of them, for Mothers' day. Seeds of ten weeks' stocks will produce flowers at the same time. Pot off the seedlings and later bench them. Annual larkspurs, candytuft, calendulas and Dimorphotheca aurantiaca are other crops you could get from seed. I would advise first size gladiolus bulbs, as these will give the finest spikes. C. W.

MR. CRAIG GOES VISITING.

I recently called on Littlefield & Wyman, of North Abington, Mass., to see their new carnation, Miss Theo, at home. Having grown a small batch of this variety a year ago, I had a good opinion of it. This was emphasized when I saw some thousands of it at home. The color is a pure rose pink, without a trace of magenta. It is wonderfully free-flowering and I did not notice a single burst calyx. It is an easy propagator. There is no other carnation of this color which can at all approach it in floriferousness. It is not a big, fancy flower, but when one can see as many as six open flowers on a single plant in January it shows that it is a money-maker. There is little wonder that it has become popular in Boston.

Seedling No. 44, shrimp pink in color, which scored eighty-seven points at Buffalo last year, is a splendid variety. The color is better than that of Enchantress. It is a double flower, but the stout calyx holds it together finely. A large batch of this is grown. A seedling of medium size, similar in color to Prosperity, is a wonderful bloomer. ORCHIDS

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Cattleyas.

Cattleya Trianæ, the florists' cattleya par excellence, now fills the center of the stage and will do so for at least a couple of months longer. A larger number than usual of these appeared in flower last Christmas, thanks to the warm fall and open winter until that time. This cattleya is cheap and every florist who is able to grow orchids at all should try a case of them. It is far better to buy newly imported plants rather than established ones. There is always a probability of some fine types appearing in an imported case, but if the dealer sells established plants which have bloomed, he usually reserves all good forms and holds these at fancier prices.

The repotting of cattleyas that are done flowering should be pushed ahead now. In eight or ten weeks there will be a thousand and one jobs needing attention and all possible potting should be completed now. Secure an adequate stock of fern fiber if you have not enough on hand. Use pots and pans rather than baskets and be sure to make the plants firm in the pots. This cannot be done with the fingers alone; the spongy and springy lumps of fiber can only be firmed properly by using pointed hardwood sticks to press them into position.

Odontoglossums.

Continue to give odontoglossums all possible sunshine. We want the foliage to assume a deep, bronzy hue, the stamp of good health and a guarantee that, when summer heat arrives, plants with such leaves will withstand the torrid conditions vastly better than the deep green-leaved ones which many may now applaud and admire. Look out for shell snails and protect the plants with a band of cotton batting as soon as the pests appear. If there are any snails around they are sure to chew up any unprotected spikes on such odontoglossums as crispum, Pescatorei, Andersonianum and others that are now showing their flower spikes.

STEVIA NIPPED BY FROST?

Our stevia for this winter's flowering grew strong, heavy stalks and stems, but the flowers amounted to little. We had a rainy fall. Would that cause poor flowers? S. B.—N. Y.

A rainy fall would not be responsible. Are you sure the plants were not subjected to a light freezing before housing? They are injured by a mere breath of frost. If kept in a cool house, abundantly watered and well fed when potbound, they should have flowered well, always provided they had not received any chill before housing. This might not show at all on the foliage. C. W.

A CASE OF GAS POISONING.

I am writing to inquire the cause of black spots on the leaves and stems of rubber plants, and am enclosing a leaf taken from one of the affected plants. The plants were purchased last summer, the wholesaler claiming that they were superior to the old variety. The plants in the houses are unaffected, but I have had three complaints from buyers, who said that the leaves and stems turned black and finally died.

I believe gas is used for heating in the homes of the buyers. A leaf that was brought to me for inspection appeared as though it had been oiled. It had a good green color, but was black in spots. I would greatly appreciate your assistance in ascertaining the cause of the trouble. M. W. B.—O.

The ficus leaf in question was quite dry and brown when received, but it showed some darker spots that should not have been there had the leaf been normal at the time it was removed from the plant. The evidence points to a case of gas poisoning, but there is a fallacious idea extant among some householders that it is beneficial to a rubber plant to wipe off its leaves with an oily rag. Some even pursue this idea to the extent of giving a dose of the oil to the soil, with a view to expelling the worms from the soil. Any such treatment is dangerous, but if oil was not used on the plant then it would seem that the trouble was caused by gas poisoning. W. H. T.

TIME TO START CANNAS.

When should canna bulbs be planted to have them about a foot high by Decoration day? R. H. W.—Ohio.

Start your bulbs in a warm, moist house six or eight weeks before you want them. If you start them April 1 they will be of ample size. C. W.

You Know? Lefkoyen!

One of our salesmen in a seed store, failing to understand a little German woman's request, called me to his assistance. The little lady gave him a scornful look and turning sweetly to me asked:

"Haf you got it in English, vot ve calls it in Cherman, 'Lefkoyen' "?

We had. It was stocks. M. F.

What's a Universalist?

It was during the holiday rush. We had sent out for hot chicken sandwiches and coffee. Just as we were about to sit down to our belated feast, Johnny Murphy was called out into the store to wait on a lady. After looking at everything and pricing the entire stock, she decided she wouldn't "buy today," but would wait until tomorrow, when the fresh flowers would be in.

We were discussing Universalists when Johnny came back. Savagely grabbing a sandwich and his cold coffee, he asked:

"What's a Universalist?"

"Why, they are the people," he was informed, "who don't believe in any future punishment. They think that we get all our hell on earth."

"Well, by George!" exclaimed Johnny, "the fellow who invented that religion must have been in the flower business." M. F.

Who's Yer Beauty?

A young countryman came to town with his best girl. Passing a flower store, they stopped to admire the display of flowers.

"Say, Hennery, I just wisht I'd some nice roses. Them red ones look good."

"Does yer? Well, let's go in and get some. Nothin's too good fer you."

"Say, Mister, got any nice roses?"

"Yes, Hoosier Beauty."

"What's that?"

"I said Hoosier (who's yer) Beauty."

"Say, Mister, if it's an introduction yer wants it won't do no good. We're engaged. She don't hanker for city dudes anyhow, but since ye're so gosh darned inquisitive I s'pose I may as well tell ye her name is Mandy Smith. (Aside) Ye're right, Mister, she's some beaut."

"Beg pardon, sir, but I meant to tell you that we had red roses by the name of Hoosier Beauty."

"Well, well! I'm from Indiana myself, and so's Mandy. Gosh, that's a good one! Gimme a quarter's worth."

OBITUARY

Carlman Ribsam.

The death last week is reported of Carlman Ribsam, of Trenton, N. J., widely known as a grower of nursery stock, especially privet and shrubs.

John W. B. Hallett.

John Hallett, for more than twenty-five years a florist at Mamaroneck, N. Y., died at the home of his son, at Flushing, N. Y., in his seventy-fourth year. He is survived by his wife, two sons and a daughter.

Thomas Barson.

Thomas Barson, a retired florist of Johnstown, N. Y., died January 19, after a long illness. He was 54 years of age and was born in England. He came to America in 1888 and for a time was located at Hoosick Falls, N. Y. He later removed to Amsterdam, N. Y., where he was employed as gardener by the late Stephen Stanford. About twenty years ago he went to Johnstown, where he established a florists' business. This he sold in 1914 to J. H. Frederick, of Schenectady. He is survived by his wife, a brother and two sisters.

William H. Ferguson.

William H. Ferguson, a well known and highly respected florist of Philadelphia, died January 28, at the age of 69 years, the funeral taking place February 1. The business of Ferguson & Son, at Twelfth and Spring Garden streets, will be continued by the surviving partner.

Edward Welch.

Edward Welch, of Hartford, Conn., died January 19 from pneumonia, after an illness of five days. He was born in Simsbury, Conn., April 8, 1862. His wife, four sons, two brothers and a sister survive him.

Bernard Schramm.

Bernard Schramm, aged 77, a pioneer florist of Toledo, O., died January 19 at his home on Baker street. He was born in Stotzheim, Alsace-Lorraine, and migrated to Toledo in 1863, where he became manager of the old Peter Lenk greenhouses. Later he established greenhouses in Toledo and founded the business which now is known as Schramm Bros. When Mr. Schramm retired from the business his sons, Bernard G. and Charles, took charge. Both, however, died in 1910. Since then grandnephews of Mr. Schramm have been conducting the business. Mr. Schramm is survived by four daughters, thirty-seven grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Virginia, Ill.—Andrew Reiter, proprietor of the Virginia Greenhouses, has gone to Houston, Tex., where he will spend the winter.

Lancaster, Pa.—When the epidemic of grip struck Lancaster, J. P. Siebold and son were two of the many who came down with severe attacks of that pestiferous disease. During their illness Mrs. J. P. Siebold was manager of the business as well as the sick-room.

Newsy Items from All Over

Toledo, O.—There will be a new flower store at 1502 Broadway about February 15. A. E. Warning, of 812 Western avenue, is the proprietor.

Hagerstown, Md.—January 24 fire totally destroyed the boiler room and badly damaged the ends of four greenhouses owned by H. A. Bester & Sons, entailing a loss estimated at $1,000.

Schenectady, N. Y.—Jacob J. Thelen has a dirt band of his own invention which he has been using for three years. He is considering applying for a patent and putting the band on the market.

Little Rock, Ark.—A fire originating in the boiler room of the Herman Meyer establishment damaged the greenhouse and adjoining residence to the extent of $2,000, which was partly covered by insurance.

Media, Pa.—Fire destroyed a greenhouse at the George W. Bosler range on Orange street recently, damaging spring stock to the extent of $1,000. Miss Phoebe Baker sustained a loss of $800 from a blaze started by an overheated furnace, on the same day.

Dayton, O.—At the recent industrial exposition in the Delco building the Miami Floral Co. and the Heiss Co. were large exhibitors. Their adjoining booths had a good showing of poinsettias, lilacs, boxwood, ferns, palms, carnations and roses. The John Siebenthaler Nursery displayed a good line of nursery stock, featuring imported magnolias in full bloom.

London, England.—Announcement has been made that the Journal of Horticulture has suspended publication "during the period of the war." All the British gardening papers have been hard hit, but the trade periodicals have got along fairly well. The Journal of Horticulture was founded in 1848 and was a great success until the death of the original editors put the paper into less virile hands.

Saginaw, Mich.—The Saginaw-Bay City Florists' Society will meet at the store of J. B. Goetz Sons February 7 at 7:30 p. m.

Champaign, Ill.—C. F. Swayger, chief gardener for the Illinois Central railroad, is visiting in New York and New Jersey this week.

Garrettsville, O.—The H. J. Alford Co., which is doing a vegetable and seed business, will erect two greenhouses in the spring and grow flowers for retail.

Norfolk, Va.—The Manning Floral Co. has a new form of Centaurea Cyanus to which it has given the name Norfolk Pink. The flowers are shell pink and double, the claim being made that after some years of work it comes true from seed.

Fort Atkinson, Wis.—A deal recently was consummated whereby A. L. Merriman disposed of his florists' business to Herbert and Thomas Cloute, who are now conducting the business under the name of Cloute Bros. Herbert Cloute was employed by Mr. Merriman for five years and his brother, Thomas, was in the nursery business for the last six years. Both are young men.

THE BAUSCHER FIRE.

The Review for January 27 contained an account of the fire that recently visited the establishment of John Bauscher, Freeport, Ill., on a night when the temperature was 10 degrees below zero. In this issue a picture is shown, reproduced from a photograph made next day. The vacant space in the foreground formerly was occupied by a two-story service building that burned up inconceivably clean. The houses ran each way from this service building, sixteen of them in the range. The ends were burned off. A large part of the loss, of course, was on frozen stock. A. J. Bauscher estimates the loss at $25,000. Repairs were begun immediately and now are well along.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1916: President, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; vice-president, R. C. Kerr, Houston, Tex.; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Thirty-second annual convention, Houston, Texas, August 15 to 18, 1916.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

IT'S human nature to stop buying when a bill has been run up. To keep them coming, be a good collector.

LETTERS are being sent out by many of the large rubber manufacturers withdrawing quotations and warning of an advance in crude rubber and cotton fabric.

MCKINLEY day made nary ripple in the cut flower markets. Scarcely anyone in the trade made the slightest attempt to make business capital of the recurrence of January 29.

THE preliminary schedule has been issued for the annual exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society, to be held at Bar Harbor, Me., probably in July. Anyone wishing a copy of the list should address H. A. Bunyard, secretary, 40 West Twenty-eighth street, New York. A schedule also has been printed for the show to be held in San Francisco in June, copies of which may be had by addressing F. G. Cuthbertson, 749 Front street, San Francisco.

IF the Panama-Pacific exposition was in any measure disappointed with the advertising resulting from its offer of $1,000 as a prize for the best new rose, Hugh Dickson, Ltd., Belfast, Ireland, winner of the prize, has no reason to feel otherwise than fully compensated. Since the first announcement of the Dickson success, which appeared in The Review early in December, the winner has secured much publicity in trade and general publications the world around. Announcement of the name to be given the variety by the exhibition officials has not yet been made.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

TWO YEARS.

Carpenter, E. F., Hot Springs, Va.
Woelfle, H. C., & Co., Spring Arbor, Mich.
Smith, W. J., Buffalo, N. Y.
Pape, F. W., St. Louis, Mo.
Schaab, G. P., Jr., Cleveland, O.
Benke, Christ, Jr., Lyons, Ill.
Kyrk, Louis H., Cincinnati, O.
Green, F. C., Providence, R. I.
Schrader, W., Johnstown, Pa.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns are sent.

THE DUTY ON TULIP BULBS.

The court of last resort has decided that "tulips" as the word appears in the Tariff Act of 1913 does not modify the word "bulbs" in the same clause, as would be the case if the word were "tulip," and that the presence of the "s" makes the rate of duty on tulip bulbs 50 cents per thousand, not $1 per thousand as the customs officers have ruled.

Few in the trade have seriously questioned the intent of Congress, although many have had hope of success in the effort to get the present decision and will profit by their protests.

The full text of the decision legalizing the lower rate will be found on page 16 of this issue of The Review.

N. Y. FEDERATION TO MEET.

The New York State Federation of Horticultural Societies and Floral Clubs will hold its annual meeting at Ithaca, N. Y., February 9, according to an announcement by the department of floriculture of Cornell University. Lectures, exhibits and practical demonstrations of interest to florists will continue throughout the week. Addresses on commercial flower growing will be given, including such subjects as "Water Lilies for the Home and Market," "Garden Roses" and "Problems of Advertising in the Disposal of Flowers and Plants." Other lectures to be given during the week by members of the Cornell faculty include "Gardens and Garden Planning," "The Garden Gladiolus," "The Garden Phlox," "The Peony and Its Culture" and many others of similar character.

LET'S MAKE IT TRADE CUSTOM.

Here is an extract from a letter received from a subscriber:

For some time I have been interested in the Telegraph Delivery Department in The Review and have filled a number of orders for out-of-town florists. As a rule my bills have been settled at once and I have been well pleased with the transactions. But there are a few who have been so slow in settling that it hardly pays to bother with them. Can you tell me what is the trade custom in this matter, or how long I am expected reasonably to wait for my money? It seems to me that prompt settlement would be an important factor in securing good service on these orders.

The millennium will arrive with the day that all bills are paid promptly, but it is certain sure conditions in this trade are not worse than in most others. Prompt collection is a problem even where associations have been formed for the express purpose of guaranteeing the payment of accounts between members. The F. T. D., at its meeting at Cleveland last November, considered this subject at length and adopted a plan which might well be made a trade custom as relates to retail orders filled by one florist for another. As between members of the F. T. D. the terms are net cash after thirty days, with a discount of twenty per cent for payment within that limit.

The Review suggests that all florists, in billing retail telegraph orders, show the gross price, with a second line showing "twenty per cent discount if paid before thirty days from date." If not paid at the end of thirty days render statement for the gross amount and proceed promptly to its collection. If this becomes trade custom it will work no hardship whatever on the great majority who always have paid promptly, but it will compel the negligent minority to pay within thirty days if they are to make a profit on these orders.

CAN YOU BEAT IT?

In the florists' business, especially the wholesale end of it, sales are obtained at so little cost that it almost is inconceivable to those accustomed to selling costs in other lines. As an instance of what plantsmen do regularly:

Please discontinue our ad of cyclamens; The Review has sold 10,000 plants for us and we are cleaned out.—Greenville Floral Co., Greenville, Mich., January 31, 1916.

These were 3-inch plants offered at 8 cents and 4-inch plants offered at 10 cents and 12 cents each. Suppose the average price obtained for the lot was 10 cents, the sales made the quite impressive total of $1,000. But what of the cost? This was a classified ad and The Review's records show the charges for it were exactly $4.20. Sales aggregating $1,000 at a cost of $4.20! Can you beat it?

When you hear a man complaining of the cost of advertising you can be pretty sure he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Chicago market conditions are, for this season of the year, altogether anomalous. The anticipated easing of supply has been indefinitely postponed by an almost continuous succession of cloudy days. To be sure, the supply of seasonable stock is normal, but with at best a short supply of standard items, the market is left in a far from satisfactory condition. Some of the wholesalers are meeting the situation by counseling their customers to turn the attention of their patrons from the scarce articles by suggesting the varied uses of the more plentiful bulbous flowers. This has helped to a great extent to relieve the embarrassment caused by the scarcity of roses.

Beauties are so far off crop that they have ceased to occupy a position of importance. The situation as regards other roses is even more strained than it was a week ago. For while short and medium grade roses have been scarce for several weeks, the longer grades have been available. This week it is difficult to secure long-stemmed roses of good quality and the short ones continue as scarce as before.

Carnations, as a result of the warm days last week, arrived in such quantities during the latter half of the week as to cause something in the nature of

Fine Stock for St. Valentine's Day

FEBRUARY 14 is the big day of the year for corsage bouquets. We can supply the stock—plenty of Violets, Spencer Sweet Peas, Valley. Order enough. Also, St. Valentine's is a big day for boxes of Spring Flowers—Jonquils, Freesia, Tulips, etc. We can supply in quantity.

Special RAINBOW FREESIA

In addition to fancy white Purity Freesia we offer Rainbow Freesia—many clear, beautiful colors, as pink, lavender, blue, yellow, bronze, etc. If you tried these last year you found they made a hit with your trade—and they are still better this season. Now ready.

Carnations

It is well to remember that we sell the stock of the principal prize winner at the St. Louis Show of the American Carnation Society. Crops are increasing every day.

ROSES

We can fill all orders for medium and long Roses in all varieties. Specially strong on Russell.

LILIES

Our Lilies are home-grown; cut right for shipping; will reach you in prime condition.

FANCY FERNS

We pride ourselves on the quality of our hardy cut ferns. If your supply is not entirely satisfactory, try ours.

VALENTINE CUT FLOWERS

There is no better time to test the true worth of Randall Cut Flower Service than now. Realizing the tremendous demand that will result from Valentine business (far greater than any previous year), we have called upon our vast organization of growers to do themselves proud in providing our florist friends with plenty of choice stock. We ask you now to send in your orders—they will be properly filled. Price lists upon application.

a slump. The quick return of cold weather, however, quite effectually checked this tendency, and, though there are enough carnations now available to fill all orders, the market is fairly stiff.

Valley is decidedly scarce. So, too, are good Easter and calla lilies, although the supply of the latter is larger than it was a week ago. There is a large supply of good sweet peas on the market in spite of the fact that growers of late have been troubled with buds dropping. Of bulbous stock there is a large supply and a varied assortment. An infinite variety of tulips are offered and Paper Whites, Romans, jonquils and daffodils may be had in quantity. Freesia, too, is becoming much more plentiful, and that received is of good quality. Violets are sufficient to meet the demand. Pansies are not moving as they should. As for stevia, it is quite off the market.

Sprengeri and plumosus are well on the short side of the market and this causes a correspondingly large demand for other greens.

A. L. Randall Co. Doubles Space.

The entire third floor of the Le Moyne building has been acquired by the A. L. Randall Co. under a long term lease. The deal was consummated January 29, and possession was taken at once. Frank Johnson says this is one of the evidences of the company's faith in the coming year and its possibilities. The newly acquired space is approximately 20,000 square feet. It will be devoted almost exclusively to the manufacture of baskets and florists' accessories.

Fleischman's New Manager.

"Surely a live town; something doing every minute." The speaker was William Graham, who recently came from Philadelphia to take the management of the store of the Fleischman Floral Co., on Jackson boulevard. "There is as much business here in every hour as most Philadelphia stores do all day, but do you know," continued Mr. Graham, "Chicago flower buyers don't seem to be as particular as they are in the east." Mr. Graham comes to Chicago with a reputation for having turned out work second to none in the east and has been given complete charge of the Fleischman store, which has been without a manager since George Wienhoeber resigned, a year ago, to go into business for himself. Many leaders in the trade here have called on Mr. Graham, to bid him welcome to our city.

Dr. Maurice Rubel, president of the Fleischman Floral Co. since the death of his brother, B. F. Rubel, has gone to Florida for a vacation.

A recent addition to the already complete facilities of the Fleischman store is a paint room for the decoration of baskets bought in an unfinished condition, thereby securing exclusive colorings.

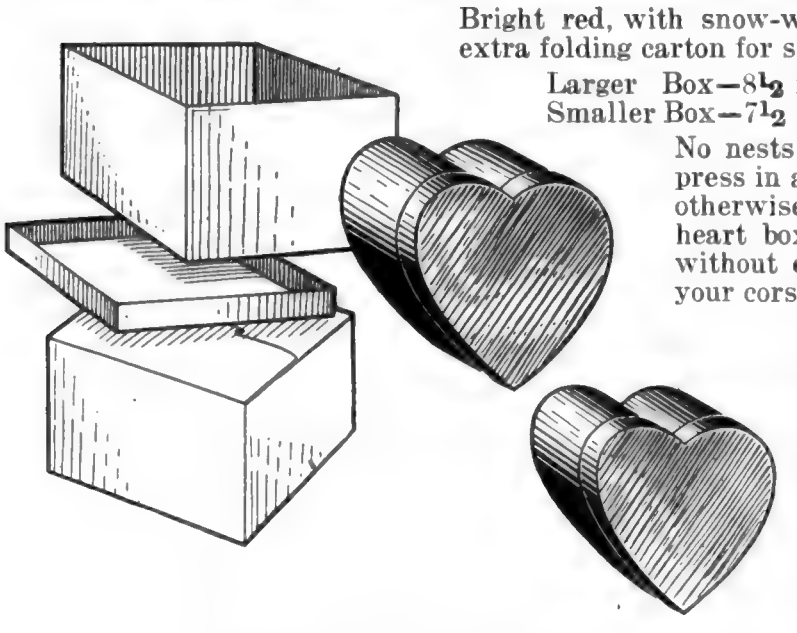
For St. Valentine's day red heart baskets containing candy as well as flowers will be featured.

A Chance to Win.

The handsomest prize ever offered at a flower show in Chicago was the solid silver punch bowl donated to the Florists' Club last fall by the Greenhouse Manufacturers' Association. It was not awarded and still is on hand. The trustees of the club have decided to raffle the trophy, chances $1 each. They announce that the list has been started by the following: A. Henderson, George Asmus, H. N. Bruns, W. J. Keimel and C. L. Washburn, twenty-five chances each; Paul R. Klingsporn, ten chances. Those who wish to test their luck while helping the club will send remittance for chances to Treasurer Klingsporn, 182 North Wabash avenue.

The club meets at the Bismarck Thursday, February 10, when a large attendance is expected to view the dis-

Advertise at the Movies!



With this free slide shown in the moving picture theaters you will tell thousands of people to buy flowers of you for Valentines

Every man in your town sends at least one Valentine. The best Valentine is of flowers—whether it be the popular corsage, the simple bouquet or the elaborate basket. Thousands of pleasure-seeking people attend the movies, and every one of them will see your advertisement when it is thrown on the screen. This attractive hand-colored slide, with your name and address plainly lettered on it, is furnished you free with an order for 144 heart boxes (each with a protective carton) for $16.00.

Free electro for newspaper advertising

Of equal selling value are advertisements in the newspapers. For this purpose we offer free with every $16.00 heart box order an attractive electrotype showing a young lady looking at a corsage taken from a heart box. The electro is two newspaper columns (4¼ inches) wide and 3¾ inches high. If requested on your order, we will write an ad for use in your newspaper. Specify the size ad you want and any special items you want in it.

144 Red Heart Boxes for $16.00 (11c per box)

Bright red, with snow-white lining. Two boxes nested in a carton, with extra folding carton for smaller box.

Larger Box—8½ inches long, 8¼ inches wide, 6 inches deep.
Smaller Box—7½ inches long, 7½ inches wide, 5½ inches deep.

No nests will be broken at these prices. Shipment by express in a corrugated box is cheapest and will be used unless otherwise specified. Don't make a separate charge for a heart box. Advertise "Every corsage in a pretty red box without extra charge." Figure the low cost of the box in your corsage.

Smaller quantities, per nest of 2 heart boxes, with cartons for each.. 25c
(No slide or electro)

A window display with these attractive Red Heart Boxes will attract attention and bring business. There are only a few days between now and St. Valentine's Day (February 14). The sooner you get going the better.

play of novelties that is being arranged.

Tonner & Tonner.

It is interesting news that Miss L. A. Tonner, for many years active in the trade but for some time engaged in the pecan orchard business, is coming back into the market. In partnership with her sister, Miss O. A. Tonner, Room 205, one of the best in the Atlas block, has been leased and the firm of Tonner & Tonner will do a general cut flower commission business and also handle florists' supplies. They will be ready for business in a few days.

The change will give A. T. Pyfer & Co. the opportunity to gain needed space, that heretofore occupied by O. A. Tonner.

January Weather.

General opinion would place January as an unusually unfavorable month for the growers, but the official records are otherwise. The weather office reports the mean temperature as slightly more than 5 degrees above normal, with rainfall more than double the normal, but the percentage of sun almost exactly the average. The records show that Chicago gets in January an average of only forty-two per cent of the possible hours of sunshine; this year it was forty-one per cent.

Various Notes.

Finding that he has not enough space to accommodate the increasing stock of a rapidly growing business, George M. Weiland, of Evanston, has purchased the nineteen acres to the north of and adjoining the property of F. Stielow, Niles Center, Ill. He will begin work at once on the erection of a large greenhouse and will add to this as rapidly as possible. This newly acquired space, he says, will be devoted exclusively to the growing of roses for the Chicago Flower Growers' Association.

The Shawyer rose, so long the target of adverse criticism, is not without its stanch adherents. C. L. Washburn says it is all in knowing how to do it, and in being willing to take the trouble. For Bassett & Washburn it has always been a rapid grower. In growing Shawyer, however, there are several things that must be borne in mind. Young plants, say those in 2½-inch and 3-inch pots, grow so rapidly that they should be kept in a much cooler house than most roses. Also, they require plenty of air. If the small plants show a little mildew, Mr. Washburn says it has been their experience that when planted in beds the mildew is soon outgrown. The main thing to remember, he avers, is to plant Shawyer in a house by itself, where temperature and air conditions can be regulated to suit the variety. If grown in this way it is easy to do, and produces as many flowers per plant as any pink variety known. One great advantage attaching to Shawyer is that it throws few short stems and requires no pinching.

John Poehlmann has so far recovered from his illness that he was able to leave the German hospital and return to his home, January 30. He is gradually gathering strength. But no sooner is John Poehlmann on the road to recovery than August Poehlmann, secretary and treasurer of the company, and Adolph Poehlmann, its vice-president, are forced to their beds by an attack of grip. As though these were not enough, William Spandikow, foreman in plant B, is suffering with blood poisoning in the right hand.

According to Emil Reichling, superintendent of the Peter Reinberg greenhouses, an entire house of that range will be devoted to the new rose, Champ Weiland, next season. Mr. Reichling is quite enthusiastic over this new variety. He says its color is wonderful, the thing he has been looking for these many years. Speaking of cuttings, Mr. Reichling says he has 500,000 carnation cuttings in the sand. Of rose cuttings, he has over 200,000 in the sand.

In accordance with plans reported in this column in December, the National Plant & Flower Co., S. Freund, manager, has placed an order with the Ickes-Braun Mill Co. for material for two new houses each 25x122 to go up as soon as weather conditions permit. The entire range will be remodeled in the spring and a new boiler installed. M. Winandy, Jr., has the contract for the cement work and the erection.

When speaking of charmed lives, Oscar Wiegand, 2011 North Halsted street, and John Schmid, 911 Montana street, are not to be forgotten. While gliding along a north side boulevard one day last week in Mr. Schmid's automobile, they saw an undertaker's car bearing down on them without regard for consequences. Mr. Schmid made a sharp turn, his automobile upset and slid some distance. With the exception of a bruised shoulder, Mr. Schmid is all right and but for a few stiff muscles, Mr. Wiegand is as fit as ever.

In the opinion of Allie Zech, of Zech & Mann, one of the most pleasant and profitable features of the St. Louis visit was the trip through the Missouri Botanical Garden. He said it was not possible to spend nearly as much time in the different houses as one would like. The desert house in particular claimed the attention of Chicago florists.

After undergoing an operation for peritonitis last week in the north side German hospital, Mrs. T. M. Waters is convalescing as rapidly as could be expected.

The duration of the present stretch of short supply breaks all records, according to A. C. Kohlbrand, of the E. C. Amling Co., who is one of the veterans. He says the arrival of bulbous stock in quantity does not seem to have curtailed the out-of-town demand as it usually does.

William Homberg is able to be out after an illness with tonsillitis and grip. He is no longer with Percy Jones.

After spending six weeks in town, C. W. McKellar reopened his country home January 31.

ROCHELLE & SONS

Mrs. W. E. Horton, of Bassett & Washburn, has the sympathy of the trade in her sudden bereavement. January 29 she received a wire to the effect that her husband, who was in Carrizozo, New Mexico, looking after mining interests, had been stricken with pneumonia. Before she could make ready to go to him, she received a second wire announcing his death. The body was shipped to Evanston, where the funeral was held.

Quite recovered from a serious illness of several weeks' duration, Miss Agatha Greeley will take up her work, February 7, in the office of the John Kruchten Co. It is needless to say that John Kruchten and C. L. Sherer are rejoicing in the prospect of her return, as, with the duties of her department added to those of their own, they have more than had their hands full.

After an experience in business for himself at Denver, Edward Reynolds recently took charge of the store of J. H. McNeilly, on Sixty-third street, succeeding Arthur Fisher, who went to Kalamazoo to reënter the employ of his brother.

Visitors.

A. J. Bauscher, son of John Bauscher, of Freeport, Ill., was in town last week, looking over the auto show and buying stock.

J. A. Young, of the Aurora Nursery Co., Aurora, Ill., was a recent visitor, conferring with those interested in his landscape department.

Among those visiting the Chicago market this week was Alexander Guttman, of Guttman & Raynor, New York, who was escorted around the market by F. M. Johnson, of the Randall Co.

Returning from the St. Louis convention, A. T. Pyfer acted as pilot for a party of eastern visitors who gave this market the once over on their way to La Fayette and Richmond. Among them were William Nicholson and S. J. Goddard, Framingham, Mass.; A. Roper, Tewksbury, Mass.; C. S. Strout, Biddeford, Me.; Ernest Saunders, Lewiston, Me.; W. J. Palmer, Jr., Buffalo, N. Y., and Mr. Montgomery, of Natick, Mass.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Graduations, weddings and funerals kept the trade exceptionally busy last week with decorations. Counter trade also was active. The shortage of help owing to illness has been one of the big problems we have had to face. The weather has been exceptionally mild for January, and has helped stock some. Flowers have been a little more plentiful, but the consignments are not any heavier than the trade demands. There was a heavy demand for roses during the week, especially in the red and pink varieties. White and yellow have sold well. Orchid sweet peas in pink and white are arriving in fine condition and they sell rapidly. Cattleyas and cypripediums are fairly plentiful and sell nicely. Gardenias are not at all plentiful. Calla lilies are good but not too plentiful, for funeral work has taken most of them. Valley, for which there is no special demand, is not abundant. Yellow and white daisies sold well during the week. Mignonette and baby primula are good sellers. Jonquils are plentiful and sell quickly. Paper Whites are arriving in larger consignments and are of good quality. Carnations are coming in heavily, which at this time is a boon and a blessing. Freesias and cornflowers make a pleasing combination for corsage work. Single and double violets have sold fairly well, the singles at a higher price. Roman hyacinths and pansies are disposed of quite easily. The supply of green goods meets all demands. Galax and magnolia leaves have been used extensively during the last week or two.

the same number of baskets filled with white daisies. A large number of individual bouquets were executed by other florists for these events.

Visitors last week were E. F. Kennon, of the Climax Mfg. Co., Castorland, N. Y.; G. Reising, of L. Baumann & Co., Chicago; Edward K. Sithens, of the Bowen-Dungan Co., Philadelphia; L. Newdorfer, of Charles Zinn & Co., New York; C. M. Acher, of the Roseville Pottery Co., Zanesville, O.; P. M. Phillips, of the S. A. Weller Co., Boston.

An elaborate dinner was served at Powers' hotel January 27 to the stockholders of James Vick's Sons. Probably the main object of this dinner was to further discuss the advisability of increasing the concern's productions and adding to its facilities. It was made known that contracts were far ahead of those of any previous year. One of the members said they have contracts aggregating 1,000 pounds of phlox seed; 1,000 pounds of mignonette seed; 1,500 pounds of candytuft seed and 3,000 pounds of aster seed. It was decided to purchase an additional 100 acres of land to meet the growing demand. The effect of the European war has been tremendous in the seed business. Mr. Vick said, "It gave us a foothold—one that will be permanent."

Siloam Springs, Ark.—"The cold wave caught some of us unprepared and tender stock in the cold corners suffered. Watkins in speaking of the damage done by the recent cold snap that hit Arkansas.

McCray Florists' Refrigerators

The McCRAY construction keeps flowers cool and fresh longer than by any other system of refrigeration. It provides an even temperature of the correct degree for cut flowers and stops the great waste and profit loss that is caused by imperfect refrigeration.

The various compartments in a McCRAY are of different sizes to accommodate the different lengths of cut flower stems and your flowers are given an inviting display.

For interior linings you have your choice of either handsome bevel plate mirror or beautiful white enamel, which are very easy to clean. The exterior may be of any finish desired to match the interior of your store woodwork or other fixtures.

Invest in a McCRAY. Make it a partner in your business. You will value it more highly than its mere intrinsic dollar-and-cents value. Investigate anyway!

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

A week of unseasonably warm weather has upset predictions of a lively midwinter market. There is just a little less business than a week ago, with a great, great many more flowers in the city, with the result of lower prices and, what is more serious, much unsold stock to be carried over to the next day. This carried-over stock means greater loss in value than the mere lowering of prices, because when carried over from day to day it depreciates to almost nothing. Of course, the carried-over stock is rarely the best stock, but it makes quite a hole in the returns, which is most unwelcome at this season of the year. There are indications of better things next week, partly because there will be more entertaining and partly because the weather prophet's predictions of colder cannot always continue wrong.

Carnations and daffodils are the mainstays of the market. They are good, plentiful and cheap. The other flowers require little special comment except that, barring Beauties and Easter lilies, there are more of them. Acacia pubescens has made its appearance and a few German stocks have come. The general quality of the flowers in the market February 1 was good.

The Club's Carnation Night.

President George Burton called to order a remarkable meeting on the occasion of the club's carnation night, February 1. The size, character and enthusiasm of the audience was unusual. W. F. Therkildson asked all the members to distribute National Flower Show window cards and use show stamps, both of which will be sent on application to him, at 475 North Fifth street. William Kleinheinz said that many out-of-town exhibits have been promised for the show next month and asked all members to help fill the big hall by bringing something good. In the absence of R. T. Brown, carnation expert for the Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y., who was scheduled to address the club, Prof. Mulford, of Washington, D. C., told of the willingness of the Agricultural Department to help florists with information about insect pests and other matters. He described the work of the national rose garden. Robert Simpson, of Clifton, N. J., followed with humorous talk of the past and serious talk of the present. Then came A. J. Guttman, of New York, and L. J. Reuter, of Westerly, R. I., with encouraging words about the National Flower Show. Edward A. Stroud described the success, or lack of it, of different varieties of carnations at Strafford.

The exhibition was large and of extremely high quality. The carnation exhibits were as follows: George Henry, a sport of Benora resembling Mrs. Patten; Benora, White Enchantress and many fine seedlings, by E. F. Lieker, of Lansdowne, Pa.; Belle Washburn, by Bassett & Washburn, of Chicago; Nebraska, by the C. H. Frey Co., Lincoln, Neb.; Nebraska, by the Chalfont Cut Flower Co., Chalfont, Pa.; Miss Theo, by Littlefield & Wyman, North Abington, Mass.; Peace and Laura Weber, by Guttman & Raynor, New Other exhibits were Rose Prima Donna, by the Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa.; Mrs. Bayard Thayer and a dark pink sport of Mrs. Charles Russell, by the Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass.; long-stemmed Mrs. Aaron Ward and two acacia plants in bloom, by Zieger & Son, Germantown, Philadelphia; cyclamen, by the Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia; window box, by W. K. Harris, Philadelphia.

Zieger & Son.

A leader in the world of flowers, one of those men whom we all admire and regard with deference, signified his intention of visiting the northern suburbs of Philadelphia the other day. When he arrived he pulled out a notebook, carefully consulted it, and announced that he wanted to see Zieger & Son. So to that spot he was straightway piloted. There Mr. Zieger was found hard at work with his assistants. His greeting was characteristic of the modesty and courtesy of the man. "I have nothing to show you," he said, "but you are welcome." It generally happens that when a man has done something clever horticulturally the fame of it takes just long enough to be noised abroad to make a visit too late; so it was in this case—that wonderful, double pink and white bouvardia that so stirred the city was over, except for belated side shoots. The lupines, equally famous for their colors, had not yet arrived. So Mr. Zieger naturally felt disappointed that his best was not forthcoming, entirely missing the fact that he himself is most interesting to the visitors.

Mr. Zieger is cultivated, enthusiastic and a thorough florist who has mastered all branches of the profession. The son of a florist, he has had abundant opportunity to study plants and their habits; he knows many varieties that are little known here, and knows how to grow them. For example, he has Eucharis Amazonica, the so-called Amazon lily, which, while familiar in public and in a few private collections, is rarely seen commercially. Then there are ixias, stocks and wallflowers, while many of the choice kinds of more frequently grown varieties add interest. In roses Mr. Zieger favors Mrs. Aaron Ward, Thora and September Morn. In bulbs his varieties show careful selection, always with an aim for the best.

Various Notes.

Walter Davis narrowly escaped serious injury when an unskilled Ford driver jammed him against a wall on Ranstead street. Fortunately, a few stitches and a headache were the most serious after effects.

August Lutz, well known west Philadelphia florist, is ill at his home.

News has been received in this city of the death last week of Carlman Ribsam, of Trenton, N. J., head of the firm of C. Ribsam & Son.

William H. Ferguson, a well known and highly respected florist of this city, died January 28, at the age of 69. Mr. Ferguson was head of the firm of W. H. Ferguson & Son, doing business at Twelfth and Spring Garden streets. The funeral took place from his late residence, 1944 North Sixth street, Tuesday, February 1. Interment was at Northwood cemetery.

Samuel R. Aiken, who conducted a retail flower store at 1722 Columbia avenue, has failed. The liabilities are about $4,000. It is believed an agreement will be reached whereby Joseph Josephs, whose shop is at Nineteenth and Columbia avenue, will purchase the good will and the fixtures for $500. Mr. Aiken has many friends in the business who will learn of his misfortune with deep regret.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

The unprecedented hot weather of last week had a tendency to make roses and carnations soft and there were many complaints in this respect. The production was increased enormously, breaking the price to the point where carnations could be had at $20 per thousand. Roses have been bringing good prices right along. The supply of American Beauty roses has shortened materially, and prices on these have gone up. Last week they brought from $7.50 to $9 and there were hardly enough to go around. From present indications the prices will continue to soar.

Some exceptionally fine mignonette was offered last week at $5 and $6. Sweet peas moved well at $2 and $2.50 per hundred. Freesia is good, but the supply is heavy and the price has dropped to $3 per hundred. Valley fell off in favor and the sales dragged last week, causing a glut in this market. The best is bringing $5 per hundred. Easter lilies are scarce and it was hard even to get the smallest orders filled during the week.

Fine tulips were offered at $3 and $4 per hundred. Jonquils are in fair shape and brought similar prices. Both of these, with lilacs and other spring flowers, are much in demand for table decorations. Single violets have come in heavily. Gardenias are scarce and the price remains at 25 cents each.

In a large number of dinner decorations primroses, both large and small-flowering, cyclamens and begonias have been used with fine effect. Potted plants have been utilized for table decorations more this year than ever before.

The Washington Floral Co. is showing some exceptionally fine Radiance roses, of which there is an excellent cut. This concern has received its Easter supply of azaleas, including Ernest Evers, a beautiful dark pink, with good moss-green leaves.

J. Richards, formerly in charge of the stand of F. H. Kramer, in the Center Market, has opened the New Cochran Flower Shop, in the New Cochran hotel, at Fourteenth and K streets, northwest, where he has an attractive establishment. All of the fixtures are done in white and contrast with the buff color of the side walls. The floor is of marble slabs.

Otto Bauer, manager of the Washington store of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., of Philadelphia, has caused the distribution of a large number of placards advertising the National Flower Show, which is to be held in Philadelphia March 25, and these are beginning to appear in store windows all over town. The Climax Cut Flower Boxes

"A BOX FOR EVERY FLOWER"

SEVEN GRADES—Oxford Gray, Mist Green, Nonpareil Green, White Carnation, White Glazed and our popular "Favorite Grade"—the latter a heavy, full telescope shipping box. Holiday boxes in their season.

We have over 150 sizes in the different colors and shades in stock. If you need a special size we will make it promptly and not charge you an exorbitant price.

"WHEN BETTER BOXES ARE MADE WE WILL MAKE THEM"

Florist boxes are a specialty with us. We know what the florist needs and how to make the box to meet his requirements. When it comes to Quality, Artistic Printing, Embossing and Quick Serv ce, we are headquarters and on the job every minute. If you have never used a "Climax Flower Box" you have missed something real good. Before placing your next order write us for samples and prices. weather. Carnations of good quality are more plentiful and cheaper. Violets are about the same and find a ready sale. Sweet peas are cheaper and of better quality. The price of roses has not changed much, though the flowers are more plentiful. Good Golden Spurs now are to be had as low as 3 cents. Freesias and marguerites are in good crop.

Various Notes.

Julius Rusitsky is having a new and much larger refrigerator built to suit his requirements. This will add much to his attractive store.

The announcement has been made of the engagement of William M. Post to Miss Millie Terwilliger, of New York.

H. V. Soule was busy last week with a number of wedding decorations.

Joseph V. Pierce & Co. report an increasing crop of roses. The dark weather of the last few weeks has made the crop short, but with a few days of sunshine there is a marked improvement.

Frank L. Gray spent January 29 and 30 at Lynn and at Attleboro.

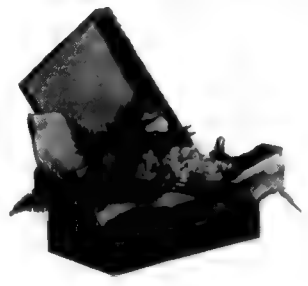
S. E. Shaw intends to plant one of his large houses to cucumbers in the near future. He now has sweet peas in the house. W. M. P.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Last week was phenomenal; 68 degrees in the shade was recorded January 27, but January 30, fortunately, seasonable weather returned.

Notwithstanding McKinley day and the dozens of graduation exercises, in which quantities of flowers were used, there was seemingly a great abundance of stock, of carnations especially, and prices were shaded considerably as the week ended. Roses of all kinds have held up well, but they commenced their usual recession at the close of last week, as shipments are increasing rapidly. American Beauties have been scarce and prices high. At least, 75 cents and over seems high to those who have to demand $18 to $24 per dozen at retail. A few Hadley sold at 50 cents each last week, and several of the novelties held the level of the month. The lower grades of all roses were rapidly absorbed.



There has been no encouragement for orchid growers; prices are down and there is no decrease in the supply. The prices of recent weeks are maintained for valley and lilies, selected flowers of the latter holding firm at $12 per hundred. Violets are again offered by the street merchants, and prices correspond to this declining estimate. Spring flowers are here in profusion, pansies, sweet peas, lilac, primula, mignonette, freesia, forget-me-nots and daisies, with branches of acacia, forsythia and early flowering shrubs. Of tulips and daffodils there is no limit and prices are much lower.

Various Notes.

McKinley day was a disappointment, especially to the retail florists.

The universally interesting topic now is the flower show April 5 to 12, at COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

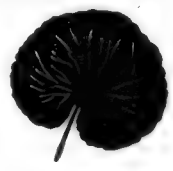
Trade has been unusually heavy, with plenty of stock coming in. Funeral work has been the main outlet for the stock. Roses have been scarce, but their quality is good. Beauties also have been scarce, but the demand for them has not been heavy. Carnations increased in quantity last week and heavy cuts now are coming in. It is really the first time since the holidays that there has been any surplus on the market.

Roman hyacinths are quite plentiful and the demand for them has been heavy. Narcissi, both white and yellow, have found a good market and quantities of them are moved. Jonquils have been in good demand, but there have been few on the market so far. Sweet peas are more plentiful and are moving nicely. There has been a good lot of valley and violets used in funeral work. Potted plants are moving nicely and some extra good stock is to be seen.

Various Notes.

The Livingston Seed Co. reports heavy cuts of carnations and a large quantity of funeral work.

Sherman Stephens & Son report the heaviest business in funeral work in a long time.



The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is cutting heavily of carnations, but its roses are somewhat shy at present.

The Munk Floral Co. has quite a heavy run of sweet peas at present and reports heavy business. J. M.

Jamestown, N. D.—C. L. Stuewig and C. E. Moore, proprietors of the Jamestown Floral Co., have sold their business to Jacob Dekker, formerly of Butte, Mont., who took possession January 3.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Lincoln, Neb.—The Griswold Seed Co., of which W. B. Griswold is president, has filed in the United States District court a schedule of its debts and assets, listing the debts at $140,858.05 and the assets at $229,484.86. The schedule shows indebtedness for taxes amounting to $67,529.65. A meeting of the creditors of the corporation was held January 18, when a trustee for the business was appointed. The assets were sold at auction January 29.

ROOTING AN ARAUCARIA TOP.

I have an Araucaria excelsa, six feet high, which has lost its lower branches. Could I nick this under the second tier from the top, moss it and root it like a rubber plant? If so, when would be the best time to do it? F. B.—Ala.

An araucaria top may sometimes be rooted on the plant by mossing up in the same manner as one would do with Ficus elastica, but the araucaria usually takes considerably longer to root than the ficus. The best time to do this would be about the beginning of April. The moss must not be allowed to dry out during the possible three months that may elapse before the araucaria cutting will be rooted. W. H. T.

SNAPDRAGON AND SALPIGLOSSIS.

I should like to know the proper time to plant seed of snapdragons and salpiglossis in order to have good, stocky plants to sell May 1. F. E. S.—R. I.

Sow the snapdragon seed about the middle of February. This will enable you to get nice plants in 3-inch or 3½-inch pots at the time mentioned. Salpiglossis sown early in March will be sufficiently early. It will require more heat, however, than the snapdragon.

COCOS WEDDELLIANA AND FERNS.

Please give me directions on the culture of Cocos Weddelliana from seed. Also, when should I plant spores of dish ferns to have them in 2¼-inch pots by Christmas, 1916? Would the ferns require special care?

R. H. M.—N. Y.

The approved method of starting seeds of Cocos Weddelliana is to sow them singly in 2-inch pots, using a light and open soil for the purpose. Some growers prefer pure peat for the seed pots. The seeds should be covered with the soil to a depth of one-half to three-quarters of an inch, and the pots placed in a temperature of about 70 degrees, and kept moist. When the seedlings have two to three leaves they should be shaken out of the soil and potted into 2¼-inch pots, using a heavier soil for this potting. The plants should be kept moist at all times and given moderate shade, with a night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees.

Fern spores for next winter's crop should be sown at once. They require considerable care in order to produce good results. They should be sown thinly on the surface of the soil; then covered with glass over the pots until the spores have germinated. In due season the seedlings should be transplanted to shallow trays and, finally, when they are large enough to handle, the seedlings should be potted into 2¼ or 2½-inch pots. Sometimes they are kept indoors all the season, though some of the larger growers place them in shaded coldframes during the summer and thus find space for other stock in the greenhouses during that season. There is much work attached to this operation, and if one only needs a moderate quantity of dish ferns it is more convenient to buy the seedlings in the trays and simply pot them.

WE HAVE FOR SALE

On the 8th day of February, 1916, a splendid greenhouse with several acres of land in the town of Lapel, Ind., eight miles west of Anderson, and in one of the finest farming communities in the world. Lapel is a little town of probably 1500 people. The sale will be held on the place on the 8th of February, and the real estate will be sold either as a whole or in parcels, there being about 35 town lots in addition to the greenhouse. The terms of the sale are one-third cash, one-third in nine months, and one-third in eighteen months. Mr. Barnes, who founded this business, had worked up a magnificent business, but unfortunately he died and there is no one in his family that can take his place. It is a splendid opening for someone desiring to engage in the business.

For particulars address

Anderson Trust Co., Commissioner,
Anderson, Indiana.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

A decided modification in the temperature last week resulted in a noticeable improvement in market conditions, the supply of almost everything increasing. Roses and carnations now are arriving in larger quantities and better quality. There has been a slight drop in prices, although the scale has been well maintained by the unusually large quantity of funeral work. Narcissi, daffodils and tulips have made their appearance in good quantities, which also eases the market.

While Carnation day, held in memory of President McKinley, was not generally observed in this city, there was enough demand to cause much activity in carnations, and before noon buyers were scurrying to obtain their supply. There was a stiffening of prices on carnations for that day.

The Annual Club Banquet.

The annual banquet of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island was held in the clubrooms at 98 Westminster street, January 24, with one of the largest gatherings that have attended a similar affair in several years. The meeting was called to order at about 8 o'clock, following an excellent dinner, by the retiring president, Cornelius Hartstra. After a brief address of welcome President Hartstra called the newly elected president, James Dillon, to the chair, after which the other officers were installed. They are: Vice-president, William Steele; secretary, William E. Chappell; treasurer, James Hockey. All are Providence men excepting Mr. Hockey, who comes from Pawtucket.

After the business session music and addresses were in order. One of the pleasing features of the evening was the presentation to the retiring president of a silk umbrella, as a mark of appreciation of his work during the year. The committee in charge of arrangements consisted of Robert Johnson, Alexander Macrae and Eugene Appleton.

Various Notes.

Henry Patry, with Smith, the Florist, was on the sick list last week.

Joseph Koppelman was a business visitor to Boston last week.

The Market.

The state florists' convention week was a busy one for the florists here, for visitors were invited to remain over a day and inspect the greenhouses. Then the nurserymen of the state were here on the following day and many of the florists were interested in that meeting. Weather conditions were favorable all the week, there being no frost at any time and but little rain. There was one good shower, but it came after the visitors had all gone home.

Flowers still are decidedly on the short side, roses having largely been cut back or else put under the drying process to get them ready to cut back. Carnations are producing heavily, but not so heavily as they were six weeks ago. The quality is uniformly good, however. It was frequently remarked by northern growers who were here last week that carnations were as good here as they could be anywhere. Only a few years ago no one thought carnations could be grown here. The discussions of the week developed the fact that some of our best varieties here are not the best in the north, or vice versa. The same is true of roses. Propagation is getting under way, but most of the rose stock for grafting has not been received yet. Shipments from abroad seem to be slow in arriving this season. Carnations are in the sand by the thousands, however.

There has been a persistent and heavy demand for flowers all the week, both retail and wholesale. As a result there have been few flowers that were not cleaned out every day. I have never seen the boxes so well cleaned up as during the last two or three weeks. Violets now are coming in freely; peas are getting into the game and are of as good quality as I have ever seen, too. Valley is short and there is little or no bulbous stock of any kind, with the exception of Paper Whites.

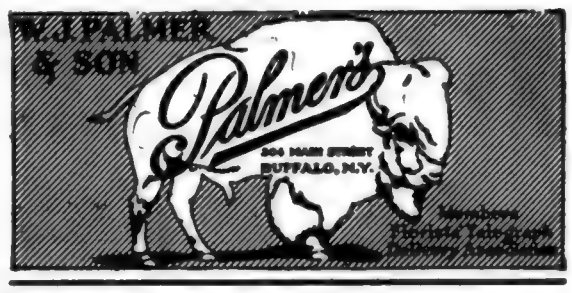
Outdoor stock is coming forward faster than is desired. Snowdrops, scillas and winter aconite are in their glory and early daffodils are here.

Convention Aftermath.

The state florists' meetings brought out several discussions of general interest. Under greenhouse construction, Mr. McIntyre spoke of the poor economy of building greenhouses that would not last a lifetime. Later, when his place was visited, all agreed that he had one of the best constructed greenhouse ranges in the south.

The question of building cement benches was raised, the McIntyres recommending a bench built of a mixture of cement to one-fourth of sand, with half-inch holes every four or six inches each way for drainage.



E. G. Hill said that his ideal of a bench for carnations and roses, especially for roses, was a cement retaining wall about two feet or more high filled to within eight or ten inches with cinders, then covered with tiles on which the bedding soil was placed. He said that the main roots of the roses will find their way through the tile into the cinders and even down into the clay below, where they will draw elements that make for quality.

J. A. Peterson then told of a cement bench that he uses, which is built entirely of hard coal cinders and cement, coke screenings and cement, or even soft coal cinders and cement. He reenforces the benches with barbed wire, makes the cement two inches thick and uses cement pillars for support. He says that these benches are cheaper than cypress and last indefinitely, and that water will drain through them as it does through porous brick. Several testified to having seen this demonstrated at his place.

Mr. McIntyre recommended hot water for heating plants of less than 40,000 feet. For ranges between this and 100,000 feet, steam, he said, with gravity returns, is better. Larger ranges than 100,000 feet should be heated with steam, aided by a vacuum pump.

Advertising was thoroughly discussed at the state florists' meeting, it being generally agreed that prices should be held low enough so that the middle classes could afford to buy flowers. It was agreed that newspaper advertising is more effective when the florists cooperate in one large ad that includes all the individual ads.

Various Notes.

Among the things especially noticed by the visiting florists were some Prince d'Arenberg roses at the greenhouses of Geny Bros. This variety gives promise of being a real winner for a red forcing rose.

At McIntyre Bros.' there is a white carnation of large size and excellent appearance, which is the most fragrant of all carnations I have ever seen. It is a sport. They have only four plants, but will propagate it as fast as they can. They had a good showing of orchids and peas at the old place.

Haury & Sons have much space in their houses devoted to lettuce. They were setting a house when I visited the place.

At the Joy Floral Co. establishment all remarked on the large number of carnations and roses grown; also the large number of cyclamen plants. The carnations are blooming exceptionally well for this season of the year. Harold Joy is the rose grower at present.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Dark, rainy weather during the last half of last week did not help the market and the retail business. The condition of the market the early part of the week was greatly improved and all cut stock was more plentiful and prices lower. Transient downtown trade was killed the three days of continuous rain. In the west end the custom trade was excellent, with social work of all kinds. The one noticeable feature of the market is the improved supply of carnations. These have been cleaning up well recently, owing to the scarcity, but now the price is lower and some are left for the late buyers. Roses, too, are more plentiful than any time since the first of the year. Some excellent stock of Killarney and Beauty now is to be had, with Russell, Ophelia and Ward not in oversupply. The feature of the market so far this season is the way bulb stock is selling. Paper Whites, usually a glut, clean up daily; also, Romans, lilies and valley.

Sweet peas are scarce and will continue to be, for with most of our local growers the buds have fallen off, caused, they say, by the damp season. Violets are coming in nicely and will be plentiful from now on, though the price is a trifle high at present. Tulips and jonquils are arriving daily. All greens are to be had in any quantity at usual prices.

Various Notes.

Dr. George T. Moore, head of the Missouri Botanical Garden, was in Boston last week, where he delivered an illustrated lecture in Horticultural hall on the Missouri Botanical Garden. Dr. Moore was sorry to miss the carnation exhibition.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will hold its meeting February 10. The trustees have something special on tap. The secretary will send out the regular notices, which will explain the nature of the surprise. All are requested to come.

more street, suffered much damage. The roof of Mr. Halstead's residence was blown off and the greenhouses were badly wrecked. Mr. Guy's home was not damaged, but the glass of his greenhouses was almost all blown away. Brother florists assisted in repairing the damaged houses.

S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, who was here last week, informs me that cold-storage lily bulbs are scarce and that most of the dealers have oversold.

Mrs. Theodore Miller will entertain the Lady Florists' Home Circle February 9 at her home, 5886 Delmar boulevard. The entire membership is expected.

The Diemer Floral Co., on South Broadway, reports a splendid run of business for the month of January. This concern is an old established one and is an attractive spot in that neighborhood.

cured a number of orders for boilers during his stay here last week.

J. F. Ammann, chairman of the executive committee in charge of the recent carnation meeting, says this committee will hold a meeting this week to close up the affairs of the committee and submit the final report at next week's club meeting.

George Madsen, of Alton, Ill.; M. F. Widmer, of Highland, Ill., and J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., members of the Florists' Club, were greatly pleased to carry off some of the first and second prizes at last week's carnation exhibition. The Enchantress carnations shown by them were of high quality; also Alice, Philadelphia and Gloriosa, exhibited by the Ammann Co., were a pleasing sight. All three were congratulated by the members after the awards were made known.

J. J. Beneke and his friend, Hans Wagner—not the famous Hans Wagner of Pittsburgh—rolled in the scratch bowling tournament January 30 as a 2-man team, and rolled into ninth place with 1,132 in three games, as follows: Beneke—173, 236, 188; Wagner—145, 223, 167. J. J. B.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The week ending January 28 was one of abnormal heat for January. With maximum temperatures of 60 degrees or over for a full week, clear skies and an entire absence of frost, flowers came along with a grand rush, and the greatly increased supplies have caused a decided slump all along the line. Roses are not in so abundant a supply as any of the other flowers, but prices on them have fallen sharply. Short-stemmed stock, which made $6 January 22, made $2 a week later. Beauties are in somewhat light supply, except short-stemmed stock, which is not wanted. Russell, Killarney Queen, Ophelia, Double White Killarney and Sunburst are selling well. Of red varieties, like D'Arenberg, Richmond and Hadley, the supply is only moderate.

Carnations are in heavy supply and prices have fallen as low as $1 per hundred. Stock must be quite select to bring $3. Violets are abundant. The hot weather sent in a tremendous crop, which was moved with difficulty. Sweet peas now are quite a factor and large quantities of both grandifloras and Spencers are arriving. The Spencers realize about double the price of the old varieties. Mignonette and snapdragon are each coming in more freely. Only the pink snapdragon sells well. Yellow marguerites are arriving in larger numbers, but they sell out clean. Pansies are of good quality and there is a nice supply of the popular English primroses. Calendulas are overdone. Small batches of wallflowers, lilacs, forget-me-nots and other flowers are seen. Callas are overabundant and hard to move; lilies also are lower in price.

Of Dutch bulbous flowers the supply is much heavier, a large number of varieties now being seen. Prices have declined about one hundred per cent, as compared with those of the week previous. Paper Whites continue to sell well. They have been a good selling article the entire season. Freesias are druggy. Lily of the valley goes more slowly. The warmer weather has increased the gardenia supply, but prices still are good. Cattleya Trianæ is somewhat lower. Of other orchids there is a good supply of cypripediums, and smaller lots of Vanda cærulea, Lælia anceps and phalænopsis.

Various Notes.

Paine Bros., of Randolph, are among our largest and most successful bulb specialists. Of tulips they are now getting White Hawk, Flamingo, Couronne d'Or, King of the Yellows, Goldfinch and La Reine. In narcissi they have Golden Spur, Silver Spur, rugulosus and poeticus ornatus. They also have freesias and callas in quantity.

House, February 9, were sold by January 27 and early application for the remaining tickets is necessary to avoid disappointment. For the club's annual carnation night, February 15, there will be a notable display of novelties and standard varieties, and talks on various phases of carnation culture by several specialists.

Norris F. Comley, of Burlington, grows vegetables and flowers largely in his big range of houses. He is shipping quantities of fine Spencer sweet peas and single violets, while Pink Delight Matchless, Beacon, White Wonder and other carnations are doing exceptionally well.

Boston's representation at the St. Louis carnation convention was a comparatively small one. It was a long journey for the flowers, but the awards showed that New England carnations are hard to beat. If such growers as A. A. Pembroke, Peter Fisher, W. R. Nicholson, J. A. Nelson, C. B. Johnson and others had also entered the fray, it is probable that the winnings for the rest of the country would have been comparatively small.

M. B. Dallachie, of Newton Center, is one of our most successful growers of English primroses and he sends in a good daily shipment of these popular flowers.

At Galvin's Park street store some handsome baskets of orchids recently have attracted attention. Not only cattleyas, but also phalænopsis, cypripediums, Lælia anceps, vandas and other varieties were represented. Business here since Christmas has been good.

tural hall January 29. Alfalfa culture in New England will be discussed February 5 by Prof. S. C. Damon, of Kingston, R. I.

Patrick Welch's shippers are sending him fine lots of roses, carnations, orchids and other flowers and the increased supplies and lower prices have stimulated business.

Extra fine freesias are coming in from many growers, but those from F. W. Fletcher, of Auburndale, and J. Leach & Son, of North Easton, are exceptional in quality.

Pink Sensation carnations from S. J. Goddard are of splendid quality. Flowers of this new variety have been realizing $8 per hundred, when ordinary varieties have been making but one-fourth this amount. Other fine varieties from Mr. Goddard are Good Cheer, Alice, Beacon, Matchless, Pink Delight, Benora and White Wonder.

Yellow marguerites are always well grown and popular in the Boston market. Fine flowers are coming in from J. K. Chandler & Sons, of Tewksbury; James Wheeler, of Natick, and J. W. Simpson, Woburn, to mention only a few specialists of this flower.

Penn now has his business concentrated at 124 Tremont street and is busy. For Valentine's day he is, as usual, planning well ahead. His sales of violets for this occasion are always enormous. It seems strange to pass the old, deserted store at 43 Bromfield street, which for so many years has been such a hive of industry, but progress is the order of the day and Penn's progressiveness must be served.

Charles Evans, of Watertown, now is cutting callas heavily and he has a fine crop of Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri.

The Boston Cut Flower Co. reports a much increased call for flowers since the decline in wholesale prices permitted of more popular prices. This firm has had more funeral work the present winter than ever before.

Alexander Reid, of the Harvard Botanical Gardens, Cambridge, left February 1 to take charge of the estate of J. J. Albright, of Buffalo.

Peter Fisher has a new seedling scarlet carnation, which is going to discount all varieties when it is known. Mr. Fisher reports a great sale for cuttings of Alice, which has made good everywhere and will be much more heavily planted next season.

Florists' Bowling League.

The salesmen and growers of the Boston Flower Exchange have presented a large and handsome silver cup to the Florists' Bowling League for the highest individual 3-strong score for three consecutive years. Recent additional cups have been presented by the Welch Bros. Co., Julius Zinn, the Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co. and T. F. Galvin.

The score of the league up to and including January 27 is as follows:

Team.	Won.	Lost.	Totals. Jan. 27.
Galvin's	40	16	1274
Carbone's	38	18	1245

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

It is reported that it has been decided to liquidate the Luther Burbank Co., San Francisco, rather than attempt to refinance it.

James Vicks Sons, Rochester, is experiencing a largely increased demand as the result of the uncertainty of European seed supplies, and at a dinner for stockholders January 27 it was decided to considerably enlarge the scope of the corporation's operations.

News of the water damage to seed crops in California is awaited with interest. The floods generally have been outside the big seed-growing valleys, but there has been an excess of moisture almost everywhere in the southern half of the state.

A wire from the Haven Seed Co., Santa Ana, Cal., February 1, said: "High waters have marooned most of Orange county for several days, but we probably will be receiving and forwarding mail before this appears in print. Flood waters have done us no damage. The rains have put our fields in excellent condition for our tomato seed crop."

Advices have been received by the Office of the Foreign Trade Advisers, of the State Department, Washington, to the effect that permits have just been issued by the British Foreign Office in London, guaranteeing the unmolested shipment from Rotterdam of 4,724 pounds of vegetable seeds, valued at $590, from Germany, consigned to Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia.

Bert E. Brotherton, formerly a partner and general manager of the Peninsular Seed Co., of Port Huron, Mich., January 1 severed his connection with that concern and will hereafter look after the contracting, inspection, harvesting and preparation of crops of peas, beans, corn, etc., for the D. Landreth Seed Co., Bristol, Pa. Mr. Brotherton has had many years' experience contracting for crops, principally in Michigan, Wisconsin and adjoining states and in the valleys of the Rocky mountains. He will continue his residence at Port Huron, Mich.

THE TULIP DUTY DECISION.

The Court of Customs Appeals has reversed the Board of General Appraisers in the test case brought by certain importing interests in the effort to secure the admission of tulip bulbs at 50 cents per thousand duty, instead of $1 per thousand. Most readers of this paper are familiar with the case. The full text of the decision cutting the rate in half will be found on page 16 of this issue. The decision will stand until Congress amends the tariff law.

GOVERNMENT SEED AWARDS.

Awards have just been made by the Agricultural Department of contracts for seeds for the 1916-1917 congressional free distribution. Forty American firms will supply surplus stock and contract seeds, while two foreign firms will furnish surplus stock, no

WOMAN VERSUS MYSTERY

No, you are all wrong if you think wearing skirts makes business a cinch. Oh, no, business is business on strictly business principles, that is, if you want to compete with the best competitors, and they are none too good at times; knocks and bumps all develop when you touch the other fellow's dollar; and I can tell a few confidential stories on the combination of business-girl, sweetheart and competitor in one little person. It takes some temperament, I know it from experience, but it's great to be in the swim, anyway; sometimes I think my nerve and confidence are made of cork, they can't sink; but I sure have had some battles.

May the Lord love the men! Most of the live ones like women, but some of them wouldn't trust their own mother, but bless their good hearts, most of them trust me as much as they do the other Bulb Peddlers. I know this, I can only fool them once and then be ancient history if I fail to please; a man is not so forgiving at times; I must deliver the goods, if I want a good come-back. What can I do for you, please?

Tuberous Rooted Begonias, named sorts, single, $3.25 per 100; double, $4.00 per 100.

LILY BULBS

The quality of lily bulbs differs more than the quality of most other bulbs and as growers' profits are regulated so largely by that quality, it is most necessary to get the best there is. Now, there are no better lily bulbs grown than Horseshoe Brand Giganteum. They cost more to grow than most other brands, and they are worth more to a grower than any brand we know of, considering the average results. You can rely upon this brand more than most brands because it is more uniform year after year. Price in some bulbs is a very important factor in the profit, but the fellow who buys lily bulbs by price, will get burnt forty-nine times out of fifty. Prices fluctuate in bulbs just as they do in wheat, potatoes, or any other commodity. Send for prices on lily bulbs before buying elsewhere, especially if you want quantities.

NONE ARE AS CAREFULLY TESTED

MANY a new thing that looked good in many a catalogue has proved a failure or an impossible freak when it came to growing it. Back of everything you buy of Sutton's is their known reputation for extreme care in testing out everything they put out.

You will find the catalogue tells, plainly and frankly, exactly what each item is. No wordy beauty flights.

It's one of the reasons why you can feel entirely safe in ordering any of the many new and unusual things in our catalogue this year.

You know full well that no one tests their productions as carefully or as constantly as we do.

BILLS PENDING.

Senator Ackerson has filed in the New Jersey senate a bill (S. 11) to regulate the sale of agricultural seeds and to provide standards of purity and germination. This is the old Iowa type of seed bill, discarded for the label law of more recent seed legislation. The bill affects all classes of seeds and is highly objectionable to the seed trade and of little protective value to purchasers of seeds.

There was a hearing before the house committee on coinage, weights and measures at Washington, January 20, to consider Congressman Dillon's bill (H. R. 150) relative to establishing standard weights of commodities, including peas, beans, etc. Several seedsmen and Curtis Nye Smith, attorney for the American Seed Trade Association, were present and presented arguments.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

B. Hammond Tracy, Wenham, Mass.—"Cedar Acres Gladioli," a neat 32-page catalogue of gladiolus bulbs, with illustrations and cultural directions; seed also is offered. Among the illustrations is a series of pictures of the buildings and grounds, past and present, indicating the progress of the business.

L. E. Williams, Exeter, N. H.—"Collected Native Trees, Shrubs and Plants," a 16-page list. Mr. Williams states that he also makes a specialty of collecting the seeds of native trees and plants.

Leedle Floral Co., Springfield, O.—"Best Things in Roses," another of this firm's compact, handy booklets; forty pages, with no illustrations. The classified lists are followed by an alphabetical list of the entire stock, with "dependable descriptions."

Schultz's Seed Store, Washington, D. C.—"Schultz's Seed Annual," a well illustrated, well printed catalogue, containing sixty-four pages, and listing seeds, bulbs, poultry supplies, implements for farm and garden, insecticides, fertilizers, etc.

Herbert & Fleishauer, McMinnville, Ore.—"The Home of Asters," an illustrated booklet of twenty-four pages, in an attractive cover. Contains a wholesale list of "Asterhome" seeds and plants, with directions for commercial growing and the maintenance of a continuous supply of blooms.

John Connon Co., Ltd., Hamilton, Ont.—Wholesale list of plants, bulbs, trees, roses, shrubs, vines and perennials; a compact, accurate catalogue of thirty-two pages.

Geo. H. Mellen Co., Springfield, O.—A freely illustrated 96-page catalogue of plants, bulbs, seeds, garden roots, nursery stock and miscellaneous supplies. At the beginning is a 16-page list of roses, with the announcement that they are all own-root stock.

J. D. Long, Boulder, Colo.—"Long's Garden Guide," offering "Tried and True" seeds, bulbs and plants; forty pages, illustrated. Among the specialties are sweet peas, pansies and asters.

ST. LOUIS SEED CO. The Home of "Pure and Sure Seeds" 411-13 Washington Ave., St. Louis, Mo taining an alphabetical list of selected named varieties, followed by offers of mixtures.

J. J. Wilson Seed Co., Inc., Newark, N. J.—An illustrated catalogue of flower, vegetable and grass seeds, perennials and other plants, bulbs, roots, ornamental grasses, roses, shrubs, small fruits, implements, fertilizers and other supplies; forty-eight pages and cover.

R. H. Shumway, Rockford, Ill.—"Shumway's Seeds for Farm and Garden"; fifty-six extra large pages, profusely illustrated. This is perhaps the only American catalogue of any considerable size that is still illustrated entirely with woodcuts.

G. H. Hunkel Co., Milwaukee, Wis.—"Wholesale List of Seeds, for Florists and Market Gardeners." The receipt of this company's general catalogue, an 80-page book, was announced in The Review of January 27; the trade list is condensed to sixteen pages.

W. E. Marshall & Co., New York, N. Y.—A 96-page, illustrated catalogue of seeds, bulbs and plants, ending with an unusually extensive list of horticultural tools and requisites. A warning is given as to the probable scarcity of certain seeds that are generally imported from Europe.

J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., Cincinnati, O.—An illustrated catalogue of seeds, bulbs, roses, vines, perennials, ornamental and fruit-bearing trees, shrubs and sundries. A comprehensive book, giving all departments of the business a good showing; about twenty-eight of the total 128 pages are devoted to tools and general supplies.

Frank E. Rue, Peoria, Ill.—"Rue's Garden Guide," offering seeds, bulbs, roots, plants, fruit and ornamental trees, shrubs, garden tools, poultry supplies and other requisites; seventy-four pages, illustrated.

W. W. Wilmore, Denver, Colo.—Two catalogues, wholesale and retail. The wholesale list consists of four pages, almost entirely devoted to dahlias, with only a few inches of space for gladioli and miscellaneous perennials. The retail list, which is illustrated and expanded to sixteen pages, also offers hardy roses and vines.

Kelway & Son, Langport, England—American edition of the "Wholesale, Real Price Catalogue, for the Whole Year," another seed book of the high quality for which this firm's catalogues have long been notable. Contains eighty-eight large pages, finely illustrated, partly in colors, and printed with exceptional clearness and accuracy, on enameled paper. The general list, in condensed form in the first part of the book, is followed by pictures and descriptions of novelties and specialties.

Colorado Seed Co., Denver, Colo.—"Special Price List of Dependable Seeds in Bulk; Condensed Pocket Edition"; forty-eight closely printed pages; also offers of bulbs, plants, nursery stock, garden and farm tools, poultry supplies, goldfish, birds, artificial palms, etc. "Our specialty," says the company, "is seed in bulk."

Zack Davis Co., Delaware, O.—"Davis Superior Seeds, Grown at Elm Valley Seed Gardens"; also bulbs, plants, general nursery stock, insecticides, etc.; seventy pages, illustrated.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES.

Special Telegram.

Los Angeles, January 31.—Owing to new washouts, trains are not yet running over the Union Pacific to southern Arizona points and beyond. The Santa Fe railroad is open to Prescott and northern points. The delay in shipments of cut flowers, plants and nursery stock is due to the crippled transportation. The weather now, however, appears to have settled, and by the time this is in print everything probably will be normal. Those awaiting shipments should bear with conditions for a few days.

The Market.

Roses continue scarce, and of poor color in most cases, but there is evidence of brighter weather being on the way, so we hope for better things shortly. Since last writing it has rained more or less every day—usually more. So much rain has fallen that even the orange growers say they have had enough. Too much rain, it seems, damages the skin of the ripe fruit.

A great difference is noted, at such times as these, between the carnations grown in the foothill districts and those near the beaches or in the valleys. The soil in the former locations is more or less decomposed granite, mixed with finer silt, and here the flowers are firmer in texture and last longer than from the lower-lying land near the ocean. In dry weather the difference is not so marked, but it is quite apparent that much of the shore land is about worked out for carnation growing. Freesias are arriving in fine shape and, as usual early in the season, sell well. Violets are plentiful and cheap, but the demand is good. It is strange that, with the fine violet climate, so few growers handle the double varieties here. Bulbous stock is coming along fast now, many of the later daffodils making their appearance this week. Last season's importations of Dutch bulbs are not making a particularly good showing so far; many tulips are apparently of especially poor quality. Lily of the valley is in fair demand, but the supply is limited.

The scarcity of plants is also being felt now. Primula obconica, in its best hybrid forms, is among the prettiest offerings in low-priced staples. Some nice cyclamens still are offered, as well as a sprinkling of azaleas, mostly held-over stock. Lilacs are poor this year and this is also true of most of the imported hardy shrubs that are usually forced at this season. The double white form of Prunus Amygdalus is as pretty as anything now offered. Greens remain plentiful and of good quality. Large Boston ferns are scarce, but there is an abundance of small and medium grades. Funeral work keeps up well.

Various Notes.

One of the prettiest of the small-flowered roses now becoming so popular is Baby Elegance. The fully developed flowers are like a small edition of those of Irish Elegance, but as grown under glass by H. W. Turner at Montebello the bud is not so brightly tinted, being a kind of buff rather than crimson. It is a lovely little flower, nevertheless, and so free-blooming that Mr. Turner confesses to an inability to raise it as fast as he wishes, though a large block of it in one of the new houses hardly bears this out.

Walter Armacost & Co. are reported to have under consideration the erection of four more large greenhouses. Mr. Armacost says he finds it impossible to keep pace with the increasing demand, even with the present large and modern range; hence the increase.

C. E. Morton, who left here with Mrs. Morton recently, to drive to Tucson, Ariz., must have had some lively experiences in the storm. At one spot the radiator and hood of the car had to be wrapped in blankets preparatory to fording a stream, and when last heard of they were marooned in Phoenix, waiting for the waters to recede.

A recent shipment of flowers left the store of S. Murata & Co. on Saturday and, owing to washouts on the rail, was returned by the express company the next Tuesday afternoon. The stock was found in excellent condition and this speaks volumes for the careful way in which stock is packed by this well-known firm. Mr. Murata says that business is about twenty-five per cent better than at this time last year. I noted some splendid freesias being shipped.

W. H. Eldred, of Eldred's Flower Shop, Pasadena, has been laid up for a few days at his home.

The L. A. Floral Co. reports that the firm had little trouble in shipping during the recent disturbance of traffic. This was owing to careful routing and rerouting over different lines, where necessary to reach given points. Extremely few complaints were received. A shipment from here recently went to Battle Creek, Mich., and was reported in good shape.

The landscape department of the Germain Seed & Plant Co. has been awarded the contract for planting the new parkways on the West Adams boulevard. While orders have piled up somewhat on ornamentals and other balled stock which it was impossible to get out of the ground, fruit stock, roses and plants have been kept moving.

Tom Wright spends his time about equally between the store, the greenhouses at Gardena and his hog ranch at Bakersfield, and things seem to be humming at all three places. The roses arriving at the store are excellent now and a fine cut is on, despite the recent dull and rainy weather.

The Redondo Floral Co. moved to its new quarters, on Seventh street, Janu-uary 24. The store is spacious and attractive in white enamel, and both A. Knopf and F. Borden say they are delighted with the change. Not only are there many more people passing the store, but a far better class of customers enter it, improving the transient trade greatly.

Fred Rafferty, of Santa Ana, is on a trip to Japan.

George Watson expects to start right away to build more glass, or rather to rebuild some of that removed from Boyle Heights.

Another eighteen hours' heavy rain has occurred and is being followed at this date, January 27, by a high wind that cannot fail to be harmful, especially to newly planted stock. The water in the city streets and some other districts is higher today than at any time during the storm.

The rumor as to G. W. Newman having been shot in Mexico was, as the late Mark Twain remarked, "greatly exaggerated." H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

There have been heavy rains and scarcely any sunshine since January 1, so that naturally stock of all kinds is short. Spring flowers are more of a feature, for a day or two of milder temperature brought out a fair showing. Everything is late and prices rule high. Many retailers complain that they cannot make money with stock at the present prices, although business has been of a larger volume than might be expected. Funeral orders are numerous.

Freesias are in fair supply and finer than those of last year. Chinese lilies, Paper Whites and snowdrops are increasing every day, but still command extreme prices. The latter are being worked in a good deal in place of valley, which is extremely scarce. The showing of daffodils is meager as yet, though great quantities are ready to bloom with the first touch of good weather. Roman hyacinths are in limited supply, while a few lots of hyacinths and tulips come in every day. Carnations still are high, but are likely to ease off in a few days. Roses are scarce, but most of the stock appearing is good, especially Beauties. Ophelia and Russell are in strong demand and Prima Donna finds much favor. There are hardly any Cecile Brunner roses at present. Violets are coming more heavily, but really fine stock is scarce. Cyclamen continues good and is considerably used, both cut and in pots. Cut primulas and heather help out in the absence of other stock. Gardenias are almost entirely off crop and Easter lilies are scarce, the demand being rather strong. Compared with ordinary conditions, orchids are the most plentiful in the market, including a good many fine varieties. Many good azaleas are coming in, but there are few rhododendrons. Good camellias find a ready sale. Asparagus is scarce. Considerable acacia is used, the blooms being forced. A novel and attractive article is the native manzanita brush, which is blooming unusually well, the glossy red bark and small white and pinkish bells making a fine appearance.

Various Notes.

F. Pelicano, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., is bringing in good schizanthus for the store. He is cutting many primulas from his own plants, and his lavender violet, Quaker Lady, is beginning to bloom sufficiently to make a window showing. It is a pleasing novelty, but the cut still is rather light.

Daniel Raymond, of the Garden City Pottery Co., returned a few days ago from his trip to the eastern pottery manufacturers, and is making his usual rounds of the trade.

N. Peterson, of the Peninsula Nursery, says he has been staying up nights looking after the heat in his carnation houses, but that the way carnations sell now he considers them worth losing a little sleep over. However, he is considering putting in an oil-burning system, as not only easier to handle but cheaper than coal.

As a result of a meeting of the stockholders and directors of the Luther Burbank Co., it has been decided to throw the concern into liquidation rather than attempt to refinance it. The local store was closed after the holidays.

The Motroni flower store on Fillmore street has been showing some ranunculus the last few days, which Mr. Motroni believes are the first to appear here this season. He had a few vases of the pretty pink and white chrysanthemum, Queen Florida, which were quite an attraction.

Neal T. Childs, who last year started a flower store in Oakland as headquarters for his landscape engineering work, has closed the store and opened an office in San Francisco, intending to give his entire attention to landscape and decorative work.

J. A. Carbone is bringing in quite a lot of sprays of the hybrid odontoglossum that scored ninety-nine points at the last Horticultural Society meeting. He has a house of Phalænopsis Schilleriana about ready, and the stock is to be used in Valentine displays.

Everybody wants to be Pete Ferrari's friend, for he is bringing in about the only valley to be had in this market. He has only a light cut, which is being distributed as fairly as possible among his regular trade, and has enough in cold storage to last a month or two longer. He is doing fairly well with his roses, especially Ophelia, and has quite a lot of forced tulips and hyacinths. He reports a good market for azaleas, of which he still has a large stock. He expects a good batch of rhododendrons in another month. Ferrari Bros. recently purchased a motor truck to carry stock between their nursery and the downtown stores.

F. Schlotzhauer, of the Francis Floral

The Market.

A few days of normal winter weather were followed last week by another spell of cold and snow. The total snowfall for January was about two feet, breaking all records since 1890. During the normal weather a strong wind came up from the south and did some damage to the greenhouse ranges situated in exposed places. Late reports of the first cold spell are that several ranges suffered from frost in a greater or less degree. Considering that the greenhouses here are not equipped with heating plants designed to keep up growing temperatures against such cold winds, it is not surprising that some damage was done.

At the nurseries no attempt is made to fill orders except from stock in storage, and orders are piling up which will cause a rush when the weather permits. The seedsmen are taking advantage of the lull in business to make changes in their stores and put up retail packets of seeds.

There was more than a normal quantity of funeral work, and the graduating exercises at the schools resulted in considerable business. Carnations are coming in more plentifully—thanks to the few bright days—and the supply of bulbous stock has increased. Daffodils, tulips, freesias, Romans and Paper Whites, potted and cut, are seen in most of the window displays. Cinerarias, cyclamens, azaleas, ericas, begonias and spiræas are the leaders in potted blooming stock. A few sweet peas are seen and there is a fair supply of home-grown violets. Valley has been scarce all winter and the future supply is not fully assured.

Various Notes.

Clarke Bros. showed the first Dutch hyacinths. This firm furnished the bouquets for graduates in all the high schools. More than 1,500 daffodils were used in the bouquets for one school.

B. E. Wadsworth, who has been foreman of the Tonseth Floral Co. range for the last five years, has taken a position with the Marshfield Floral Co.

J. G. Bacher reports the loss from frost of several varieties of newly imported Japanese shrubs which were supposed to be perfectly hardy.

J. B. Pilkington is building a lath house 44x144 at his nursery at Durham station. It will be used to store lifted stock and serve as a shelter for newly imported stock. S. W. W.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. J.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.
Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 28 to 30, 1916.

COMPETENT landscape men again are in strong demand for nurseries that do a retail business.

"WE sell a tremendous lot of shrubs and perennials to florists through listing them with prices in the Classified section of The Review." It was a prominent middle-western nurseryman who said it.

WILLIAM C. BARRY, perennial president of the Western New York Horticultural Society, was again reëlected at the meeting held at Rochester January 26 to 28. Most of the nurserymen of the state were present, there being a fine exhibition and a large attendance of fruit growers.

NURSERYMEN, whether or not they deal largely in pecan trees, will be interested in Farmers' Bulletin No. 700, issued January 18 by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. It is by C. A. Reed and bears the title: "Pecan Culture; with Special Reference to Propagation and Varieties."

THE Aurora Nursery Co., Aurora, Ill., is organizing a department to handle retail planting work in any part of the central states in which it is not represented by florist agents or customers. The plans were developed by J. A. Young, the manager, while confined to the hospital with a severely cut wrist.

DISTRIBUTION OF IMPORTS.

Since the federal quarantine law went into effect there have been compiled many interesting statistics not previously available. For instance, the Federal Horticultural Board, with its records of the disposition of every case of nursery stock imported during the last two years, finds the following to have been the distribution by states of all nursery stock brought into this country from abroad during the fiscal years ended June 30:

TENNESSEE NURSERYMEN MEET.

At the eleventh annual meeting of the Tennessee State Nurserymen's Association, held at Maxwell House, Nashville, January 26, the following officers were elected: President, A. I. Smith, Knoxville; active vice-president, A. J. Byrne, Dickson; vice-president for east Tennessee, H. N. Camp, Knoxville; vice-president for middle Tennessee, J. W. Shadow, Winchester; vice-president for west Tennessee, W. W. Baird, Humboldt; secretary-treasurer, G. M. Bentley, Knoxville.

The program was one of unusual interest and was as follows:

"Relation of the Department of Agriculture to the Nursery Business of Tennessee," by H. K. Bryson, state commissioner of agriculture.
"The Cost of a Southern-Grown Tree," by A. I. Smith, of Knoxville.
"The Area in Which the Pecan May Be Profitably Grown," by W. C. Reed, of Vincennes, Ind.
"Up-to-date Methods of Fighting the San Jose Scale," by J. D. Ellis, of Dayton, Tenn.
"Is a Uniform System of Grading Practicable?" by John L. Jones, of Columbia, Tenn.
"The Effect of the War on Foreign Shipments of Nursery Stock," by Henry B. Chase, of Chase, Ala.
"Experimental Orchards for Nurserymen," by Thos. D. Reed, of Baker, Tenn.
"Pruning of General Nursery Stock," by A. A. Newson, of Knoxville.
"Credits," by Harry Nicholson, of Winchester, Tenn.
"The Nurseryman as a Good Citizen," by C. T. Smith, of Concord, Ga.
"A Talk," by Miss Virginia P. Moore, of Knoxville.
"Importance of Strawberry Plant Inspection," by J. E. Blake, of Straw Plains, Tenn.
"Scion Wood from Bearing Trees vs. Scion Wood from Nursery," by J. C. Hale, of Winchester, Tenn.
"Influence of Stock Upon Scion," by O. M. Watson, University of Tennessee, Knoxville.
"Crown Gall, or Hairy Root, on Nursery Stock," by A. W. Ward, of Loudon, Tenn.
"Prices," by Miss E. B. Drake, of Winchester, Tenn.
"New Ornamentals," by Bruce Howell, of Knoxville.
"Better Understanding Between Nurserymen and the Florists, and the Home," by W. F. Bohlender, of Tippecanoe City, O.

On motion of D. T. Kimbaugh the association placed itself on record as favoring equal suffrage in Tennessee.

N. E. NURSERYMEN MEET.

Optimistic comment on the future of the nursery business in New England characterized the fifth annual convention of the New England Nurserymen's Association, which was held at Hotel Worthy, Springfield, Mass., January 25 and 26. The attendance during the 2-day session was fair, there being more than sixty members from all parts of New England present.

The meeting was opened at 1:30 p. m. with an address by Charles H. Greaton, of Providence, R. I., then president of the association. The reports of the committees on publicity, membership, legislation and on standardization in sizes of nursery stock were all made, and nominating and auditing committees were appointed. Previous to the scheduled addresses, the convention heard several addresses by state nursery inspectors.

The principal paper was read by W. E. Campbell, of New Haven, Conn., who spoke on "Assembling, Packing and Shipping Systems." Harlan P. Kelsey, of Boston, spoke on "Surplus Nursery Stock and Its Disposal." This paper brought forth some interesting discussions. It was the general opinion of those who spoke that nursery stock should not be grown over and above the general demand for any given year. It was regarded as poor business practice to retain old stock.

The election of officers on the second day of the annual meeting resulted as follows: President, George C. Thurlow, of West Newburg, Mass.; vice-president, A. P. Horne, of Manchester, N. H.; secretary, Daniel A. Clarke, of Fiskeville, R. I.; treasurer, V. A. Vanicek, of Newport, R. I. The executive committee consists of W. W. Hunt, of Hart-

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Last week the sun was conspicuous by its absence, and while we had a surfeit of rain during most of the week, toward the end it turned colder and we had a snow storm for variation. Stock has been scarce and, although the market is easing up somewhat, there is not enough of any item, with the possible exception of carnations and violets.

Carnations have shown a marked increase in quantity, but they are seriously lacking in quality. The stock is weak and splits form a large percentage of the cut. Prices are not so strong as they were, but stock is clearing up each day and is bringing good returns. Roses show little increase and the shortage, especially on the cheaper grades, still is acute. The quality shows no deterioration and orders are turned down daily. Violets are moving well, although the cut has increased materially. The quality is about the same. Sweet peas are beginning to come in heavily and are cleaning up daily. This seems to have little or no influence on the violet sales, which show no falling off.

Stevia has been in large supply and has sold tremendously well this season. The crop is on the wane but still cuts a big figure in the market. Valley remains scarce and is none too good. It is cleaning up each day with no difficulty, at fair prices. Orchids are in good demand, and since the visit of our President and Mrs. Wilson January 31 we expect that the call for them will be much heavier. Mrs. Wilson carried a huge bouquet of orchids and wore a single bloom at her collar. This variation from the usual was not lost upon the ladies of the community and no social function will be complete unless my lady has at least one orchid worn conspicuously.

Various Notes.

A. Schiller, who recently underwent a serious operation, is reported somewhat better and the hopes are much brighter for his recovery, although that will not be for some time.

Walter Holton is getting restless at the hospital and longs to get into the harness again. Although he is recovering rapidly, the doctors will not let him exert himself for several weeks at least, and he probably will not be on the job until the early part of March.

J. Karins, with Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, visited the trade here January 29. C. B. Knickman, with McHutchison & Co., New York, came in January 31 and spent the day accumulating orders and chatting on current topics. H. J. S.

Little Rock, Ark.—A disastrous fire destroyed the home and most of the greenhouses of H. Meyer, but the store was untouched. Mr. Meyer will continue the business from the same place, 1623 College street.

The New Rose, MRS. BAYARD THAYER,

that we are offering this season, will make a fine addition to a class of large-flowered roses which is rapidly coming to the front, since we introduced Mrs. Charles Russell, of which the new claimant is a sport. The color is a most beautiful clear rose pink, inside of petals a shade lighter. The foliage heavy and smooth and carried on strong stems. It won the American Rose Society medal, over a strong class of competitors, at the Cleveland Show, scoring 90 points

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Real summer weather, with a temperature of 71 degrees January 30, has not helped trade to any great extent. There is enough stock of all kinds to meet the demand, except roses, which are at their worst, and it will be some time before the local supply will be in.

Carnations are coming in fast and prices will drop. Lilies still are short of the demand, but tulips and Trumpet narcissi are helping out. Violets seem to have almost lost their place in the stores and it has been up to the street fakers to dispose of them, which means poor returns for the growers. The wholesalers are beginning to carry stock over; for the first time this year they have use for their refrigerators. The retail stores nearly all report a slight slump; even funeral work has dropped off. Seasonable weather would, no doubt, improve conditions somewhat.

Various Notes.

Ernest Zieger, of Philadelphia, has been spending a few days visiting his brother, Herman, of Aspinwall, and, incidentally, calling on his old friends in the city.

Eugene Dailledouze, of New York, stopped off long enough on his way home from the west and south to make a visit to Bakerstown.

The Horticultural Society of Western Pennsylvania met January 24 in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce. J. K. M. L. Farquhar gave his lantern lecture on "The Gardens of China and Japan" and had a splendid audience. Quite a number of the members of the Garden Club and the Florists' Club were present and spent a pleasant evening.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday, February 2, at the Fort Pitt hotel.

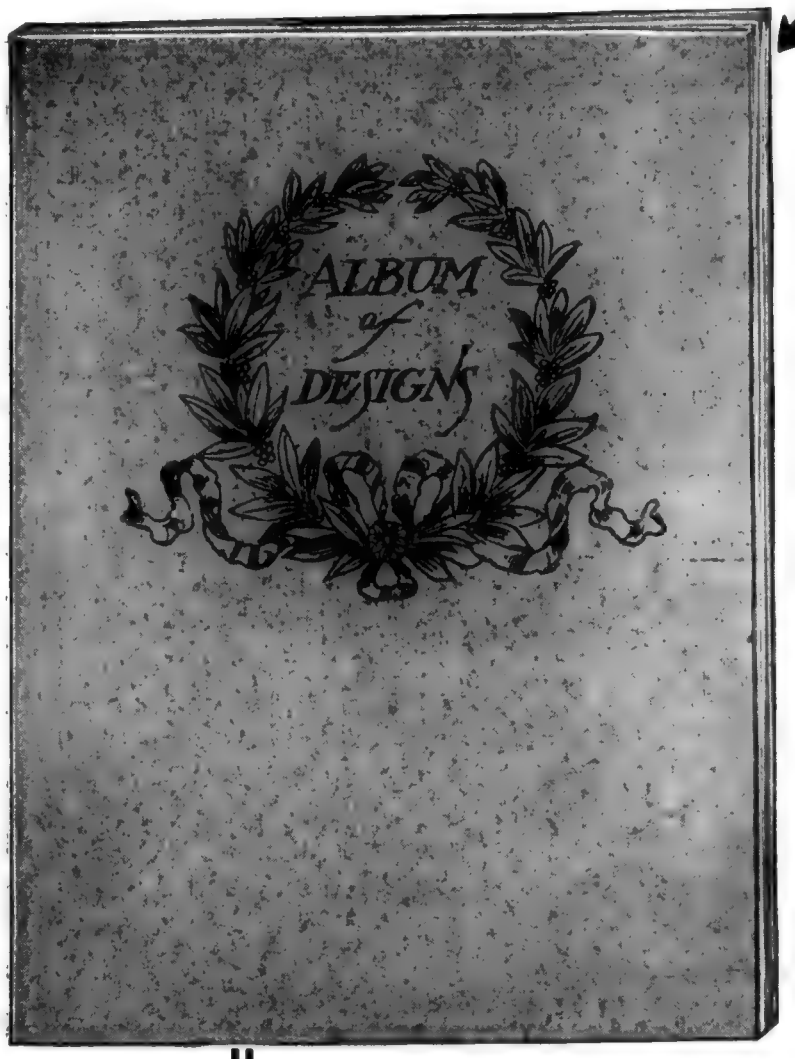
The Best Red

If you attended the A. C. S. Convention at St. Louis last week, you no doubt looked over carefully the showing of the new reds (everybody is looking for a good red). Some of them may have caught your fancy, in which case you may have bought for next year's planting. On the other hand, each one may have lacked something and you are still undecided. In that case, we invite you to come and look over a scarlet which we propose to disseminate in 1917.



This one lacks nothing, in the opinion of the many experts who have visited here during this season. It has color, size, stem, constitution and freedom. As one visitor put it, "there is no gamble in buying this one."

Let this be a standing invitation for you to come and see "Merry Christmas" growing.

We are booking orders right along now at $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000. Don't wait until all the early cuttings are sold, but "do it now."

Album of Designs

(A Book Every Retailer Needs)

THE original Album of Designs was published in response to many requests from florists who felt the need for an up-to-date book that could be used in taking orders for Funeral Designs, Wedding Decorations and Bouquets, Table Decorations and all cut flower work where it was not practicable to show the customer the finished article as it would be when ready for use. With the publication of this album it became possible to show the finished work in beautifully printed pictures. The first edition sold like hot cakes, and a second edition went quickly. Now a third edition is off the press. Everything is in it—all the standard designs and many new and heretofore unpublished pieces.

DORNER'S NOVELTY FOR 1916

New Salmon Pink Carnation
NANCY

Color, light salmon pink, a little darker than Pink Delight and a more even color. Blooms are good commercial size, three inches and over, nicely formed and have never shown a bursted calyx. Stems always hold the flower upright. The habit is a quick productive growth and as a producer it stands highest among commercial varieties. Color does not fade. Fragrance is very noticeable. Having an excellent cerise pink and an improved yellow to offer in 1917, we have decided to disseminate the variety NANCY this year (1916). For a light pink that will produce quantities of bloom and is commercially good in every respect, plant NANCY. The stock is limited and orders will be filled in rotation as received. Price, rooted cuttings, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

WILL A READER ANSWER?

Can you tell me what is best to use for plants that have lost their color? This condition seems quite bad here. Nearly all kinds of plants, shrubs and even some trees seem to lose chlorophyll, or green coloring matter, to the extent of becoming yellow and perfectly white at times, causing lots of stock to die. One man told me that according to government analysis of the soil it is deficient in phosphoric acid, iron and potash. He advised giving copperas to bring back color. I did this successfully, but in some cases it seemed to burn the edges of the leaves. I have used quantities of sand, trying to give perfect drainage, but even this does not altogether relieve conditions. The trouble may be in the water, which is artesian. It seems to have considerable lime and magnesia. This is a soft limestone formation in this district. Pot plants or plants bedded out are affected in this way, more especially plants that make surface roots. I have thought of using sulphate of potash with a little sulphate of iron added, also nitrate of soda with the iron. Kindly advise what is best to do. J. V. H.—Texas.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The exceptionally warm weather that prevailed last week affected the supply of cut flowers so that by Thursday the receipts became heavier and the prices dropped. The street fakers were on the streets with cut flowers of all kinds, including sweet peas, the first since the mum season. Business has increased, but not so rapidly as the supply.

Of carnations, a good percentage are splits, but even then all the good stock is not being moved. In roses the supply has greatly increased, with the demand mostly for short and medium grades. The longer stock in many cases sold for the price of good mediums. Daffodils and Paper Whites are in oversupply and hard to move even at a low price. Valley and violets are plentiful and move slowly. The weather also has greatly impaired the keeping quality of stock, and carnations deteriorate in a short time, even if they are freshly cut. Tulips are coming in more heavily and are moving well at a fair price.

Various Notes.

The R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co. has its stock in good shape this season and the men are working night and day on shipping orders. Recently a carload of dahlias containing 23,000 clumps were shipped as one order.

Lohr & Fritze are sending good Double White Killarney roses to the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. The stems run from thirty to thirty-six inches long and the buds are equal in size to large Beauties.

Philip B. Welsh is sending in a fine lot of La Reine and Yellow Prince tulips, as well as a good rose-pink variety.

Halliday Bros. are showing some fine cyclamens at their store on Charles street, which were grown at the Monkton greenhouses.

Samuel Feast & Sons had an elaborate decoration for a large banquet held at Hotel Rennert last week. Large numbers of potted lilacs, azaleas, palms, pink roses and rubrum lilies were used.

The Hamilton Flower Shop is showing several effective arrangements of spring flowers in its display window. Snapdragons, calendulas, yellow carnations and tulips are being used.

J. J. Perry visited Philadelphia last week to get a line on the coming National Flower Show, for he is a member of the local committee which is working up interest in this show. W. F. E.

The Sensational Yellow Mum of the Year

MRS. M. R. MORGAN

A PURE GOLDEN YELLOW EATON

We guarantee this to be the best-selling late-midseason Yellow Mum on the market

Took Third Prize at big Cleveland Flower Show in Big Yellows. Packs and travels perfectly. It is such a profitable variety to grow that we grew no other variety at our greenhouses last season. It is an intensely brilliant yellow sport of Yellow Eaton and finishes the season at Thanksgiving. We find no equal as a keeper.

ROSES

RED RADIANCE—A sport of Radiance that will be welcomed as a valuable addition to the list of greenhouse Roses and will be of greatest value for the garden. Grafted or Own Root, 2¼-in., $2.50 per doz., $17.50 per 100, $150.00 per 1000.

MRS. WM. R. HEARST—A clear, dark pink sport of My Maryland. The equal of Maryland in habit and growth, and far superior to it in color. Grafted or Own Root, 2¼-in., $2.50 per doz., $17.50 per 100, $150.00 per 1000.

HOOSIER BEAUTY—Deep, rich crimson in color. We have a large stock of this new Rose and can fill your order to your satisfaction. Grafted, 2¼-in., $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100, $140.00 per 1000; OwnRoot, 2¼-in., $1.50 per doz., $10.00 per 100, $90.00 per 1000.

HADLEY—With both Hadley and the above-named variety we have to offer the two best red Roses in commerce. Grafted, 2¼-in., $1.50 per doz., $12.50 per 100, $120.00 per 1000; Own Root, 2¼-in., $1.00 per doz., $7.50 per 100, $60.00 per 1000.

CARNATION NOVELTIES

MISS THEO—(Littlefield & Wyman.) We have 4000 plants of Miss Theo growing here at Cromwell. We can verify the assertion that it is the most prolific Carnation on the market today. The color is true rose pink. The flower is well formed, but not large. It will be a profitable variety. Rooted Cuttings, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

NEBRASKA—We can fill your order for this new scarlet. It appears to us to be one of the finest of the novelties of the year. Rooted Cuttings, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

RED WING—From observation of this variety growing, we believe it is well worth a thorough trial. It looks prolific and the flowers are of fine quality. Rooted Cuttings, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

ALICE—By far the finest light pink Carnation from the standpoint of freedom and profitableness. We have excellent stock for February delivery. Rooted Cuttings, $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000. We cannot accept orders for Good Cheer for earlier than March 15th delivery.

THE BIG FOUR

OPHELIA, DOUBLE WHITE KILLARNEY, KILLARNEY BRILLIANT and MRS. AARON WARD—The four best greenhouse Roses for general growing, $12.50 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

These varieties are better grafted than own root. If wanted on own roots, the price is $7.50 per 100, $60.00 per 1000.

MRS. GEORGE SHAWYER and LADY ALICE STANLEY—On their own roots, $7.50 per 100, $60.00 per 1000.

BEDDING PLANTS

COLEUS, HELIOTROPE, SALVIA, PETUNIAS, FUCHSIAS and other stock. VINCA VARIEGATA cuttings. Write us your wants. Refer to the classified ads.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

GOLDEN GLEAM OUR NOVELTY FOR 1916

As a novelty of the year we are offering a seedling of our own raising. It is a bright, glistening yellow in color; medium dwarf in growth. Fully as good two to a plant as single. Matures Oct. 20th to Nov. 1st. Second crown buds were the best. 2¼-in., $1.50 per doz., $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

LAST SEASON'S NOVELTIES

Rooted Cuttings, $7.00 per 100, $60.00 per 1000.

CRYSTAL GEM—A fine, pure white. Midseason.

EARLY FROST—The best early white variety. We have a big lot ready for delivery.

GOLDEN QUEEN—The best yellow since Chrysolora. This is the general opinion.

MARIGOLD—A fancy 'Mum for the careful grower. When well done, it is the best yellow variety in commerce.

MODELLO—Bronze, maturing in early November. Handsome as a Cactus Dahlia.

WHITE CHIEFTAIN—For early delivery we offer fine stock of this high-class variety at $4.00 per 100, $35.00 per 1000. This means January and February delivery, and we have ample stock for your requirements.

GOLDEN EATON—Better in color than Yellow Eaton. One of the finest of the new 'Mums. Early delivery, $4.00 per 100, $35.00 per 1000.

A NEW POMPON

PEACE—A beautiful shell pink; one of the finest varieties ever offered. 2¼-in., $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100.

SINGLES

RAMONA—Deep, rich bronze in color. One of the finest varieties ever offered. Exhibited in the winning five vases at Cleveland. 2¼-in., $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100.

DUSKY MAID—Orange-bronze in color. Well-built, semi-double flowers carried well apart on spray. The finest variety for Thanksgiving. 2¼-in., 2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100.

The Cromwell Gardens Set and the Mount Greenwood Set are offered in our catalog. Look them over. They are improvements on existing varieties and worthy of general growing.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus

We make a specialty of seedlings. We offer now 50,000 seedlings ready for potting. Big, strong seedlings. Big value at $8.00 per 1000; 2500 at $7.50 per 1000; 5000 at $7.00 per 1000.

We deliver anywhere, all charges paid, for 50c. per 1000 in addition to price quoted.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade was fair last week; stock was unusually scarce. Carnations are in fairly good supply, but roses are not sufficient for half the demand for them and the prices are out of sight. Jonquils are becoming more plentiful, but the prices still are high. Freesias, valley, lilies, sweet peas, Paper Whites and Romans are finding a ready market. The trade on violets has been a trifle dull. There is a good supply of pot plants, which meet a fair demand. The weather has been cloudy and we have had much rain. The city is in danger of another flood if the rain continues.

Various Notes.

A party of eastern growers, composed of Samuel Goddard and William Nicholson, of Framingham, Mass.; C. S. Strout, of Biddeford, Me.; A. Roper, of Tewksbury, Mass.; William E. Lenk, of Halifax, Mass.; A. Montgomery, of Natick, Mass., and Ernest Saunders, of Lewiston, Me., stopped off at Indianapolis on their way home from the Carnation Society convention at St. Louis, to pay a visit to Baur & Steinkamp and inspect the firm's carnations. These gentlemen were well pleased with their visit, stating that the carnations were the finest they had seen on their trip west. The easterners were the guests of Baur & Steinkamp for dinner at the Claypool hotel before their departure for Richmond, Ind., where they visited the E. G. Hill establishment.

Hartje & Elder are going to add two new houses to their plant next year. They intend to grow carnations in the new additions.

William Hament has acquired the interest of Walter Hanson in the firm of Hament & Hanson, and will have full charge in the future.

H. F. Winter, of Charleston, W. Va.; S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia; Julius Dilloff, with Schloss Bros., New York, and R. Zetlitz, of Lima, O., were visitors last week.

The Indianapolis florists who attended the carnation convention at St. Louis last week are all well pleased with their efforts in securing the next convention for Indianapolis. These gentlemen were high in their praise of the St. Louis florists for the manner in which the show was handled and the hospitality shown the visiting florists.

The A. Wiegand's Sons Co. has purchased glass for two new houses, to be built this year. H. L. W.

Craig Quality Ferns and Cyclamen

NEPHROLEPIS JOHN WANAMAKER

Introduced August, 1915

The Wanamaker Boston has more than made good. Everyone who has received early shipments from us has been greatly pleased with the variety and repeat orders have been coming in daily. We have a very large stock. A "sport" from Nephrolepis Scholzeli, with longer, narrower, gracefully drooping fronds. It is not so compact in growth as Scholzeli and therefore does not decay in the center, and is a durable house fern. It is a rapid grower, making an abundance of fronds, and is quite distinct from any other Nephrolepis. The following prices are for immediate and spring delivery:

2¼-inch pots, strong plants $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.
4-inch pots, strong plants, $25.00 per 100; $225.00 per 1000.
6-inch pots, strong plants, $50.00 per 100.
8-inch pots, strong plants, $12.00 and $15.00 per doz.

MUMS -- FOUR WINNERS

Japanese Anemone C. L. HUTCHINSON

In this variety we have the ideal Anemone. The color of the petals is a pure white and the center a bright yellow, making a beautiful contrast. It is a good grower, splendid dark foliage, and, the best of all for pot work, needs no support.

Japanese Anemone MARIE POOLE

Very distinct and beautiful flower, which is very large, and the color is a combination of bronzy salmon, flushed with pink; the high center is bright orange yellow. One of the oddest and most novel flowers ever introduced. Good pot plant.

Single Anemone MRS. CARRIE RYERSON

Creamy white; very good habit; needs no support. An excellent variety for Thanksgiving. Makes good pot plant.

Single Anemone THOMAS DUNN

A very free bloomer, good foliage; ten to twelve flowers on spray, open at once. Color yellow, under petals bronzy yellow. Splendid keeper. Blooms for Thanksgiving and is good two weeks or more afterwards. Needs no support.

The Market.

The supply is again heavy and, barring extremely cold and cloudy weather, it is sufficient for all immediate needs. Prices have dropped somewhat from their high plane of the last two weeks.

Roses, while apparently sufficient for present needs, still are far from plentiful. The carnation cut is large and the blooms arriving are of good quality. There are, however, quite a few splits in the cut. Easter lilies are plentiful and have commenced to crowd a little. Valley is in larger supply than it was. Sweet peas, violets and orchids are plentiful. The narcissus, jonquil and daffodil cuts are equal to present needs. Other offerings include rubrum lilies, callas, primroses, marguerites and white and colored freesias.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

THE COAL MARKET.

Since the last boom in the coal business, unseasonably mild weather has intervened, but the unfilled orders that accumulated during the cold wave are still almost sufficient to keep the entire trade busy, from the mine operators to the retailers. Besides, many users of coal, actuated by the fear that the miners may strike at the expiration of their present wage contract, are buying fuel for storage. There seem to be good reasons for hoping that a strike may be avoided, but many of the consumers believe that full coal bins are the best guarantee against future trouble and are acting accordingly. Thus the held-over orders, combined with the demand for fuel for storage, are keeping the market firm. The call for mine-run smokeless is fairly strong and the circular price, $1.40 at the mines, is generally maintained.

WANTS A HIGHER TEMPERATURE.

My greenhouses are piped for hot water heat. One of the houses is 25x 50; it is exposed on both sides and the walls contain three feet of glass and two and one-half feet of board siding; the gables are not exposed; it has twelve 4-inch flows and return mains, running the length of the house. Another house is 17x32, running north and south; it has five 4-inch flows and returns, running around it. Another house is 15x20, exposed on three sides; it has eight 4-inch pipes. There is also a lean-to, 8x25, which has three 4-inch pipes in it. A hot water boiler is installed. Though the circulation seems to be good, I can not keep a temperature of 50 degrees when the outside temperature is 5 or 10 degrees above zero, except with strenuous firing.

Can I install an auxiliary steam boiler, and thus, with the help of the hot water boiler, raise the temperature in the houses to 65 degrees in zero weather? What is the smallest size of pipe that I could use successfully with it, and how should the pipes be run to be drained of condensation? Where should the pipes be located? The present hot water pipes are under the benches. The steam plant must be located on the greenhouse level. What size of steam boiler is necessary? Can I burn wood in it? Would a stationary steam boiler do the work satisfactorily, or would it be better to get a sectional steam boil-

THE HEATING PROBLEM SOLVED
Judging strictly according to mechanical merits, it's the METROPOLITAN PATENTED BOILER you want.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel and less attention than any other boiler on the market.

The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface.

Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit:—Smooth, perfect finished castings. Push nipple connections. Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals. Deep ash pit, making the removal of ashes a slight task. Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean. Grates that are made for hard usage and long service. And above all, they are Fuel Saving, not Fuel Wasting.

We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50 per cent in coal.

er? My plan is to keep a fire in it only on extremely cold nights and for short periods, to get the desired heat.

J. T.—N. Y.

So far as we can judge from the description given, the houses have ample radiation for 60 degrees, except, perhaps, the lean-to. If the house 17x32 has five 4-inch pipes running around three sides, these should be sufficient for 65 or even 70 degrees.

From the statement that the steam boiler must be on the greenhouse level, it occurs to us that the heating pipes in the hot water system may be below the top of the boiler, and that arrangement would tend to check the flow of the water. If the boiler can not be lowered, we would suggest installing a mercury generator, provided the pipes have screw joints and will stand ten or fifteen pounds of pressure. It would be a simple matter to install an auxiliary steam system, were it possible to have the top of the boiler two feet below the returns, but under the conditions stated it would be necessary to use either a steam trap, or a steam or electric pump, which we do not recommend in a small plant where there is no night fireman.

One-inch pipe may be used in the coils for steam heating. To raise the temperature 15 degrees above the temperatures furnished by the present hot water plant, the various houses will require the following steam radiation: In the house 25x50, put in one 1½-inch overhead feed pipe and bring back three 1-inch returns on each side wall. In the house 17x32, add one flow and two returns on each wall. For the house 15x20, put in one 1¼-inch flow and two 1-inch returns on each wall. In the lean-to, use a 1¼-inch flow on the back wall and carry two 1-inch returns around on the outer walls.

The two independent houses will require about 100 square feet of steam radiation each. To furnish the required steam for this radiation, a 10-horsepower boiler will be needed, and if considerably larger than this it will require less frequent attention. A horizontal boiler is preferable to one with vertical tubes when set on the surface. Constant attention will be required if wood is used as fuel.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Oyster Bay Horticultural Society was held in the Truck House, Oyster Bay, January 26. President Alfred Walker occupied the chair. Several new members were elected to active membership. James Duthie, Duncan Beaton and Charles Millburn were appointed as judges of the exhibits and their decisions were as follows: Society prize for twelve pink carnations—James Bell, first. Twelve white carnations—Wm. Ford, first. Twelve carnations, any color—Arthur Patten, first. One pot of primula—Frank Kyle, first. Table of cut flowers—John Sorosick, honorable mention. Bunch of violets—A. Walker, honorable mention. Vase of narcissi—A. Walker, honorable mention. Twelve seedling carnations shown by Hermann Schwarz were recommended by the judges to be shown again. Exhibits for the February meeting are one pot of cinerarias, twelve mushrooms and six antirrhinums.

A PROMINENT CARNATION GROWER SAYS THIS ABOUT THE STANDARD RECORDING THERMOMETER

Lancaster, Pa.

Standard Thermometer Co., Boston, Mass.

Gentlemen: Please send me 25 record plates like the enclosed sample, and I want to say that the machine, bought a good many years back, is keeping up its good work right along. I think it a very useful adjunct to good plant growing, and it should be in every greenhouse, as reference to it may often tell what is wrong with a batch of plants.

Very truly yours, ALBERT M. HERR.

The actuating element of the Standard Recording Thermometer is of lamina metal, which, besides being extremely sensitive to temperature changes, is practically indestructible. Record charts are furnished either daily or weekly, and the whole mechanism is contained in an attractive metal case fitted with lock and key, which insures the record from being tampered with.

The clock movement is of extremely high grade; everything about the instrument is up to the highest possible standard of manufacture.

DON'T TAKE ANY CHANCES

There is no need of you, Mr. Florist, taking any chances if you feed the "Magic Way."

One plant food will not do for all plants and vegetables. A strong man can't thrive on the food that a weak man can.

Therefore, each distinct plant you are growing needs a special plant food, if you are to obtain the most cuttings and the best quality.

Tell us what you are growing, and how much bench space you devote to each of the different plants.

We'll tell you how to build up the physical condition of your soil, how to keep your soil in sweet condition, and how much of the Special Magic Plant Foods to put in each 1000 square feet of bench or potting space you devote to growing Roses, Carnations, Sweet Peas, Violets, Greens, Lettuce, Cucumbers, Tomatoes, etc.

Write us now—today.

We'll ship direct from our Factory—at "Factory to Consumer Prices."

CHICAGO FEED & FERTILIZER COMPANY

SCRANTON, PA.

The Market.

Business last week was satisfactory in all lines, particularly in funeral work. Roses and carnations are scarce. Daffodils, sweet peas, tulips and other spring stock are plentiful. Narcissi are in moderate supply, but there are not enough of them to meet the demand. Violets, orchids and lily of valley are plentiful. Freesias were noted in the stores last week.

Various Notes.

A. L. Besancon & Co. were rushed last week with funeral work. Their window display during the automobile show consisted of an auto basket filled with Russell roses and white lilacs.

T. J. Nolan, of the King Construction Co., North Tonawanda, N. Y., is around again after a six weeks' sickness.

Miss Anna Griffiths, of the West Side Floral Shop, reports a busy week in funeral work.

Mrs. M. Muir, this city's pioneer woman florist, says that business has been better than ever with her this season.

John W. Beagle reports a heavy demand for Boston ferns. He is cutting some fine daffodils, tulips and lilies.

B. E. & J. T. Cokely are busy getting out their bulk seed orders for the wholesale trade, and florists' flower and vegetable seeds. A card from J. T. Cokely, who is traveling through New York state, reports business better than during his last trip.

January 22 the Baldwin Overland delivery automobile was totally destroyed by fire. The chauffeur, Jack Bulter, burned his hands in trying to extinguish the blaze. The loss was partly covered by insurance.

The New York Floral Co. reports a big increase in business resulting from larger and better window displays. I noted at the store some fine Spencer peas, orchids and bunches of pink oleanders, a flower rarely seen in this city. F. J. M.

Scranton, Pa.—C. P. Becker has taken on a side line, the products of the Reading Bone Fertilizer Co., which he plans to sell to the trade.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

At the George W. Haas & Son establishment, of Meadville, Pa., I was shown a fine lemon plant in fruit, suggested as a suitable gift. Funeral work has been heavy of late with this concern.

Henry J. Krueger, of Meadville, reports the largest amount of funeral work for some time. I found him packing his grip for a hunting trip. He says the lure of the forest at times overshadows the excitement of hunting for eelworms, especially when a silver or black fox may be part of the game bagged. In his absence the business will be well taken care of by Mr. and Mrs. Krueger, Sr.

C. R. Betts, of Meadville, is well pleased with the first year in business and contemplates making some changes ere long.

Geo. A. Heelas, of Jamestown, N. Y., said he felt rather bad when two large shipments of fine plants just received by express were badly frozen. Extra care in packing is necessary, especially at this season of the year. He reports an exceptionally busy time.

The Lake View Rose Gardens, of Jamestown, it is feared, will not be represented at the National Flower Show by our old friend, Lawrence Cotter, who has been on the sick list for some time. Charles Cotter is ably managing the big range during his father's illness.

Dana A. Herron, Olean, N. Y., is of the opinion that the Philadelphia show will be a "hummer," and is watching with jealous care some promising stock that he proposes to take to Philadelphia to secure at least one of the valuable prizes offered. During his absence Forrest Herron will be in charge of the business. He tells me there is a possibility of another range of glass ere long.

John Walker, of Youngstown, O., will be on his usual trip to the Isle of Pines, Cuba, by the time these notes are in print. Ferns and bedding stock are his specialty and the plants will be in good shape by the time he returns. He has some good orders for grapefruit and pineapples to keep him busy for a while in Cuba.

The Gilbot Floral Co., of Akron, says it keeps one busy looking for the buds of promise to open during the dull days, when business seems brisk because of the scarcity of flowers.

PLANT TUBS

EVERLASTING VIRGINIA WHITE CEDAR

EVERYBODY agrees that Plant Tubs made of everlasting Virginia White Cedar will best resist rot or decay. The "Keystone" brand of White Cedar Plant Tubs are made of this celebrated wood, and these goods are painted inside and out with best oil paints, a rich green.

They are bound with heavy steel hoops for the large size, and electric-welded wire hoops (galvanized) on the small size. The large sizes are trimmed with handsome drop handles and metal feet, and have perforated, removable bottoms.

These Cedar Tubs are made in all sizes, from 24¼ inches top diameter down to 6 inches, amply large for a Bay Tree and small enough for a Hyacinth. Every one guaranteed. Booklet in colors, with prices, furnished upon request.

The Market.

January was a banner month, according to general reports. There was an increase in funeral work of about fifty per cent. Market conditions are gradually becoming normal. The extreme scarcity of stock soon will be relieved. Bulbous stock is plentiful. There are large quantities of jonquils, and tulips and hyacinths are more plentiful than they have been. Roses still are scarce, but a larger supply is expected this week. The prices on carnations have dropped. Sweet peas are scarce and violets are plentiful and in good demand. Taken as a whole, the supply of cut flowers still is short of the demand.

Various Notes.

E. Frandsen had another freeze in his greenhouses, the second within ten days, in which he lost practically all his stock.

Mr. Parker, president of the Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co., has pneumonia, and Miss Brown, of the store force, is confined to her home with the grip. The annual meeting of the stockholders of this concern was held at Pleasant Hill.

E. Odom, with W. J. Barnes, rejoices in the arrival, January 24, of a 9-pound baby girl.

Claude Huckleberry is again back at the greenhouses of J. Austin.

John Jones, who was rose grower at the greenhouses of the W. L. Rock Flower Co., but lately with the Magic Fertilizer Co., now is with the Cochrane Packing Co.

T. J. Noll's cat won a first and a second prize at a recent cat show. Mr. Noll reports a big increase in the supply of carnations and lilies, and says an increase in roses is looked for next week.

Miss Lou Boggess was especially busy last week with funeral work.

A. F. Barbe is growing 2,500 lily plants for the spring trade. He is cutting an excellent crop of carnations.

H. Smith, who makes a specialty of bulbous stock, is sending in excellent tulips and hyacinths to this market. He is cutting high-grade Golden Spur narcissi.

Biedermann & Son have about half their space devoted to bedding stock, which looks promising.

Visitors last week were James B. Foley, of Chicago; C. H. Perkins, of the Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y. W. J. B.

Logan, Utah.—The Cache Valley Floral Co. has moved into its new store at 31 Federal avenue.

SQUARE DIRT BANDS.

Very soon every live florist will make free use of square dirt bands in plant growing. The advantages of square bands over round pots are so evident that none can afford to pass them by. Better plants, less trouble, less water, less space, more soil, are a few favorable points.

The next step is to get the best band. Our READY-USE is the "last thing" in square bands. It is ready for the plant. If you have spare time for folding, our plain bands will answer the same purpose. Send postal for free samples.

PRICES OF PLAIN SQUARE DIRT BANDS.

	1000	5000	10,000	20,000	50,000	100,000
2-in.....	$0.70	$2.20	$ 4.10	$ 7.70	$17.25	$30.00

3x3x2-in.	1.25	6.00	10.00	47.50	92.00

Our ready-use bands are complete and ready to set up. The lap is glued down and each band opens up square. No folding required, nor time lost in setting them up.

Square dirt bands add greatly to the profit and pleasure of plant growing. Double the amount of soil to same bench space, and half the amount of water as clay pots require, are only two of many good points. Send for free samples today and get in touch with the newest and best SQUARE DIRT BAND. "The best band in the land," is the way one enthusiast puts it.

If you don't know the value of dirt bands begin by putting your carnation plants into size two or two and one-half inch. You will forever sing praises to the square band. They take care of all plants just as well, and anything that grows in a pot will grow better in a band.

There is an EASY and EXACT way to fold Dirt Bands.

The Directions how to do this after two years of experiment we reduced to 37 words and received a Copyright on the Directions in 1914.

There is no other EASY and EXACT way to fold them and no one can print these Directions as we have a Copyright on them.

We also Copyrighted in 1914 the next and only other two fairly exact methods.

Our Square Paper Dirt Bands are the original of all that are on the market today. All others being sold are imitations of these we advertise, and some of the imitations being sold are made of cheap paper, costing only about half as much as our heavy stock. We sell no experiments. Ours have been tried out by long use in the greenhouse. They will stand up in any wet and heat as long as wanted. Samples FREE.

DIRT BANDS—Experience in Using Them

H. B. WEAVER
Carnations Mignonettes
Sweet Peas Cut Flowers United Phone.

Bird-in-Hand, Pa., March 23, 1914.

F. W. Rochelle & Sons,
Chester, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your query would state that I planted seedling stock plants and snapdragon cuttings in the first lot of bands that I received from you early in January.

We took some of these out and planted them where they are to remain about the 15th of February. They made GOOD GROWTH while in the bands, and transplanted AS THOUGH they had never been moved at all.

I have now about 14,000 carnation plants started in 2-in. bands which are making a RAPID GROWTH, scarcely losing a plant in transplanting from the sand.

I also have about 20,000 aster plants transplanted in 2-in. bands which can stay there till time to plant out of doors WITHOUT FEAR OF BECOMING ROOT BOUND, as would be the case if I used 2-in. pots.

Plants SELDOM BECOME ROOT BOUND enough to injure them IN THE DIRT BANDS, and DO NOT REQUIRE NEAR THE AMOUNT OF ATTENTION that a pot plant does, in watering, shifting, transplanting, etc.

I make my bands and set them in flats, as I make them up, each flat holding 117.

When we get crowded indoors it takes but a short time to move the flats to a cold frame, where we harden them off before setting them in the field.

One man can set MORE THAN ANOTHER TIME AS MANY (twice as many) plants in the field from these bands and flats than he can from pots, and after he is through DOES NOT HAVE THE BOTHER OF GATHERING UP, CLEANING, and STORING AWAY A LOT OF POTS.

I believe anyone using these bands ONCE WILL BECOME A REGULAR CUSTOMER.

Yours truly,
H. B. Weaver.

Mr. Weaver grows carnations, mignonette, sweet peas, asters, etc. He ordered 5,000 Dirt Bands the first year, 60,000 the second year, 70,000 last year and has just ordered 50,000 more.

Dauphin, Manitoba, Can., Dec. 4, 1915.

F. W. Rochelle & Sons, Chester, N. J.

Gentlemen: * * * We would say that we used all the Paper Pots we got from you to raise tomato plants.

Our weather is often very severe late in May, therefore we have to keep them inside and we were certainly very satisfied with the splendid results obtained from the Paper Pots.

In fact, WE DID NOT HAVE HALF ENOUGH TO FILL OUR ORDERS. WE CHARGED EXACTLY TWICE THE AMOUNT we did other years and yet our CUSTOMERS INSISTED ON HAVING THOSE IN PAPER POTS.

In our hot sun they never wilted.

We reserved a few for Primulas and certainly have some fine ones.

It was easier to keep them watered and growing during the hot months.

Wishing you success.

Yours truly,
Blackadar & Co.

MRS. W. T. BARBER

F. W. Rochelle & Sons,
Chester, N. J.

Gentlemen: I used some of your Paper Pots last spring, which were highly satisfactory.

I grew Roses, Salvias, Verbenas, Petunias and Geraniums in the Paper Pots for retail trade.

THEY NEARLY DOUBLED MY SALES.

I always had fine thrifty plants to send out and I delivered them in the pots, which insured them reaching my patrons in good condition.

I never had a complaint of flowers dying or wilting.

I buy some of my plants, which I set right in the pots.

They are ready for delivery within a few days.

When plants are set out there is no collecting pots or watering to be done.

I intend to use them altogether next season.

Yours very truly,
Mrs. W. T. Barber.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

All stock profited by the warmer and brighter weather of last week. Bulbous stock is steadily increasing and the prices are slowly decreasing. Sweet peas are more plentiful and their quality is steadily improving. Orchids are abundant and cheap. The prices on other stock keep up well, though they have dropped from the unusually high prices of a few weeks ago. While there is much funeral work and other business, there is not that snap to business that existed a few weeks ago.

Various Notes.

J. H. Harvey is slowly recovering from his severe attack of the grip. Mrs. Harvey has been ill of the same disease.

Charles Witheridge made good use of the warm days last week by replacing a number of panes of glass in his greenhouses.

George Penek reports that he has had more funeral work this winter than during any of the last three or four winters.

Fred P. Wolfinger, who has been away from business for several months on account of illness, now is back at the store again. He took a trip to the southern states and to Bermuda as a health restorative.

Charles Trauth, of 475 Orange street, states that he has had an unusually heavy demand for potted ferns this season. R. B. M.

Saves $400 a Year in Labor and Hose

DANIEL A. PURCELL, of Arlington, Mass., writes us:

"By the old method of watering, it required a boy every day to wet these houses, at a cost of $6.00 per week. At the end of four months, it amounted to about $120.00.

"There was purchased 75 feet of ¾-in. hose for each house, amounting to $100.00.

"I installed the Skinner System of Irrigation three years ago. It cost $100.00 per greenhouse, or $500.00 for the five, a saving of $400.00 in labor and hose alone each year."

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The highest point of the flower scarcity has passed, although flowers are by no means plentiful, with the exception of jonquils. The supply is increasing slowly but steadily.

Beauties are on the scarce side and they are not of the best quality. Other roses are not much more abundant than two weeks ago. All kinds clear daily at good prices. Carnations are coming in more heavily than for a long time and seem to put more life in the market. These, in all colors, sold exceptionally well on McKinley's day. Jonquils are becoming plentiful, but they are bringing $4 per hundred.

Daffodils have made their appearance and there is a great demand for them. Freesias, Romans and sweet peas are selling nicely. The latter are rather scarce, but increasing steadily. Violets continue to sell well. Paper Whites are few, but tulips in white and yellow are sufficient for the call. Cattleyas and gardenias are not so plentiful as those of two weeks previous. There is not an oversupply of greens.

Various Notes.

David Scott, of Corfu, is cutting a vast quantity of jonquils daily. His sweet peas are of topnotch quality.

Ruby Marks, who has been ill for the last four weeks, has returned to work.

W. J. Peake had more than his share of funeral work last week.

Walter Stroh and Tracy Dickinson, of Batavia, called on the trade last week. L, Newdorfer, of Charles Zinn & Co., New York, also was a business caller last week.

Charles Hewson, on the Abbott road, is picking high-grade orchid sweet peas.

A. E.

Grand Island, Neb.—M. Sage, formerly foreman of the Shenandoah Greenhouses, of Shenandoah, Ia., now is employed by Williams, the Florist, in a similar capacity.

Morris, Ill.—The Morris Floral Co. recently had a narrow escape from severe loss by flood. Some of the sweet peas were destroyed, but other stock was saved, largely because of help rendered by neighbors.

SMALL, READY-MADE GREENHOUSES

Covered Top and Sides with SUNLIGHT Double Glass Sash for Hot-beds and Cold-frames

With Sunken Path

With Plant Benches

These Sunlight Sashes as adjusted on the greenhouses are removable at will. They may be transferred to Cold Frames or Hotbeds and are incomparably superior to all others for such use.

They are complete in themselves, for they have two layers of glass enclosing an air space that is a better protection than mats and shutters, and does away with buying and using these extra covers. Besides, the plants get all the light all the time and are stronger and earlier, also far more profitable.

The Sunlight Double-Glazed Sash, as thousands of the best florists and gardeners testify, is simply perfect.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

RISKS AND REWARDS IN RAISING NEW ROSES

Among the chief fascinations of hybridizing are its mysteries and uncertainties. The hybridizers are ever seeking success by seeking fuller acquaintance with Dame Nature, the chief of hybridizers, but the lady shuns familiarity. Occasionally, however, when such a free favor is least expected, she coquettishly presents to some astonished florist a fine new rose—a sport.

By E. G. HILL.

(Address at Tennessee Florists' Convention.)

ROSES originate in two definite ways, either through the reproductive organs or by bud variation—the adventitious bud, as the scientist puts it. We florists speak of bud variations as sports. These bud sports, when they become fixed in their character, are really the creation of a new rose, especially in color, and often the growth also varies, sometimes showing more vigor and greater strength than in the parent, but often a lessened degree of vitality. It is a strange performance of nature, to say the least.

Climbing Sports.

Sometimes these adventitious buds produce really remarkable scandent growths, taking the character of a real climber. I think it safe to state that every variety of rose that has had extensive propagation has developed this trait. These climbing growths can be fixed, so that they retain their newly formed character. These climbing variations refuse, however, to bloom continuously, like their parents, but give forth their flowers annually, with intermittent bloom at intervals through the growing season.

As illustrations we have Climbing Killarney, Kaiserin, Meteor and a host of others which are catalogued by the trade. Among the last to take on this form of sporting is the variety Ophelia, as reported by Chas. L. Baum, of Knoxville.

These climbing variations are certainly of great value in the way of furnishing varieties for porch, pillar and veranda decoration and in the way of giving valuable varieties for screen purposes, pillar roses and porch adornment. I distinctly remember a climbing Perle des Jardins in R. C. Kerr's city, growing with such vigor that it had then covered a large portion of a two-story veranda.

A Baffling Mystery.

It would seem that nature, while unwilling to reveal her secret in this particular, evidently works along fixed laws, for when one of these bud variations appears in one place, it comes forth in like character in one or more places. The variety Caroline Testout developed this trait at Lyon, France, and at Berkeley, Cal., some 7,000 miles apart, at practically the same time. Some of our superior forcing varieties, those extensively used for flower production, are the product of varieties that have sent forth these adventitious buds. For instance, Catherine Mermet gave us Bridesmaid and The Bride, and how well and faithfully they served the growers of roses for a quarter of a century! Then we have the Killarney family—White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Killarney Queen, Double White Killarney, Red Killarney; this variety has been specially prolific in its color variations and has proved a valuable asset to the rose growing fraternity. I mention Catherine Mermet and Killarney as prominent in adding great value to the market florist. How we are to explain this phenomenon is past comprehension, except that it is according to the divine plan of the Creator.

New Rose Mme. Marcel Delanney.
(Awarded the Gold Medal in the Bagatelle Garden Trials in Paris.)

Limits of Man's Knowledge.

Of the fact of evolution we are certain; of the workings of natural selection we have no doubt. But with regard to the nature of the variations, what causes them and when to expect their appearance, we at this date know practically nothing.

The writer has often wondered whether the orchardists and the nut and fruit men have not overlooked these bud variations, to their great loss. If, when a superior apple has appeared, or any other fruit differing from the normal, it has ever been propagated and an effort made to fix it, the writer has never heard of such an attempt.

On this particular phase of our work, let every florist keep a keen lookout, for there is no telling what good fortune may come to you. Killarney Brilliant and White Killarney made up into the thousands of dollars for the gentlemen who discovered and disseminated them. Can the Ethiopian change his color or the leopard his spots? No, but a rose can change its color, and does do it.

Biology is the science of life. Fertilization is the method of procedure for anyone who would give earnest thought and effort to produce new types, either in roses or other plants. It is established beyond question that sex exists in the vegetable as well as in the animal creation, and if we would improve the rose, this is the right line to work upon. Practical experience is the only teacher. Scrutiny, observation and application are the three forces that win. The late Mr. Carmen, editor of the Rural New Yorker, made this statement before the S. A. F. years ago—that roses and all plants have their predisposition at certain times more than others to assume the sex relation; in other words, they fall in love just as the members of the animal creation do.

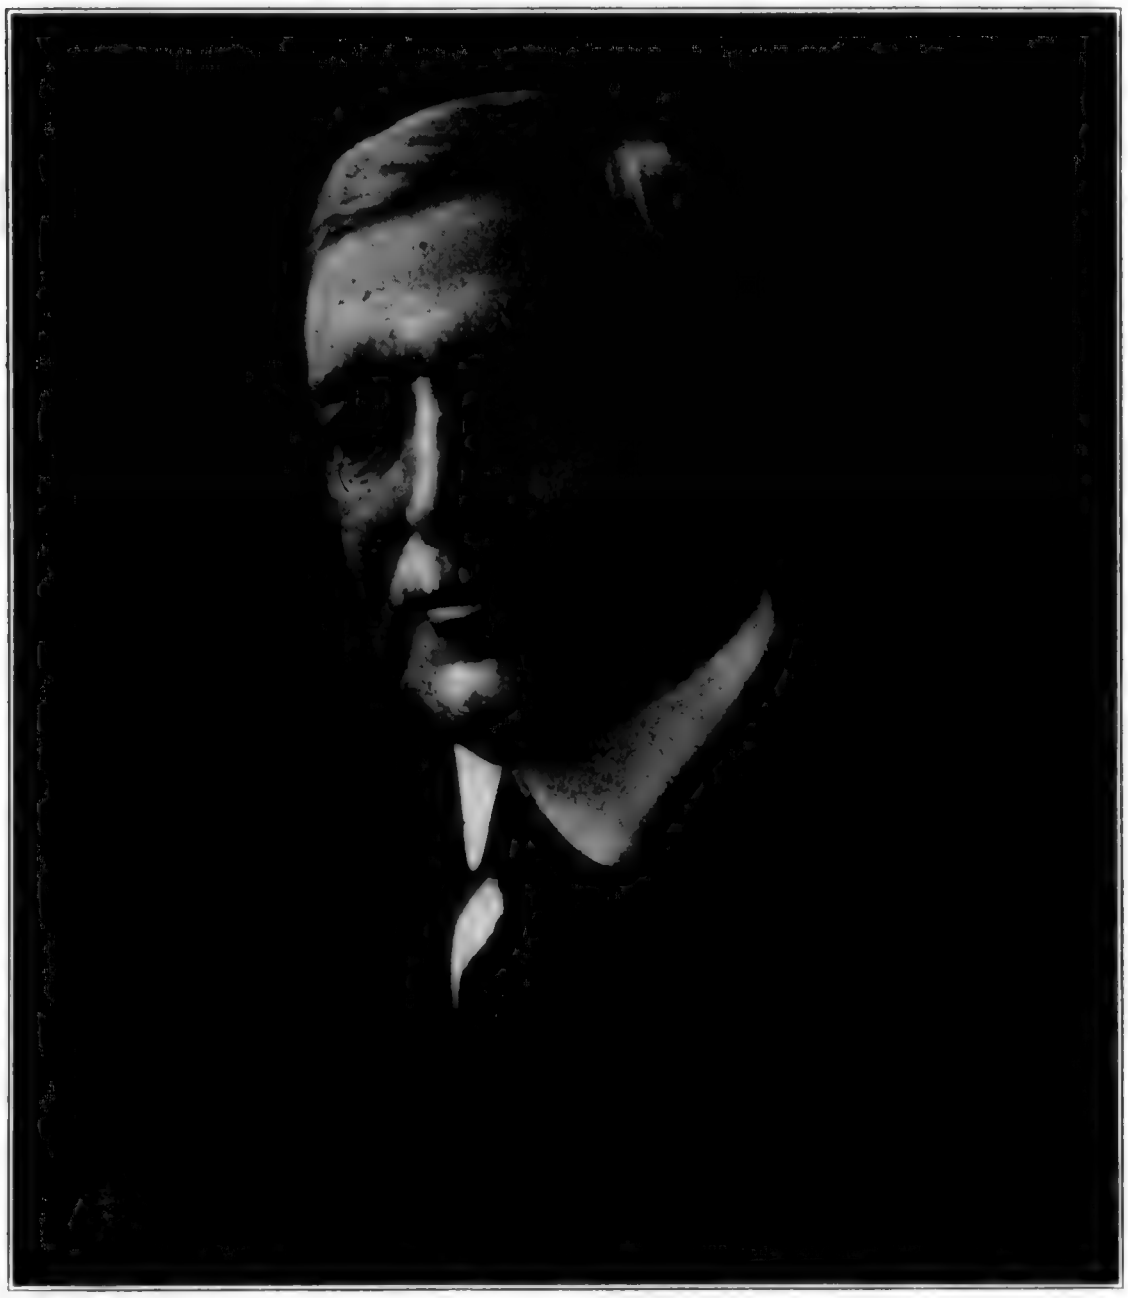
The Hybridizer's Methods.

The modus operandi is simple so far as the mechanical act is concerned. The stamen, the pollen-bearing anther, must be removed, else there is danger of self-pollenization. The pistil, the seed-bearing organ, is composed of the ovary and stigma, and upon this the pollen must be placed. This is best done by a camel's-hair brush. Care should be taken to protect from insect interference if definite results are to be had.



Spring is suggested as the most opportune time for the work of the hybridist with roses. Select with care the roses you wish for your mother plants, and it would be well to have these grown in pots, for convenience and after care.

Idealism plays an important part in the work of the hybridist. Let the imagination have play; in other words, conjure up in your mind the kinds and qualities you wish combined in the variety you wish produced; then select the parents carefully and await results. Time, patience—unlimited patience—is the one great requisite. Someone has said that out of 1,500 germinated rose seedlings, if you get one that towers above existing varieties, it is all that can be reasonably expected. It might be that through accident, or what is called luck, you might get the coveted prize with a less number.

Saving and Sowing the Seed.

The care of the plants after fertilization is all-important. Too free use of water will cause the hips to rot and damp off. Air must be allowed to circulate freely among the bushes; no coddling or impure atmosphere must be allowed, else the work done thus far will be lost. If, say, your fertilization is done in April, it will take until the end of November for the seed to ripen. One essential matter is that the seed must be thoroughly ripe and hard; unripened seed will not germinate. Sowing the seed as soon as gathered is practiced by many, and I think this is perhaps the wise thing to do. Some file the seed on one side, taking care not to injure the germ; this facilitates germination. Seed may be sown in any ordinary good loam, with drainage in the pots or boxes used. Great care is needed in watering and nursing, else the little seedlings may suffer from damp.

We potted off in April last about 2,200 seedlings, all from carefully thought-out crosses, and these, when planted, occupied 500 feet of bench room. With a few exceptions, they flowered, and the result is quite gratifying, prospectively at least. The last year's work has been more carefully and scientifically performed—this as a result of fifteen years' experience. Mendel's theory has been of great assistance and I would commend a careful perusal of his work.

E. G. Hill.

Some Famous Hybridizers.

You perhaps know that Pernet-Ducher, of Lyon, has given us a majority of our finest and best roses; to Mr. Pernet we are indebted for the fine yellow coloring bred into our favorite forcing varieties, such as Sunburst, Mrs. Aaron Ward and others. Antoine Rivoire is one of his varieties, and the valuable Ophelia is a seedling from this noted sort. The Dicksons, of Newtownards, gave us the original Killarney, together with other valuable sorts. The Hugh Dickson firm, of Belfast, has been awarded the $1,000 prize by the Panama-Pacific jury. One of the most studious of the European hybridists is Samuel McGredy, of Portadown, Ireland. Some of his seedlings under test at Richmond give promise of good things in roses in the near future. The two Pauls, of England; the Souperts, of Luxembourg, and Lambert, of Germany, have made notable additions to our list of valuable roses.

Among our successful American raisers of new roses may be mentioned John Cook, of Baltimore; Walsh, of Woods Hole, Mass.; Montgomery, of the Waban Rose Conservatories, and others. I shall miss my guess if we do not produce in the near future roses of such character as will put our American productions in the front rank.

The South's Opportunity.

What we need in this country is varieties of roses that will thrive and embellish our gardens. The people in Tennessee are particularly favored by soil and climate for this particular line of work. Let them get busy and lend a helping hand, and see if they cannot produce some new varieties that will more perfectly embellish our gardens and dooryards. They owe it to their state and profession that they undertake this work.

Some of the most promising introductions of late years are succeeding finely in the southern climate. I was particularly pleased with Mrs. Charles Russell and Ophelia as grown under glass in the south; Hoosier Beauty and Killarney are making good with most growers who have given them a trial.

One thing must be borne in mind—it costs time, patience and money to produce new varieties of roses. You cannot expect these to be forthcoming unless you are willing to purchase of these new varieties, thus encouraging those who, I think, are deserving of more hearty support than has been accorded thus far.

The Demand for New Sorts.

When last at Lyon, France, I found that the great silk manufacturers bent every effort, skill and thought, looking to the production of new colors, patterns and shades in their silks. People demand change and novelty every year in their silks and ribbons, and the same holds good with roses. The greater the interest taken by you in new things, the greater will be the money returns to storemen and growers. Without advancement on these lines, we shall not keep pace with other professions. Unless you encourage the hybridist by purchasing his product, there will be only a minimum of effort put forth to give novelty and increased variety. This to the writer seems fundamental, if we would make good both financially and professionally.

In conversing with one of the leading rose firms—they distribute hundreds of thousands yearly—I asked: "Why do you propagate these old and inferior roses, like Marie Guillot, Boupre and Coquette de Lyon, when there are so many superior varieties in the same line of color?" The answer was: "The south demands them and we have to grow them; we concede they are inferior sorts." The trouble is with the men who issue catalogues; the nurserymen use the same old colored lithographs; the catalogue men use their old stereotyped cuts and descriptive matter. This is unfair to the amateur, who wishes the finest and best for his garden, and is destructive of the best interests of the hybridist, and is certainly unbusinesslike from every point of view.

There is opportunity in the southern states to build up and establish great rose growing establishments, like those of the Pauls, Dicksons, Guillots and others in Europe. The soil is suitable for the rose; climatic conditions are favorable; why not embrace the opportunity and give to the United States some rose nurseries worthy the name?

An Arm Bouquet of that Good Old Rose, The Bride.

A NEW ROSE FROM HOLLAND.

The new seedling hybrid tea rose, Mme. Marcel Delanney, a photograph of which is reproduced on page 11 this week, was originated by M. Leenders & Co., Steil-Tegelen, Holland, and was intended for dissemination in 1916. It is described by the raisers as follows: "A surpassingly beautiful novelty with a peculiar color—pale pink or soft rose, shaded with hydrangea pink; a nice, delicately colored rose. The flowers are large, full and fragrant, perfect in form and borne on tall, rigid stalks. The plant grows vigorously on short stems and is quite floriferous. Is one of the most distinct roses for massing, cutting and forcing purposes. Was awarded the gold medal by the city of Paris, at Bagatelle."

PROPER LABELING OF PLANTS.

Please tell me what is considered the proper way to label pot plants in the bench. I begin at the lower left-hand corner, placing the label in the first pot. The label faces and reads to the right. Is this correct? I have worked for several people and each has a different way of labeling. H. B. B.—Ia.

There are, as you state, several different ways of labeling plants in the benches. Some growers in inserting, for instance, a batch of cuttings, place a label where they commence. The label faces the cuttings. Another label is put in where the next variety starts, and so on. Another, and, in my opinion, a far better plan is to put the first label in when one variety has been inserted. Start all rows from the back of the bench, so that, when any one kind is all in, the plants will all be behind and not in front of the label. It is a fact that there is much confusion on labeling, and, with different men adopting different methods, there is little wonder that names get badly mixed. Whether the labels should be written to read from the left or the right is a matter of minor importance to the proper placing of the label. Personally, I prefer the left. Opinions of others on this subject are invited; it would be a great boon if one system could be generally adopted.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Lincoln, Neb.—The property of the Griswold Seed Co., bankrupt, valued by appraisers at $114,000, was sold January 29 by Referee Peterson for $23,900. Frank P. Quick, of Lincoln, secured the seed department, retail stock, fixtures, good will and book accounts and the equity in the storage warehouse for $7,500. The property involved in this sale was appraised at $45,000. The Fifteenth street greenhouses, real and personal property therein, and a retail store went to Joseph K. Hiltner, of Lincoln, for $13,500. H. A. Johns, a Sioux City seedsman, purchased the Normal greenhouses for $2,900.

San Francisco, Cal.—Another tentative plan for the re-formation of the financially embarrassed Luther Burbank Co. has been proposed and submitted to Mr. Burbank. It is that instead of the company undertaking liquidation, all of the business be turned over to Mr. Burbank, whereby he would own and control the company and its business and take over all the unfilled orders and the large quantities of seed and nursery stock on hand. It is said, however, that Mr. Burbank prefers to leave the business affairs of the company to others.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The administrator of the Minneapolis Floral Co., G. C. Anderson, manager, is offering settlement with creditors at 30 cents on the dollar. The largest claim is that of the landlord, who offers to scale it sharply and renew the lease for a short term in case the merchandise creditors will accept the compromise. John Monson, the proprietor of the business, died some time ago. Mr. Anderson was appointed manager last spring. It is stated the business was unprofitable in 1915.

CARNATIONS

TANKAGE AS A FERTILIZER.

Would a fertilizer known as animal tankage, containing nine per cent of ammonia and twelve per cent of phosphoric acid, be good for feeding carnations? If so, please state what quantity should be used and how frequently it can be used with safety. E. C.—Ont.

You should join the American Carnation Society and get a copy of the annual report, which will contain a discussion on fertilizers for carnations which took place at the meeting in St. Louis. It referred not only to tankage, but also to many other fertilizers you might want to know about.

Tankage can be used safely, in about the same manner as sheep manure. We prefer the latter, supplemented with dried blood and bone meal. We have tried both and have had the best results from the sheep manure. We put on a small handful to each row, halfway across a 5-foot bench. A safe rule to go by, in applying fertilizers, is to gauge it according to the amount of sunshine. When the sunshine is abundant, plant growth is rapid and the plants take up food readily. But during dark weather the growth is much slower and less food is taken up in proportion. Consequently, there is danger of an excess of food accumulating, if frequent applications are made. Then, when the sun comes out and growth is resumed, there is an excess of available food and bad results follow.

A. F. J. B.

MAY BE INJURED BY GAS.

I am sending you, under separate cover, two of my White Perfection carnation plants, which are drying up badly. I have about 5,000 of these, besides 1,000 White Wonder and a few White Enchantress, left over from old stock of last summer, from which I am taking cuttings. At the shed end, or north end, of each bench I had sweet peas. These were badly affected with mildew before Christmas, but I finally got rid of it. The sweet peas seemed to improve after that, but dried up suddenly about two weeks ago. This was when I first noticed the trouble with my carnations. The buds would become about half open and then would wither. Next I noticed that the buds would show a little of the white petals and the stigma would extend three-fourths of an inch beyond the bud and in a few days would wither. Now the whole plant turns yellow, but does not wither. All three varieties are going the same route in these three houses. About eighty per cent of them are affected. Those at the end of the house where the sweet peas were are most affected and the disease seems to diminish toward the other end.

In my other three houses I have Ward, Enchantress, Herald and White Wonder. I have just started sweet peas in these houses, but will throw them out. None of this stock is affected. Any remedy you can suggest will be greatly appreciated. I shall keep the plants cool, with plenty of air. I shall syringe with water as much as I dare, spray with nicotine twice a week and give the ground a coat of lime. E. E. S.—Ill.

Your letter gives me the impression that your stock is affected by gas, either from your boilers or from gas mains, which may be laid in the street alongside your place. Ordinarily the gas might not come into your houses, but during the recent cold weather, with the ground frozen solidly, the gas would seep along until it came to the open ground inside your greenhouses and would escape inside the houses instead of coming up in the street. I would not advise putting on the lime, unless there are reasons not enumerated in your letter. Give all the ventilation possible and follow a moderate course of culture in other respects.

A. F. J. B.

CARNATION YELLOWS.

Enclosed you will find some foliage from carnations and also from snapdragons. Please tell me what the diseases are and what is the best remedy for them. C. F. S.—Mo.

The carnation foliage submitted is affected with the disease called carnation yellows. This disease is being investigated and we ought to learn a great deal about it within the next few years. There was an address and considerable discussion on this subject at the St. Louis convention of the American Carnation Society. I would suggest that you join the society and secure a copy of the annual report, which will contain the paper and the discussion which followed. The address was printed in The Review of January 27. When propagating, select cuttings which are free from these light spots. That is the best remedy at hand now.

The light areas on the snapdragon foliage are perhaps caused by a similar disease. Do not overwater or overfeed them. When spring sets in, the disease will probably disappear. A. F. J. B.

BORDEAUX MIXTURE.

Will you publish the recipe for Bordeaux mixture, which you frequently recommend for use on carnations?

G. L. B.—Ky.

To make Bordeaux mixture, dissolve one pound of sulphate of copper in about half a gallon of warm water. Dissolve one pound of lime in an equal amount of cold water. When both are dissolved, pour them into ten gallons of water and stir thoroughly. It is then ready to use. Spray it on with a fine nozzle. A. F. J. B.

SHUMAN'S WHITE ENCHANTRESS.

The illustration on this page shows a house of White Enchantress at the Shuman Floral Co. establishment, near Ardmore, Okla. The man in the picture is William E. Roberts, Mr. Shuman's grower, who says that he has had few splits and that January 4 his White Enchantress plants had averaged six blooms each. The plants were housed from the field July 15, 1915.

CARNATION PHILADELPHIA.

What is the trouble with the Philadelphia carnation? Is it worth planting? It bears a good flower, with a fine color, and does not split, but I have heard that it does not keep well. I have a stock of good cuttings and plants, but do not care to bother with it if it does not keep well. At present it is yielding well. I am having a great deal of trouble with Dorothy Gordon, on account of its splitting badly, and if Philadelphia has no more faults than it has shown so far on my place, I greatly prefer it. A. M. C.—Ohio.

While Carnation Philadelphia Pink has not fulfilled all the claims made for it, it does possess some good qualities and among them are fine color, non-splitting, good size and stem. The most serious objection we had against the variety was the fact that it does not keep well in warm weather. We knew of this fault before we bought it and handled our stock accordingly and with good results. We simply kept the blooming shoots topped away, until we made sure it would not come into crop until about December 1. We then let it come in with a big crop, which was taken off by March and it was then thrown out to make room for young stock. Handled in this manner, it paid us well and gave satisfaction all around.

There are many growers who consider the variety well worth while, especially for those who retail their own stock. We do not consider it good policy to discontinue a variety just because others are finding fault with it, unless you are in the rooted cutting business. All you can ask of a variety is that it shall give you good results, regardless of what it does for your neighbor. We shall discontinue growing Philadelphia Pink, because Mrs. Ward and Good Cheer are more to our liking and the demand for the rooted cuttings is better. A. F. J. B.

THE ROLF ZETLITZ HOUSES.

The accompanying illustrations are of special interest in that they show two houses of the Rolf Zetlitz range, at Lima, O. The view in the rose house gives a clear picture of Killarneys in splendid shape. The other illustration is of the carnation house, which was planted to varieties introduced during 1914 and 1915. Mr. Zetlitz, who is responsible for the spick-and-span order depicted in the illustrations, says he has 15,000 carnation plants in this house, with sweet peas on each of the posts and occasionally in between.

THE NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

A most cheering feature incident to the preparations for the opening of the National Flower Show at Philadelphia March 25 is the great interest in the undertaking shown by out-of-town florists. From the many communications received by this office, it is quite evident that the show will attract men in the trade from all over the country. At the last National Flower Show, it will be remembered, there was little cause for complaint as to the out-of-town patronage, but it looks as though the Philadelphia show will eclipse all previous records as to this element of the attendance.

The final schedule of premiums will be issued soon after February 15, and will be the most liberal schedule ever published for a flower show in this country, covering premiums amounting to over $20,000. In the new schedule, a large number of special prizes will appear. The committee is still soliciting offers of special prizes for the various classes scheduled, in order to reduce the premium responsibility as much as possible. Offers made now will be mentioned in the final schedule, with due credit to donors.

The trade exhibition will be a most important feature of the show and without doubt will be the largest exhibition of its kind ever staged in America. The big trade exhibition of the 1913 National Flower Show is already eclipsed, the number of exhibitors and the amount of space reserved beating the 1913 record fully twenty-five per cent. A list of those who have reserved space recently was printed in The Review. Firms that have been prevented from making reservations through lack of space, which has been a serious obstacle for many weeks, will be glad to avail themselves of the large area of additional space recently becoming available for trade exhibits. This space is at the rear of what formerly was the stage, but is now a continuous part of the main floor, reached by both center and side aisles.

The retailers' section will be well filled, as reservations already have been made by John C. Gracey, John Kuhn, Harry S. Betz, London Flower Shop and Charles Grakelow.

Chairman F. Cowperthwaite, of the committee on information, whose address is 518 Market street, Philadelphia, has mapped out several trips among the florists' establishments in and around Philadelphia for those who wish to visit them, and his committee will be prepared to lend every assistance in the way of information which may be required.

Sectional societies desiring to have booths will be accorded space on the balcony floors. Arrangements are being made for quarters for Miss Jarvis, founder of Mothers' day.

The work of compiling the Official Souvenir Program is well under way. Chairman Therkildson, of the committee on publicity, has arranged to have copies of the program on every dining, buffet, club and parlor car arriving in Philadelphia during the show.

March 28 has been decided on as the day when the New York Florists' Club with its guests will visit the show. The club's committee is perfecting arrangements for transportation and a dinner en route. It is expected that this party will comprise at least 400 persons. John Young, Sec'y.

ILLINOISANS TO MEET.

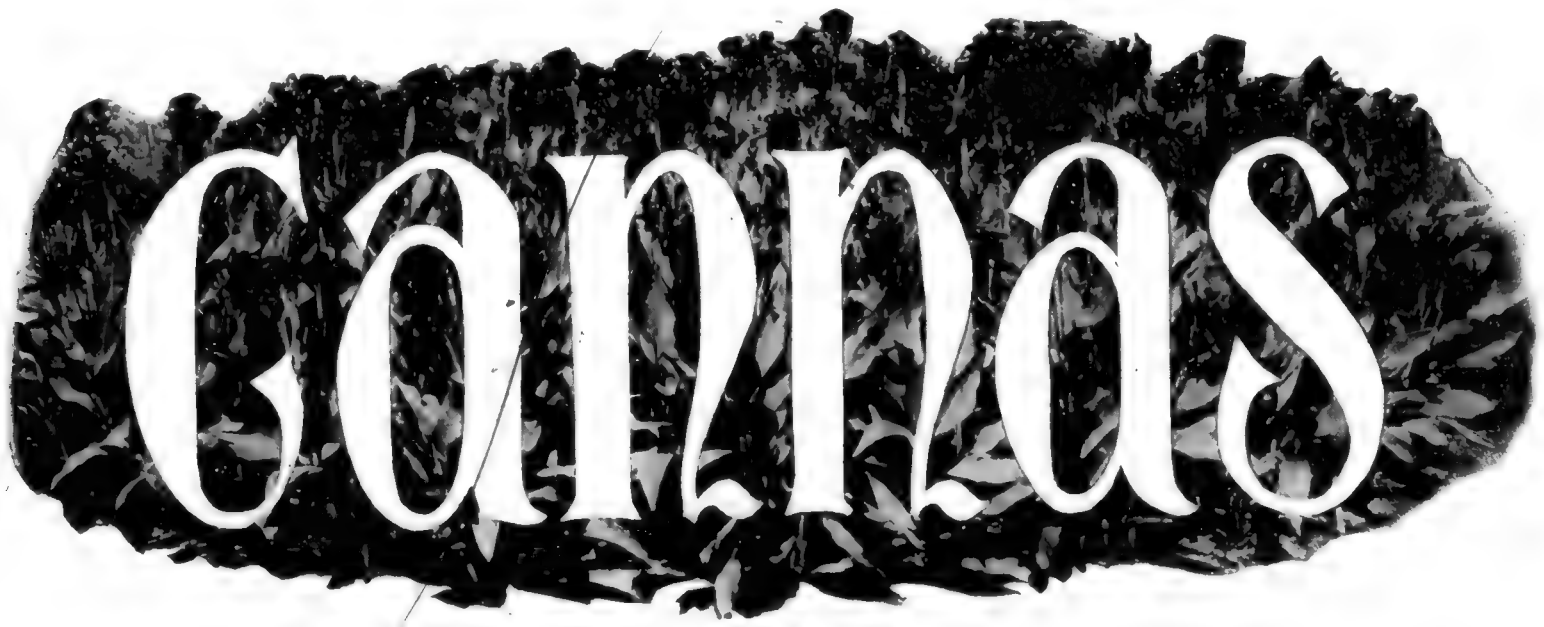
Secretary J. F. Ammann announces that the eleventh annual meeting and exhibition of the Illinois State Florists' Association will be held at Turner hall, Moline, Ill., March 7 and 8. The program for the first day of the meeting is as follows:

Welcome, by Martin R. Carlson, mayor.
President's address, by C. W. Johnson, of Morgan Park.
Secretary's report, by J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville.
Treasurer's report, by F. L. Washburn, of Bloomington.
Report on fertilizer work, by F. W. Muncie, of Urbana.
Report on pathological work, by G. L. Peltier, of Urbana.
Unfinished and new business.
General discussion.
Dinner, at 6 p. m.
"Christmas and Easter Flowering and Foliage Plants," by W. E. Tricker, of Western Springs.
"What the Division of Floriculture is Doing," by H. B. Dorner, of Urbana.
"Soils," by W. E. Taylor, of Urbana.
Election of officers.

March 8 will be spent in a tour of inspection of greenhouses and visits to other places of interest. All members are cordially invited to attend the meeting and also to make exhibits. All novelties exhibited are judged according to the national society's scale of points, and any flower scoring eighty-five points or more will be given a certificate of merit by the association. Entries should be sent to John Staack, Turner hall, Sixth avenue and Fourteenth street, Moline.

THE NEW YORK SHOW.

The committee is gradually bringing to completion the final schedule of premiums to be awarded at the New York International Flower Show April 5 to 12 and it is expected that it will be ready for distribution about March 1. The committee on special premiums, F. L. Atkins, chairman, is meeting with considerable success in its efforts to influence the donation of prizes and a similar committee from the Horticultural Society of New York, F. R. Newbold, chairman, is doing like work in its own field. The official souvenir program is in course of preparation.



Exhibition Manager Herrington is making frequent trips among prospective exhibitors and his reports are quite enthusiastic as to the support promised. It would seem that there need be no apprehension that the show will be anything but a huge success, much superior to the show of last year. The trade section, too, promises to greatly excel that of last year, the reservations already made showing a considerable increase in the number of exhibitors.

The committee has prepared a sticker to be used on trade stationery and is sending supplies of these stamps to all who will use them.

Two of the great feature classes of the show will be creditably filled, it is pleasing to know. At least five entries are promised for rose gardens and there are to be three entries in the rock garden class.

The work of obtaining local publicity for the show has been placed in the hands of the Korbel-Colwell organization, which creditably gave the same service last year.

John Young, Sec'y.

TESTING CANNAS IN TENNESSEE.

[The conclusion of an article begun in The Review for February 3, 1916.]

The variety Meteor has been a decided disappointment to us. We had never seen it till this year. We procured it from the originator and from another source as well, so that we could grow a good stock of it. The color is good, but the flowers are too small for a modern canna, and with us and three of our friends here it has not proved to be any better a bloomer than a number of others that have better individual flowers. We consider that so far as the south is concerned at least, this is a much overrated canna.

Dragon, a 1915 novelty, seems to be a marvel in growth and bloom. It has produced twenty-eight shoots from a single 3-inch plant, and every one has had a 3-branched flower spike of fair-sized, dark, ox-blood red blooms that are the best of their color. Its only fault is the fact that the spikes are not held high enough above the foliage. Its height is about five feet.

Henry George, with us, is almost a duplicate of Dragon, except that it is not so strong a grower or so rapid a multiplier. It is only fair to say that it was planted a month later than Dragon and has had a poorer chance.

King Humbert needs no word further than that it is still the best bronze-leaved canna, though it has two rivals that are certainly close competitors.

Wm. Saunders is perhaps as good in every way as King Humbert and a more constant bloomer. If planted far enough from each other to make it impossible to compare details closely, I doubt whether any but the most expert grower would be able to tell them apart.

New York has done better with us this season than King Humbert. It blooms freely and its flowers are fully as large as Humbert, besides being a more solid scarlet. The foliage is not quite the same shade of bronze.

Pennsylvania has grown side by side with Firebird. It has produced more than double the number of blooms, the individual flowers and the heads are fully as large as those of Firebird and the foliage is good. If we were asked to take our choice of the two for the everyday canna bed, we would certainly select Pennsylvania.

Uncle Sam is another canna that has not gained the popularity it deserves. It cannot be beat for a large-flowered, brilliant red, green-leaved canna, where five feet is not too tall. The same may be said of Indiana and Louisiana, though both of these are orange rather than scarlet.

There are a score of other red cannas that have enough merit to warrant special mention, if space would allow, but the foregoing we have found to be the best to date. Some may think there are others that are better than those mentioned and we confess that it has been a hard question to settle just which to leave out, but for our climate and soil we feel that we are right.

Wanted—A First-class Yellow.

The man who desires to make a lasting name for himself by producing a good canna should turn to yellows. There is no really good yellow canna in the sense that we mean when we speak of a good red or even a good pink.

Florence Vaughan can still be considered the one all-purpose yellow canna, though, as everyone knows, it is not yellow but spotted, and there are so many inferior sorts sold for it that many never see the true variety. There are several varieties of the same type and color that are so similar that they could easily be passed off for F. Vaughan. Elizabeth Hoss is as good as any of these. It is slightly taller than F. Vaughan.

Gustav Gumpper is the yellowest canna we have that has size, vigor, hardiness and other good qualities. We place this at the head of the list, at least of those that are cheap enough to be used. Its one fault is that it is rather dwarf, not over four and one-half feet high. We shall grow this in quantities in the future.

Princeton, a novelty of 1915, is almost as good a shade of yellow as Gumpper, and is much more vigorous and has larger flowers. It does not sun-scald and it holds its flowers well up into the light, above the foliage. Watch this, for it promises to be a top-notcher.

Jane Addams is as good a yellow canna as has yet been produced. Its price is all that will prevent its being a leader at once. Yet it is not the large, bright, clear yellow that is so much desired in cannas, but as yet never produced.

Juanita is a handsome, deep pumpkin yellow, the yellow that needs no apology. The flowers are not so large as some of the reds, but are hard to beat. The foliage is neither green nor bronze, but halfway between. This is its one weakness.

Queen Helen is a good canna, perhaps better than Florence Vaughan, but has some of the weaknesses of its parent, King Humbert. The flower is spotted, but appears yellow at a little distance, and it is a good variety, though far from the ideal.

Richard Wallace is perhaps the best yellow that is low in price and that multiplies rapidly. It is ideal in every way except that it is too light in color. It fades to almost cream. Still, at its best it is a wonderfully good canna.

Dr. Nansen is of the same quality in every way as R. Wallace, but is dwarf. There is no better dwarf yellow canna.

Kate F. Deemer and Golden Gate are much alike in color and shape, as well as in height and freedom of bloom. They class with the two or three best yellow cannas that we have ever seen. They are both light in color and fade almost to light canary, but they bloom so freely, and have such large heads of perfectly shaped flowers of medium to large size, that they will soon become popular. Both increase rapidly, bloom when small and keep at it every day till frost. They are not identical, but similar, and we have not been able to decide which is the better.

Some Variegated Flowers.

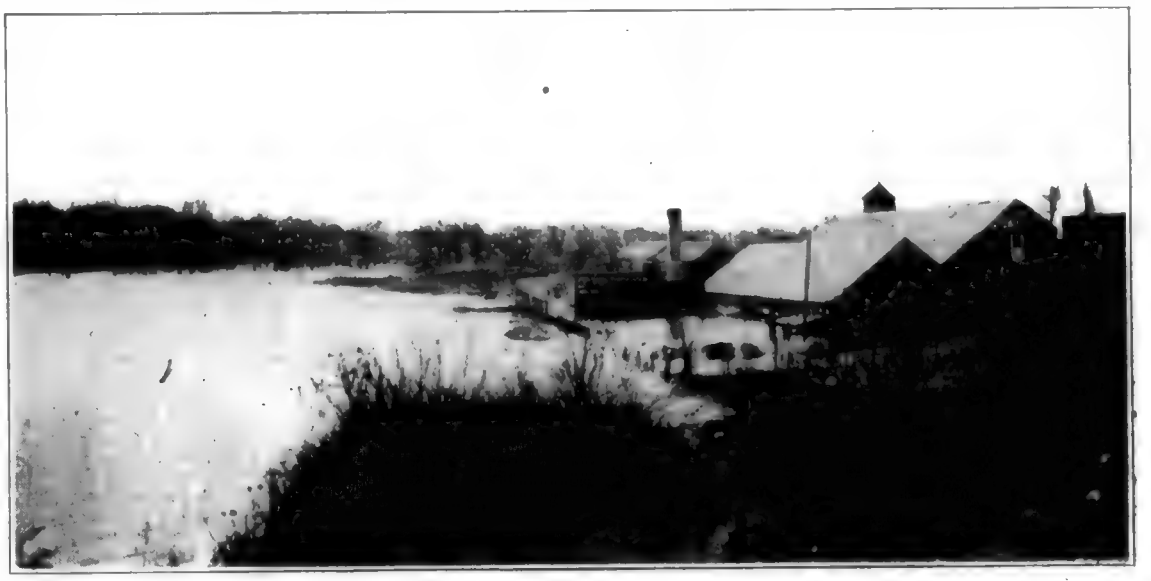
Sam Trelease Improved is one of the best cannas that we have ever seen. However, it is not yellow, but yellow bordered with red. It is bound to be one of the leaders soon.

Queen Charlotte, though known to everyone, is mentioned here because it is still the best dwarf bright red with a good yellow border.

Allemania and Olympic are similar in color, size and productiveness, though Olympic is easily better than even the improved variety of Allemania. Both are beautiful and desirable, the best of their color, scarlet dotted and edged yellow, but this in most places is not a popular color.

Greenback was produced by L. H. Read, of Alabama. There is nothing like it that we have ever seen. It does not bloom, but is a decidedly strong grower, making seven or eight feet, and produces leaves that look for all the world like the best leaves on a banana tree and are as large. We measured a leaf last summer that had a blade thirty inches broad, and over three feet long before it began to narrow into the petiole. For tropical effect there is no plant that we have ever seen that has so much to commend it. It is not so tall as Canna musifolia and the leaves are green rather than bronze, but the habit of growth is years ahead of any other foliage canna.

Wyoming is the one good bronze-leaved orange canna. It beats Humbert or any of the other bronze-leaved cannas in everything save color. A circular bed containing 500 plants on the grounds of one of our customers was the most gorgeous bed of cannas that we have ever seen. There is no canna today that will produce more or larger flowers or better foliage, though the foliage has the habit of turning green at times. Floyd Bralliar.



Chrysanthemum Milka, of the Early-flowering Type.

HIGH WATER AT MURPHYSBORO.

When the Big Muddy river of southern Illinois could no longer accommodate the large quantity of water flowing into it from its swollen tributaries, the water rose rapidly and overflowed its banks at Murphysboro, Ill., where it inundated the grounds of the Wisely greenhouses, situated near that town. The illustration herewith shows the Wisely greenhouses during the period of the flood. Claude Wisely, in speaking of the flood, said: "The high water certainly put us out of commission. Our fires in the boiler house were extinguished by the water on the morning of February 1, but by installing stoves we have been able to keep the stock from freezing. Our frame of pansies and several hundred 2-year-old rose bushes were inundated. The water, however, did not get to any of the stock in the houses, and today, February 3, it is retreating slowly."

CHRYSANTHEMUM MILKA.

Of the early flowering type of chrysanthemums, which are now so popular for outdoor use in the eastern states, few are more attractive than is Milka, the lovely snow-white flowers of which, when grown in a natural way, about twelve flowers to a plant, make a plant that is the acme of artistic grace. Outdoors Milka made a perfect bush about two feet high, covered with blooms, and elicited a great deal of admiration from visitors who saw it last season in C. H. Totty's garden at Madison.

ORCHIDS

CATTLEYAS AFTER FLOWERING.

How long should cattleyas be rested after flowering, and about how often should they be watered when resting? I have the following varieties: Trianæ, now in bloom; labiata, resting; Mossiæ, Percivaliana, speciosissima and Schroederæ. Should they be repotted and given new peat each year after flowering? What kind of feed should be used for cattleyas, if any? Do the leads that have flowered this year ever flower again, or is it only the new leads that flower? Would it be advisable to cut off the old leads that have lost the top part of the leaf? I have a Vanda cærulea that is starting to make a new leaf. Will it need plenty of water from now on? Would it be advisable to divide large plants and make several smaller plants? I have a plant of Schroederæ just showing bud. Will it be possible to get this in bloom for St. Valentine's day? The night temperature is 70 to 72 degrees.

E. A. R.—Ill.

Cattleyas after flowering like a moderate rest, but the resting used to be much overdone, with resultant injury to the plants. Keep them drier for a couple of months, until the new growths are well started; then gradually water more abundantly. Hybrid cattleyas do far better if not rested at all, and such species as you have need a short rest only. Water sufficiently so that there is no fear of the bulbs shriveling. Potting is not always necessary each season. Occasionally it suffices to remove some of the surface soil and add some new compost, but if the plants are starved or crowded, or have overhanging roots, repot by all means during the resting period. Be sure to pot cattleyas firmly.

C. labiata should be repotted at once, and Percivaliana and Trianæ before the end of March; the others named should be potted somewhat later. Fern fiber is the ideal compost for cattleyas; not the soft material, but that which is somewhat coarser and tougher, and through which water passes freely. Keep the plants tolerably dry after potting, until new roots become active; then increase the moisture at the roots.

Leads on cattleyas and lælias which have once flowered do not bloom again. They must not be cut off, however, until they show signs of decay. Some growers feed cattleyas; others do not. Personally, I have found that occasional weak applications of cow manure during the growing season are beneficial to these and many other orchids, but for cattleyas the doses must always be weak and not of the strength which calanthes, phaius, zygopetalums, cœlogynes, sobralias, etc., appreciate. Cattleyas and other orchids are often divided when they become unwieldy in size. Moderate-sized plants in 6-inch or 7-inch pots give more blooms in proportion to their size than larger specimens. Do not try to force your Schroederæ in any such night temperature as 70 to 72 degrees, unless you want to ruin them. They should have a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees at night.

Vanda cærulea, if well rooted, will need a fair supply of moisture. It likes a light position, with full winter sun, at the cool end of the cattleya house. A temperature of 55 degrees at night will suit it better than 10 degrees higher.

HOUSE FOR MIXED ORCHIDS.

I should like to change my orchid collection, consisting of cattleyas, vandas, dendrobiums, odontoglossums, lælias, cypripediums and cœlogynes, from a house twelve feet to the ridge and seventeen feet wide to one twenty-two feet to the ridge and thirty-four feet wide; both houses are fifty feet long. The larger house is three-quarter span. I want to grow them with a general collection of stove and greenhouse plants, such as palms, ferns, anthuriums and different varieties of foliage plants. Which would be the more suitable, the high or the low house, and will the results be as good if they are grown with other plants?

F. S.—N. Y.

On the whole, the smaller or lower house would be the better. Cattleyas and lælias would do well in the larger house, provided they could have the necessary air and proper light. Some varieties, such as vandas, dendrobiums, cypripediums, phalænopsis, aërides, etc., would do well in a warm, moist house, such as you would grow tropical foliage plants in, except that dendrobes, when their growths are completed, should be moved to a cooler and drier house to mature their pseudo-bulbs. Odontoglossums and cœlogynes require a fairly cool house, especially the former. The various orchids you name cannot all be grown successfully in one house. You will get much better results by keeping the different varieties in temperatures as nearly suited to their conditions as possible.

SPLIT EASTER LILIES.

Please tell me what makes Easter lilies split. I also would like to know why cold storage lilies have short stems. I have never tried growing cold storage lily bulbs until this year and they have only made stems from six to twelve inches long. Is the trouble in the growing?

S. M.—Kan.

Usually bulbs that are diseased produce split flowers. The cause of much disease is overwatering in the early stages of growth and the starting of the bulbs in too low a temperature. As a rule, lily bulbs have an insufficient rest before being started. Cold storage lilies never possess the vigor of fresh bulbs. Give them a warm and shaded location. The shade will help to draw up the stems.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Easter Lilies.

Constant inquiries are coming in about Easter lilies, and it is well to remind readers that, while April 23 is an unusually late date for Easter, it is not a good policy to hold back their plants in a cool house. L. longiflorum giganteum, which is the Easter lily par excellence for pots, should have a good heat from start to finish; otherwise you will get a large proportion of dwarf, stunted plants. If you can see and count the buds on your plants March 15, you are all right, if the plants are then allowed 60 degrees at night right along. If your plants show buds earlier than this, do not run them cooler. A far better plan is to let them come along and hold them cooler and shaded when the first flowers have opened. If you take lilies from a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees and give them, say, 20 degrees lower at one swoop, do not be surprised if a large part of the buds are destroyed. Lilies will not stand such sudden changes.

Fuchsias.

For bedding out in shady positions fuchsias are quite satisfactory. If you have started up some old plants they will soon give you a fine crop of succulent cuttings, which will root easily. If kept potted along, these will make nice stock in 4-inch pots for May sales. Fuchsias also make nice flowering plants in 6-inch, 7-inch or 8-inch pots for summer. Give them a cool, airy and somewhat shaded house to grow in. Of course, give them an abundant water supply. There are some trailing fuchsias which make grand basket and piazza-box plants. These flower for months if grown in a position where they are fairly well protected from the rays of the sun. Even if you have none of the regular drooping fuchsias, any of the ordinary varieties make fine basket plants, as they have a natural drooping tendency. Leave a hollowed out space for water at the top of each basket, as fuchsias are thirsty subjects as well as active feeders.

Hydrangeas for Easter.

The new French hydrangeas are fine for Easter, especially the pink and white varieties. They force much more easily than the old Otaksa. They are somewhat more tender, however, and if they are not treated carefully mildew is liable to disfigure the foliage and cripple them. Start them in a temperature of 50 degrees. With a late Easter, such as we shall have this year, the plants should easily flower on time in this temperature. Feed freely when the flower heads show, discontinuing this as the heads begin to show color. From early started plants a batch of cuttings should now be taken and put in the propagating bench. Select shoots which are not flowering; these are sometimes hard to find on the French hydrangeas.

Miscellaneous Basket Plants.

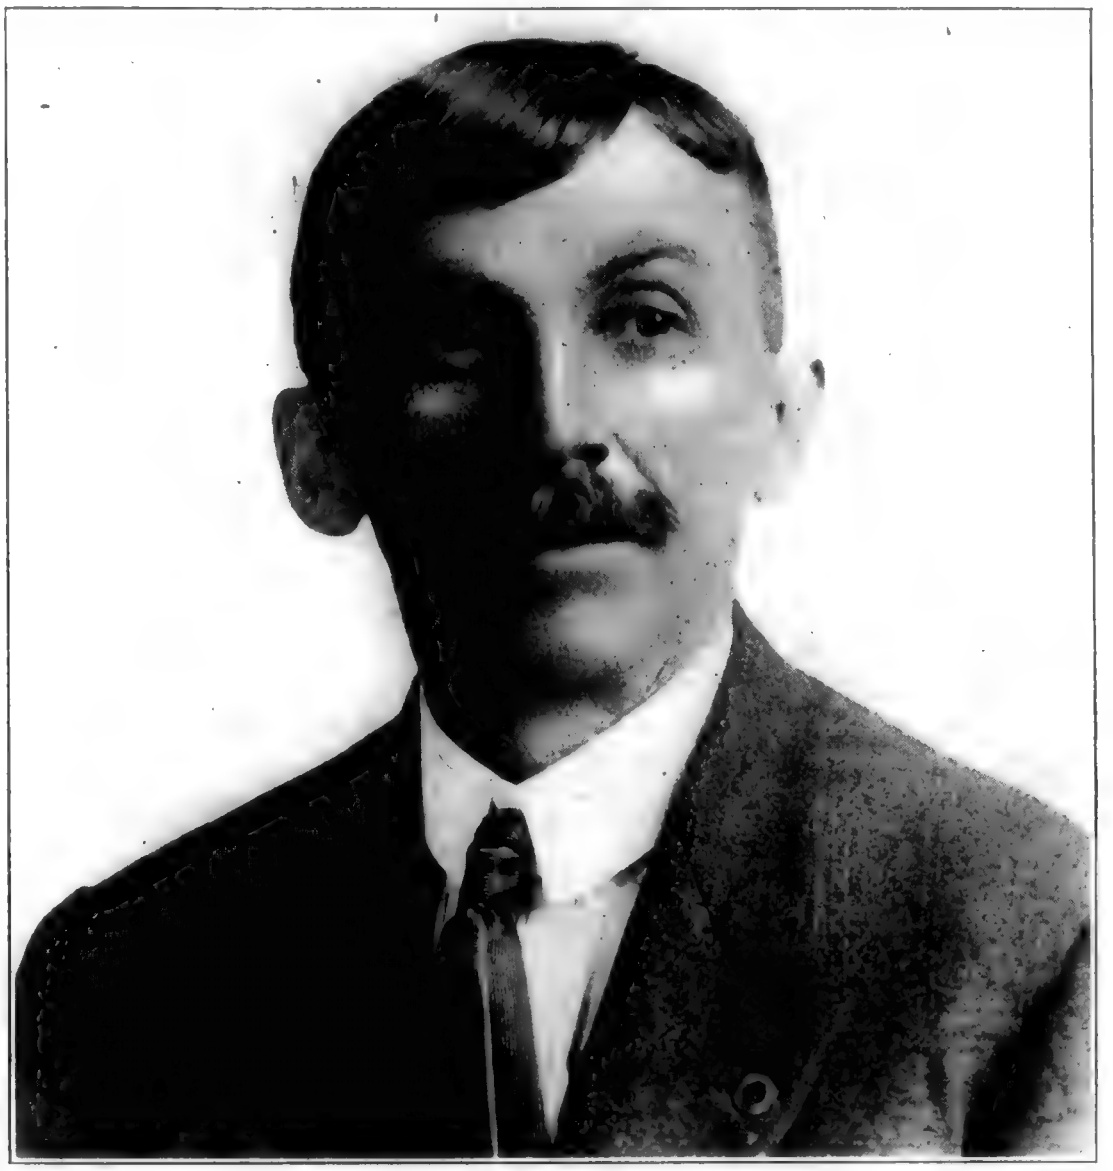
Seeds of Maurandia Barclayana, both the purple and white forms, should now be sown; also seeds of Thunbergia alata. Each of these makes an excellent basket, vase or window-box plant. Lantanas are not usually grown in baskets, but make splendid plants for this purpose and, if only kept well fed and watered, flower through the entire summer. Linaria Cymbalaria, the well known Kenilworth ivy, is another valuable plant for hanging purposes, of which a good stock should be worked up. Glechoma variegata, the ground ivy, can now be divided and potted. These will grow fast in a carnation temperature and can be propagated in quantity before the spring sales start.

Variegated Vinca.

That indispensable basket plant, Vinca variegata, is rarely overdone. While some people may prefer the green-leaved variety, the variegated form has a large call. The larger and stronger your plants are, the better your customers will like them. Probably you have them standing along the edges of the benches. They dry out rapidly when the pots are matted with roots; keep them well fed and watered. A pinch of bone meal on the top of each pot will soon be devoured by the roots. Select some of the young shoots starting from the base and put them in the cutting bench. These soft cuttings will root easily now and, if planted outdoors, will make nice stock to pot up in the fall.

Double Cornflowers.

The fine cornflowers seen in the markets at this season and earlier are produced from plants which, in many cases, were field-grown and lifted in September. Others are started in flats and potted off, but the finest I have seen were from lifted plants. For a spring crop, seeds sown now will flower within ten weeks and continue to bloom until hot weather. The prices are not high when these flower, but if you have a local call for them it would pay to devote a portion of a bench to them. If sown in rows, let the rows be twenty-four inches apart, and if you want good flowers thin them out to eight or nine inches apart. These may look like wide distances when the plants are small, but you will be surprised to see how quickly the spaces will be filled. A temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night suits cornflowers. The double blue variety is the best seller.



Jerusalem Cherries.

Have you remembered to sow seeds of Jerusalem cherries, the valuable Christmas berried plants? If not, do so without delay. Cuttings may also be rooted and will give lower-headed plants which will ripen their fruits earlier, but they never make nice, bushy plants like seedlings. Plant the seedlings out in May, pot them about the last of August, when the berries are all well set, keep them shaded and sprayed until well established and you will get plants which cannot fail to do you credit.

Cinerarias.

The increasing power of the sun makes it necessary to give cinerarias some shade, or they will wilt badly. A spraying on all bright days will also help to keep the leaves fresh and plump. Give all well rooted plants applications of liquid manure once a week until the flowers start to open, when it is best to discontinue it, as it is liable to take some of the color away from the flowers. A cool, airy house is what cinerarias like; 40 to 45 degrees at night is better than 50 degrees. It would not be wise to try to hold any of the large-flowered type for Easter, owing to its late date, but the stellata type, which flowers a little later, can be held easily in a cold house.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

R. A. McPHERON.

DID you ever visit Litchfield, down in Illinois? No! Then you have yet to know one of the finest little cities in the corn belt—midway between Springfield and St. Louis. But perhaps you already know McPheron? He is everywhere! No gathering of florists anywhere within a night's ride but what near the top of the first page of the register you find "R. A. McPheron, Litchfield," and the Cottage Greenhouses know him not until the festivities are done. He may not look the part, but McPheron is a type of the country florists who form the backbone of the trade. Looking after the growing himself, with the assistance of his wife in the selling, there never has been a year he has not made money and enjoyed life.

Jackson, Mich.—A fire started by crossed wires in the store of Henry M. Burt completely ruined the fixtures and contents of the establishment. Mr. Burt estimated his loss at $2,000, which he said was partially covered by insurance. Before the flames were extinguished Mr. Burt opened a store in the Otsago building.

SNAILS PERFORATE VIOLETS.

Today, when picking violets, I found many blooms eaten or punctured with small holes. What caused this? Those standing upright were not so apt to be in this condition as those near the ground. Do you think fumigating with tobacco papers would remedy this? What do you think of pulverized pig manure as a fertilizer for violets, mixed with the soil in the fall? Would dried blood used as a top-dressing during the winter be desirable?

E. M. H.—N. Y.

Probably small shell snails are responsible. If you look closely and find this to be the cause, give the soil a dusting of fine air-slaked lime after your flowers are picked. Let it lie for a day and it should clear out the pests. If they lodge in the crowns of the plants, dust a little in those. The lime will not harm the plants and can be washed off clean with the hose. Fumigation with tobacco papers would not kill these or other leaf-eating pests. I have never tried pulverized pig manure for violets. Perhaps some readers who have done so can give us their opinion. I do not think it would be equal to either cow or sheep manure. Rotted cow manure, if procurable, cannot be beaten. Do not use dried blood on violets as a top-dressing. I have seen disastrous results on both violets and sweet peas from its use. Sheep manure, pulverized, scratched in, makes a good top-dressing and probably pig manure would be perfectly safe. Liquid cow or sheep manure is excellent. C. W.

MR. CAHILL'S RETURN.

William E. Cahill, who was reported in The Review for February 3 as returning to New York to join the staff of Roman J. Irwin, formerly was with the Stumpp & Walter Co., but recently he has been with the Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., Boston, and has made his home at Dorchester, Mass. Mr. Cahill is only 35 years of age. In his new position he will cover the territory formerly covered by Mr. Irwin personally.

SNAPDRAGONS AND GLADIOLI.

What temperature is required for snapdragons and gladioli, and can they be brought into flower for Easter and Memorial day if started March 1? What size of pots would you recommend for snapdragons for benching at this date, or what is the latest date to be safe?

L. S. K.—Mass.

Both snapdragons and gladioli succeed well in a minimum temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night. The snapdragons will do well 5 degrees cooler. They must not, on any consideration, be grown warmer than 50 degrees if good, stocky spikes are wanted. Neither snapdragons nor gladioli, even if started at once, will be in flower for Easter, although it comes unusually late this year, but each may be had for Memorial day. Plant out the snapdragons from 2¼-inch or 2½-inch pots as soon as possible, and the gladioli by the middle of February.

MOLD ON BOXWOOD.

We are experiencing difficulty with mold in the storage of our boxwoods this winter. The stock in question is planted in tubs and the disease attacks the center, working toward the outside of the tree. Can you instruct us as to the proper method of handling this class of nursery stock in winter storage? Any information on this matter will be appreciated.

D. H.—Ill.

This is undoubtedly due to lack of ventilation. You cannot successfully keep any evergreens unless they are freely ventilated. Give them air every day unless it is severely cold. Never mind if the temperature is a number of degrees below freezing. Boxwood will withstand zero weather without injury. You will find that with plenty of fresh air your mold will soon disappear. There are few days in the winter when some ventilation cannot safely be given to this class of stock.

GOOD EXTERMINATOR OF MICE.

Some kind of animal, either mouse or rat, is destroying the buds on my plants. The rodents nip off the buds and eat them, and have practically ruined one of my houses. I have set traps and used poisoned bait without getting rid of them. I think they are mice, but is it possible for them to get up on a plant? I can see where they have dug holes in the bed. Kindly advise me what to do. J. H. S.—Conn.

This is probably the work of mice. They are especially destructive on carnation buds. Use some burnt meal. Dampen it a little and mix some white arsenic through it. Lay this around on small pieces of paper. The mice will eat it greedily and it will make short work of them. C. W.

HYPNUM; USED FOR PACKING.

I am sending you a sample of moss that I picked in the woods some time ago. Please give me the name of it. Do you think it is valuable commercially? This moss is beautiful and some of it has small, light blue flowers.

C. A. H.—Ohio.

The plant in question is one of the mosses, the botanical name being hypnum, a group containing many different species, all of which are interesting. This plant is not of much value commercially, though several of the species are gathered and dried for use as packing material by European nurserymen, the hypnums also being found in Europe.

The blue flowers mentioned belong to some other small plant growing among the hypnum, the latter being one of the cryptogams, or flowerless plants. It is allied to the fern. W. H. T.

CROPS FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

I would like to find out about growing stocks for Memorial day. What variety is best to grow and when should the seeds be planted to allow for giving one pinch, or is it advisable to pinch them back? When should I buy snapdragons from 2½-inch pots to plant and have in crop for Memorial day?

J. H.—R. I.

Sow ten weeks' stocks from February 15 to 20 for a Memorial day crop. Pot off the seedlings singly and discard such as throw single flowers. These are of little commercial value. The plants do not need any pinching.

Snapdragons from 2½-inch pots should be planted early in March to ensure a good Memorial day crop.

HYACINTHS DAMPING OFF.

We have a contract to deliver about 15,000 hyacinths and we purchased the miniature Dutch hyacinth bulbs and are growing them in 3-inch pots. They are being sold at 10 cents each. We are having some trouble after bringing these hyacinths from the beds, well rooted. They shoot up about two inches and then damp off, and in a great many cases the entire bulb is soft, or practically rotted. What is your advice on how to handle these bulbs successfully? We have used a large quantity of water on these plants, inasmuch as a 3-inch pot cannot carry a large amount of soil. We have endeavored to keep the water from the bud as much as possible in watering the plants. We maintain a temperature of about 60 degrees at night.

G. G.—S. C.

While your hyacinths may have good roots, seeing they are in such small pots, they should not be started until they have made a top growth at least two inches long, and if three inches all the better. These bulbs should have been covered with sand, coal ashes or even loam in a cold cellar, in which case they would have made an ample top growth before now. If you have had them outdoors they will be later. You have started your bulbs before they had a sufficient top growth. Provided they were not heated in transit from Holland, they should flower satisfactorily even in these small pots if treated properly, but you cannot expect fine spikes in such small pots. C. W.

FERN PICKERS' TROUBLES.

The area in New England over which ferns can be picked without payment for the privilege is being steadily narrowed and no doubt those in the greens business in Wisconsin and in the south soon will suffer the restriction of their fields of activity. "Shrubbery thieves" is what the News, of Danbury, Conn., calls the fern pickers. In a recent article it says in part:

"Investigation revealed the fact that parties of foreigners employed by New York florists came to this city every day and went into the woods, trespassing upon the land of various persons at will, and took away large bales of ferns in their season and also of laurel, which were shipped to New York for profit. The result has been that considerable land in the outlying sections has already been shorn of its floral beauty by persons who have no right to the products which they have taken, but who trespass upon the property of others and cut these pretty growths merely for commercial purposes.

"The owners of the land which has been thus despoiled have received no profit, and have tried in vain to catch the shrubbery thieves at their depredations.

"The law with reference to such thievery reads as follows:

Every person who shall willfully injure any tree or shrubs standing upon the land of another, or injure or throw down any ferns, trellis, framework or structure on the land of another, or shall willfully cut, destroy or take away from the land of another, any creeping fern, crops, shrubs, fruit or vegetable production, shall be fined not more than $100, or imprisoned not more than twelve months, or both.

"The Chamber of Commerce has taken up the matter and it is to be brought to the attention of the farmers by the Chamber of Commerce and the county farm bureau, at an early date, so that the united efforts of all may be obtained to stop the wholesale theft that is now going on."

GLOXINIAS FOR JULY.

When should gloxinias be planted in the benches to have them in flower in July and August, and how far apart should they be planted? What soil suits them best, and do they require much water? Please give me other information as to growing these plants.

J. H.—R. I.

While gloxinias can be grown in benches as well as in coldframes during the summer and will make splendid leaves and extra large flowers under this method of treatment, they are nearly always grown in pots. You can procure tubers at any time now, but do not start them until early April. Start them in flats of sand in a warm house, being sure not to overwater and to shade them. Plant in the benches when they have made a little top and bottom growth. Do not let the roots become matted before planting. Use a soil consisting of loam, leaf-mold and well decayed manure, with plenty of sharp sand added, and place the plants a foot apart each way to permit of proper development of the leaves.

When watering be careful not to wet the foliage any more than can be helped. Shade the plants from sunshine, for the foliage is rather easily burned. Fumigate occasionally to keep the plants free from thrips. This frequently attacks them in summer. You can sow seeds now in pans of finely prepared soil. Keep the pans in a warm, moist house, transplant into flats and later pot off to secure flowering plants in July and August. These will not be so large as those produced from tubers. C. W.

The alarm clock went off at four o'clock in the morning.

"I fooled you that toime," said Mike with a grin, "for I wasn't aslape at all."

The florist fools himself who thinks there is any way of selling goods in the trade more effective than advertising in The Review. Also, it's the most inexpensive way in proportion to results.

"We are completely sold out and have had to send money back. The Review is, without doubt, the best advertising medium in the trade."—J. C. RENNISON CO., Sioux City, Ia.

Review readers are not asleep. Note this:

"Please tell us confidentially what you think of —— ——. Why doesn't he advertise in The Review if he is O. K.?"—MILLER FLORAL CO., Farmington, Utah.

The alarm clock rings in The Review office at 4 o'clock (p.m., not a.m.) every Tuesday. It is to let everybody know advertising forms close for that week's issue in just sixty minutes.

Morris, Ill.—The Morris Floral Co. was hard hit by the recent flood resulting from a rise in the river near here. The boiler room was flooded, but further trouble was warded off by installing a water pump and forcing the water out. All stock, especially roses, was badly set back, but it was said conditions would be normal by February 15.

BEGONIAS AND GLOXINIAS.

Please tell me how to grow tuberous-rooted begonias and gloxinias from seed. What length of time is required to bring them into bloom?

H. H.—Ill.

January and February are the best months in the year for sowing begonia and gloxinia seeds. Use pans, which should be well drained. Lay some moss or other coarse material over the drainage. A compost consisting largely of leaf-mold, with sand added, makes the best medium in which to start these seeds. Pass the soil for the surfaces of the pans through a fine screen; level and firm a little, then water with a fine rose can before sowing the seeds. The seeds are fine and must be sown with great care, distributing them as evenly as possible. Scatter a thin dusting of fine sand over the seeds. Cover the pans with squares of glass and cover with paper to prevent drying out. Water carefully and gradually discard the glass and paper coverings as the seedlings appear. The seed must be sown in a warm, close and moist house.

When large enough to handle, the seedlings can be pricked off into flats of light, sandy soil, and from these they can be potted, using a little heavier compost, with a little decayed manure added. Both begonias and gloxinias will flower the same season. The former require cooler treatment and less shade than the latter. Each succeeds well in a compost of fibrous loam, leaf-mold, decayed manure and sand, not too firmly pressed in the pots.

Springfield, O.—Calvin H. Cox, who has been growing cut flowers in a small way, says that the spring will see an enlargement of his facilities.

Helena, Mont.—With the thermometer at 40 degrees below zero, January 27, T. E. Mills, president and manager of the State Nursery & Seed Co., was greatly surprised upon entering the packing shed to find all the employees of the firm there with a chest of sterling silver containing fifty-six pieces, beautifully engraved, to commemorate his silver wedding anniversary. In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Mills were again surprised by a large number of their friends at their home and were the recipients of many beautiful, useful and valuable gifts in silver.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1916: President, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; vice-president, R. C. Kerr, Houston, Tex.; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Thirty-second annual convention, Houston, Texas, August 15 to 18, 1916.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

C. L. BAUM, Knoxville, Tenn., has a climbing sport of Ophelia rose.

C. H. TOTTY will disseminate, in 1917, Hugh Dickson's Irish rose that won the thousand-dollar trophy at the San Francisco exposition.

IF the recent tour of the Presidential party did nothing else, it boosted the sale of orchids. The First Lady was photographed early and late, but never without her corsage of cattleyas.

THERE is no lack of individuality among florists; indeed, the florists' business, in spite of its recent growth, still is of such an individual character that the conspicuous successes nearly all are built on some one man's personal qualities.

FOR a red carnation, Baur & Steinkamp made a happy choice when they selected Merry Christmas as the name of their seedling to be disseminated in 1916. Surely any variety will travel farther with such a name than it would if christened Mrs. Mulcahey.

WHATEVER one does in the solitude of his own workroom, in the presence of others flowers should be handled at least as carefully as we would expect one to handle eggs. If we are seen to slam stock around as though it had no value, how can we expect others to think better of it than we do?

THE newspaper publicity for the National Flower Show was begun January 30 in the Philadelphia Record, which used a half page illustration. This was the first big gun. Shots will be fired one by one in each of the Philadelphia dailies until about March 10, after which a broadside will be let loose daily.

AGAIN, IT'S HARD TO BEAT.

The Review has remarked in the past that in the florists' business, especially the wholesale end of it, sales are obtained at so little cost that it almost is inconceivable to those accustomed to selling costs in other lines. Last week the illustration of the point was the experience of a plantsman cleaned out of cyclamens, selling $1,000 worth at an advertising cost of $4.20. This week's illustration is an extract from a letter from a dealer in evergreens:

We advertised three times in the Review and one ad brought $2,900 worth of orders. It is the best paper I ever saw; we have been doing a wonderful business and thank you for it. You can use this if you want to.—Grant Presnell, manager, John's Creek Evergreen Co., Cosby, Tenn., February 2, 1916.

The results this advertiser speaks of were obtained through the use of a 1-inch display advertisement. Again, can you beat it?

When you hear a man complaining of the cost of advertising you can be pretty sure he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

GOOD WORK AT CLEVELAND.

The florists of Cleveland long have been known as a "live bunch," an aggregation especially skilled in matters of publicity. The flower business has been better advertised in Cleveland the last few years than in any other city in the United States. And at no time has better work been done there than this season, when a committee from the Florists' Club was given an appropriation for the purchase of publicity. As an example of its work, the front page of the News the other day carried a double column cut of two young ladies admiring handsome bouquets. Underneath was this sane text:

The girls are just crazy over the valentines florists are preparing for Monday, February 14. St. Valentine's day. Each of them is hoping that she will receive one.

There is one creation composed of two hearts, made of birchbark filled with lilies of the valley, freesias and tulips, with gold arrows tied with pale pink ribbon.

Then, there is the heart-shaped bouquet of sweet violets with a white lace handkerchief to protect the hands and long loops of ribbon to suspend it from the arm while dancing.

Long sprays may be used, instead of corsage bouquets, to complete the effects of gowns.

The sunshine of the last few weeks has brought out the posies rapidly, so flowers will be reasonable in price and lovely in quality for Valentine day.

Many florists are using the "Language of Flowers" in selecting their flowers, so that any sentiment desired by the purchaser can be obtained.

One thing the committee carefully avoids is the destruction of news value, as would be the case if it tried to get the same stuff into several papers. The editors are liberal when they know the features are not duplicated.

THE WHITE MEDAL.

The George Robert White medal has this year been bestowed by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on E. H. Wilson, whose achievements as a plant collector are known to everyone in the horticultural world. The George Robert White medal of honor was founded by George Robert White, of Boston, for the purpose of giving suitable recognition to those who have accomplished important work in horticulture, and the fund was vested in the Massachusetts society to make the award annually. While the medal is intended principally to recognize work accomplished by a resident of the United States, it may also be awarded to a person, commercial firm or institution of some other country, the result of whose work in horticulture may be of direct benefit to the interests of horticulture of the United States. The medal is struck in 24-carat gold, is two and three-fourths inches in diameter, and weighs between seven and eight ounces. The first award of the medal was made to Prof. Sargent, director of the Arnold Arboretum, in 1911.

A RECORD.

While The Review is this season carrying considerably more advertising of all kinds than ever before, the increase in Classified ads is particularly striking. There are more than sixteen full pages of these busy little liners in this issue, all set in one kind of type so that each advertiser gets an equal show and all charged for at the same rate; none run free as a bonus to those who may thus be induced to order display space.

WHY CUT PRICES?

One of the tendencies of the trade, the reason for which is not apparent, is the steady reduction of prices. It does not seem to be justified by conditions.

Practically every article used in greenhouses has advanced in price within the year and this is a reason why all florists should maintain prices, if not advance them, while of course striving to give the best of quality and service.

There is no condition of oversupply to force a fall in prices; indeed, it looks as though the spring season will see much the largest demand this trade ever has enjoyed. It warrants the maintenance of prices, if not an advance.

Probably reductions in prices at this time find their cause in the undeveloped state of the selling end of the business. Few florists are expert salesmen; many have price as their only selling argument; they know of no reason why anyone should buy of them except that the price is lower.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Except for a little increase in the supply of this item and a little decrease in the other, there is little change in Chicago market conditions from those prevailing a week ago. To be sure, the extreme cold of the last few days has lessened the activity of the local buyers, but shipping demand continues strong. As a result of the floods in the west and south, express companies refused to take shipments to points beyond St. Louis on the Iron Mountain railroad unless subject to delay. This practically cut off trade in that quarter for about three days.

There is still a small supply of Beauties available, but the quality is not up to standard. As for other roses, the supply continues distressingly short. Assurance, however, comes from several large growers that with seasonable weather, rose crops will come on rapidly. Long, fancy roses are selling at much lower prices, quality considered, than are asked for shorts.

Carnations are coming to the market in larger numbers, but there is a difference. Of first-class stock there is none

Store Open All Day February 13

FEBRUARY 13 was one of our biggest days in 1915 and we have prepared for the usual increase our sales are showing this year. For the accommodation of the buyers, we shall keep our store open ALL DAY Sunday, February 13, the day before St. Valentine's. Telegraph or telephone for what you need.

St. Valentine's Day Stock

We have arranged for extra large supplies, February 11, 12 and 13, of Violets (home-grown doubles and singles; also Hudson river doubles), Spencer Sweet Peas in all colors, Valley, Daffodils, Jonquils, Tulips, Purity Freesia and Rainbow Freesia, the latter in many bright colors, a novelty of merit not to be had elsewhere.

Carnations

Our Carnation crops are on again—can fill all orders with fancy stock, the best varieties grown by specialists. Order freely, our prices are not more than you have paid in other years for an equal grade of stock.

BEAUTIES

You will find our Beauties to be the best the market affords. A moderately large supply.

ROSES

We can fill all orders for medium and long Roses in all varieties. Specially strong on Russell.

Use Giganteum Lilies for Funeral Sprays and for Wedding Decorations. These are the largest and showiest flowers for the money and we offer a large crop.

FANCY FERNS

We pride ourselves on the quality of our hardy cut ferns. If your supply is not entirely satisfactory, try ours.

too much. Of good stock there is a fair supply. Of medium and splits there is any quantity. Fully thirty per cent of the carnations now reaching the market are splits.

Bulbous stock of all kinds is plentiful. Tulips, red, white, yellow and variegated, are available in quantities. Jonquils, too, are on the long side. Not so, daffodils. These are still in short supply. These items, however, have not been moving in an altogether satisfactory manner. They show a rather marked tendency to drag. Paper Whites still find a cordial reception at the hands of the buyers. Romans are leaning to the short side. The demand for violets can be satisfied without difficulty. Valley is again short of the demand. Sweet peas are moving well, but the supply is shortened as a result of the trouble growers are having with buds dropping. Freesia, too, clears readily. As a consequence of the extreme cold, eastern growers of cattleyas are not shipping to the Chicago market as heavily as they were, with the result that cattleyas are decidedly scarce.

The shortage of Sprengeri and plumosus continues. Other greens are moving, but not fast enough to outrun the supply. Many ferns require picking over and rebunching before the buyers will accept them.

Elaborate preparations are being made for St. Valentine's day and many advance orders have been booked by the wholesalers, assuring a good three days at the end of this week.

January Business.

Now that January totals have been figured up and consideration has been possible, a somewhat curious state of affairs is revealed. Some wholesalers and growers had the best January on record, but others are not willing to be quoted on the subject. Scarcely anyone handled so many flowers as in January last year, but better prices were received, so that in cases in which the shrinkage in supply was not too severe at least as good a total of sales was obtained. The principal sufferers from the short supply were wholesalers who receive little stock of shipping grade and who habitually buy on the market to fill the greater part of their out-of-town orders. During January it was difficult for a wholesaler to buy either roses or carnations, as each house had need for all it received.

The retailers nearly all report a banner business so far as volume is concerned, but they, too, suffered from the higher cost of stock, profits not increasing in proportion to the increase in sales.

Novelty Night at Club.

The Florists' Club has chosen the Morrison hotel as permanent meeting place, the former quarters at the Bismarck being no longer available, and the show of novelties will be open there this afternoon, February 10, as well as this evening, when the regular club meeting will be held. The banquet room on the third floor of the Morrison is a fine place for the show and no doubt nearly everyone in the trade will have a look in today or tonight.

The Crown Prince of Crown Point.

A new Lord & Burnham steel frame house 60x200 will be built at Crown Point this summer to make space for Alois Frey's Rainbow freesias for next season. Twenty benches ninety-five feet long will hold quite some freesias!

John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., sales agent for the cut blooms, and A. Henderson, of Henderson & Co., selling the bulbs, were among those who made visits to Mr. Frey last week to look over the multicolored freesias for which Mr. Henderson coined the name Rainbow. They are a magnificent sight, whole benches of bright blooms. Mr. Frey obtained the first bulbs from a brother in Europe, but he has spent seven years in cross fertilizing and selecting the best colors, largest flowers and strongest growers, with the result that his greenhouses present a sight not to be seen elsewhere in the world.

He now has moderate quantities of distinct, separate colors, besides many hundreds of colors in mixture. Because one cannot grow freesia bulbs commercially in a greenhouse, Mr. Frey last September planted about 100,000 bulbs on a tract of leased land at Montebello, Cal., where he has one of his Crown Point men in charge.

Another fine sight at Crown Point is the Mrs. Ward carnations; one would have to go far to find better. Nor is Matchless to be passed without comment.

Not only does Mrs. Frey supervise the housework and see that everyone who comes under that hospitable roof is well fed, but she is Mr. Frey's right-hand man in the greenhouses.

When the Presidential party was in town last week a fine bunch of the Rainbow freesias was sent to Mrs. Wilson at the Blackstone hotel. A few days later a letter of "warm appreciation," written on White House stationery, came to the greenhouses.

Various Notes.

Charles Erne, of Erne & Klingel, calls attention to the fact that the shipping trade has again been the salvation of the market during the zero weather. The houses that depend on city trade have had a decidedly quiet week. February 6 is said to have seen fewer buyers than have visited the market any Sunday in four months.

Word was received last week that the British authorities had granted safe conduct for the importation of 3,000,000 valley pips, the property of H. N. Bruns, now in storage at Rotterdam.

Finding his present space inadequate, Elmer Sigwalt, of Arlington Heights, Ill., a member of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, is planning the erection of two additional houses to be devoted to carnations.

So well has Carnation Alice acquitted itself at the establishment of Wietor Bros., in Rogers Park and at the store, that all the cuttings are being rooted, with the intention of planting several times as much space with it next season.

As an indication of what the coming season has in store for the florists' business, the John C. Moninger Co. reports a list of forty-six greenhouse contracts in its factory, all wanted for immediate shipment. Among them is one for Stephen Hyde, of Carthage, Mo., for an all-steel greenhouse 84x500, and another for Ludwig Stapp, of Rock Island, Ill., for three all-steel greenhouses, each 34x300. The Moninger concern recently has added seven to its force of office employees to cope with the unusual volume of inquiries. R. E. Kurowski was at Detroit last week.

A temporary store has been opened by George Perdikas in the big vacant building at the northwest corner of Wabash avenue and Van Buren street.

John Kruchten comments interestingly on split carnations. He says that up to the last few days carnations have not split so badly this season as usual. Why?

Where most growers are cutting down on Richmond, the variety has been so profitable to Peter Reinberg that still more space will be given it next season. Alice will be added to the list of carnations.

According to George Wienhoeber, St. Valentine's is the most difficult holiday of the year when it comes to meeting the demand for appropriate novelties in our line.

Notice came to E. C. Amling last week that his new Packard twin six is ready for delivery. He plans to drive the Franklin till spring.

That the cold wave has been particularly costly to shippers of orchids is the report of C. W. McKellar, who says valuable shipments from the east have been frosted. He says orchids are more susceptible to frost than are roses or carnations, because of the method of packing with air space in the box.

It isn't everyone who is able to celebrate his birthday in the same month with those of Washington and Lincoln, but H. B. Kennicott, of Kennicott Bros. Co., can and did February 4, at which time he arrived at the age of 30 years.

The lath house of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill., is being extended to the tracks of the St. Paul railroad. The palm department continues to grow. Young kentia palms occupy five houses.

An optimistic tone is sounded by the firm of Joseph Ziska & Sons, which reports collections unusually good.

The Chicago agent for Carter's Tested Seeds, A. L. Berry, has removed from room 505 to room 601, 230 South La Salle street, where he is more pleasantly situated.

The greater part of last week was occupied by D. D. P. Roy in visiting florists and growers in southern Michigan.

The partnership between George A. Manos and John M. Kronis, doing business as the Railroad Station Florists, was dissolved February 4 by mutual consent, George A. Manos taking over for himself the stands in the Union depot, Chicago, and the Illinois Central station at Van Buren street. John M. Kronis takes over the stand at the Pennsylvania station in Pittsburgh and the stand at the Pennsylvania station at East Liberty, Pa.

the fact that a change of price has been necessary on boxes, owing to increased cost of production.

A range of glass 200x400 feet, being erected by Bassett & Washburn at Sierra Madre, Cal., is rapidly nearing completion. A unique feature of this range, so far as eastern and central growers are concerned, is the fact that above the glass is a shading of lath. This is necessary because of the excessive heat of the sun. The place is in charge of E. B. Washburn, who finds working in the open so agreeable that he is waxing heavy.

Seven of the oldest houses in the Evanston range of George Weiland will sing their swan song this year. They will soon be filled with bedding plants; then, later, they will be devoted exclusively to chrysanthemum stock, and when the mum season has passed they will be razed to make room for something new.

The new store of Henry M. Hirsch, at 37 East Van Buren street, will be opened the last of this week. Although the fixtures have not been installed, Mr. Hirsch says he will be ready to catch his share of the St. Valentine's day business.

Fourteen houses were to have been devoted to the new rose, Champ Weiland, by its originators, Weiland & Risch, of Evanston. But owing to the heavy demand for stock plants the number of houses they will actually plant will be considerably less. Of course they could retain more stock, but John Risch says it is their desire to make a universal distribution of the rose rather than localize its production by declining further orders.

A truly artistic window display for St. Valentine's day is that of George Wienhoeber, 41 South Wabash avenue. In the center background is a heart of red frieze, six feet in diameter. Suspended from above are three large, white cupids holding streamers that are attached to the heart. A striking feature of the display is a number of hearts on easels, each heart carrying on its front a vase with a bouquet. The color scheme was carried out with various spring flowers. These novelties were the product of the A. L. Randall Co. factory.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

We have not had favorable growing weather for a long time. Bulbous stock is plentiful; tulips and Golden Spur narcissi are of good quality and help to offset the shortage somewhat. Daisies, primulas, mignonette, lilac and sweet peas are more plentiful than they have been. Carnations are arriving in better quantities; the last few days, however, have seen a somewhat decreased supply. The wholesale houses survive the trying times quite well, and a few days of sunshine would put them in good shape to take care of all orders. Retailers have been fairly busy, but decorative work has decreased. Funeral trade, too, has fallen off.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its annual meeting February 1, in the Fort Pitt hotel. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Carl Becherer; vice-president, E. C. Reineman; secretary, H. P. Joslin; assistant secretary, W. A. Clarke; treasurer, T. P. Langhans; executive committee, P. S. Randolph, C. H. Sample and August Frishkorn.

There were splendid exhibits of cyclamen and primulas by Herman Rapp, gardener for D. T. Watson; M. Curran, gardener for Mrs. Elizabeth Horne; James Moore, of Phipps Con-

Because of the absence of President-elect Carl Becherer, President McCallum presided over the meeting. The members gave a vote of thanks to President McCallum for his efficient work during his term of office.

A lecture on "The City Beautiful" was given. It was the best and most instructive lecture of its kind ever given before the club. Lantern slides were shown, giving comparisons of what we have and what we might have.

The Market.

Stock is more plentiful than at the last writing, notwithstanding the fact that today, February 7, the thermometer registers 2 degrees below zero. Carnations have dropped in price, as the supply is more normal. Roses are still scarce and command a high figure. Spencer sweet peas are more plentiful and all kinds of bulbous stock are coming into the market in larger quantities. Narcissi are quite plentiful and daffodils and jonquils may be had in reasonable quantities, as well as freesias. Tulips are not so plentiful. Violets are abundant and are great favorites this year in corsages. Lilies are still holding their own and valley is in good supply.

The demand has been unusually good during the last two weeks. There have been large decorations and a great many corsage and wedding bouquet orders. Funeral work was heavier during the month of January than in any other month of the season. There was no great demand for carnations on McKinley's day, probably due to the fact that the florists did not advertise this day. The new offerings on the market include Roman hyacinths, forget-me-nots, mignonette and marguerites.

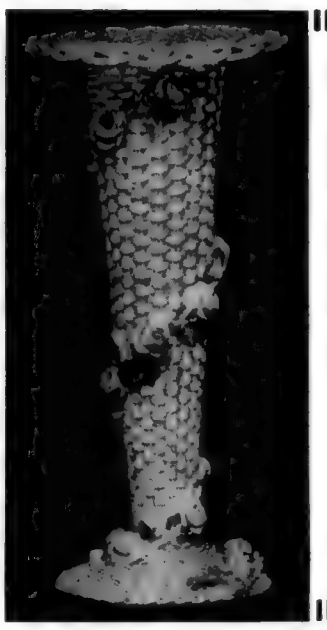
Various Notes.

The Doswell Floral Co. has fine Ophelia roses this winter. This is the first season this concern has cultivated this variety and it is meeting with success. The single violets continue to have that dark, rich color and strong fragrance. This concern will erect one or two rose houses in the spring, each 30x100 feet. Good cyclamen and hydrangea plants were on display at the downtown store; also ardisias, which came in too late for holiday sale.



Markey Bros. have moved their store from 117 Washington boulevard to 726 Harrison street. The new store, of which they took possession February 1, is located in an excellent retail shopping district. They are showing a fine line of potted blooming plants, including cyclamen, begonias, hyacinths and large pans of tulips and crocuses.

The Flick Floral Co. is featuring valentine corsages and novel arrangements of violets and spring flowers suitable for valentine offerings. An elaborate casket blanket was made by this company last week, consisting of white lilacs and Shawyer roses. This concern anticipates a good valentine business and has sent out attractive advertising folders suggesting flower valentines.

Edgar Wenninghoff is displaying fine cineraria plants, the only ones seen in the city. His baskets of cut flower combinations attract much attention in the Calhoun street window.

A. J. Lanternier & Son are cutting fine carnations and bulbous stock. Their tulip plants are especially good and were the first to appear on the market.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The week from February 3 to February 9, inclusive, began with a dull day and steadily improved afterwards. Prices fell, then rose on most flowers. The shipping demand was the strength of the market; locally business was only fair. Sweet peas have been coming in freely. Some fine orchid or Spencer varieties are offered; these choice flowers in bright colors sell best. The finest peas command $2 per hundred, or about $1 less than the best January price. There are few peas that bring this price, the larger number selling at $1.50 per hundred down to $1, 75 and 50 cents per hundred. Carnations are in heavy supply at reasonable prices. Daffodils are good, plentiful and cheap. Tulips do not sell as of old. The bulk of the stock offered is yellow and white; when nice pink and double orange are offered they find a market. Freesia goes slowly at low prices. Valley is fully equal to the demand, while gardenias and even cattleyas are rather dull. Easter lilies sell well, callas even better. Fine snapdragon is excellent stock and has been even during last week's depression. Violets are cheap; they seem to be neglected by many of the best buyers. Roses have improved in demand. The crop is fair rather than heavy. Beauties are extremely scarce.

Carnation Night.

In addition to the exhibits enumerated in last week's account of the Florists' Club's carnation meeting, held February 1, there was a handsome vase of Carnation Morning Glow from E. Winkler, of Wakefield, Mass. The exhibits staged by Guttman & Raynor, of New York city, were a white carnation, Peace, grown by Frank Dinda, of Farmingdale, N. Y., and Carnation Laura Weber, by Charles Weber, of Lynbrook, N. Y. Ludwig P. Vollers, trading as Vollers' House of Flowers, displayed a handsome basket of carnations. Another basket filled with Dorner's Nancy was arranged by the Strafford Flower Farms, of Strafford, Pa. It was a meeting that will long be remembered with pleasure.

The National Flower Show.

The committee on trade tickets, through its chairman, Edwin J. Fancourt, announced that special rates of admission to the show have been arranged for all florists and seedsmen who will buy tickets in quantity. The regular rate of admission will be 50 cents for each ticket. The special rate offered is 100 tickets for $25, with the added privilege of printing the purchaser's name on such tickets. Those buying these tickets will aid in advertising the show and swelling its receipts, as well as giving pleasure to their friends. All those desiring to purchase these trade tickets are requested to send their names and addresses now to Edwin J. Fancourt, 1203 Widener building, Philadelphia, in order that their names may be printed on the tickets in time for the distribution, which will be about March 15. A number of seedsmen and florists already have signified their intention of availing themselves of this offer.

The Midwinter Ball.

It has been apparent as the season progresses that society is entertaining extensively. This is a distinct contrast to last season, when the entertainments were few and their expenditure was much curtailed. This contrast was clearly seen in the midwinter ball that took place in Horticultural hall on the evening of February 4. The ball was larger, much larger, than last year, and the decorations were handsomer in proportion. These decorations, arranged by J. J. Habermehl's Sons, gave much pleasure to those present. The colors employed were chiefly yellow and white, with great masses of delicate green to set off the flowers, and innumerable electric lights to enhance the effect. The most unusual flower that graced the scene was Acacia pubescens, much prized for its refined and graceful beauty. The most striking flower was the golden forsythia, so popular in our spring shrubbery, boldly arranged in large gilt baskets. Azaleas, daffodils and tulips were freely used. The number of guests was estimated at 1,000.

For Valentines.

Through the courtesy of J. Max Nitzschke it is possible to describe in this column a pretty valentine specialty at the moment it is hanging in his window at the Forrest Flower Shop. The valentine consists of an old-fashioned, gilt, French basket of moderate size. From the top of the long, looplike handle is suspended a tiny Cupid by a bronze cord. On one side, also on the handle, is a red heart pierced by an arrow. The basket is filled with Sweetheart roses. Other baskets of similar designs are filled with other flowers, such as sweet peas, Ward roses, red roses, daisies or forget-me-nots. It matters little so that the flowers harmonize with the sentiment of the day. These baskets and kindred creations are proving increasingly popular. They retail at $1.50, $2 and $2.50 each.

Various Notes.

M. J. Callahan has his handsome front window filled with blooming cyclamens in small handle baskets. Each basket is decorated with a bow of ribbon of a color selected to harmonize or contrast effectively with the flowers. Mr. Callahan is doing a large business.

A baker's dozen of silver cups, besides fifty gold, silver and bronze medals, adorn the window of the Henry F. Michell Co. They are the company's National Flower Show prizes.

Sydney H. Bayersdorfer says that his house is the first to assist the florist to develop a demand for special days, and that while this in itself may not bring much business florists appreciate what the house is doing and show it by their confident buying.

It is a sad duty to announce the death of Mrs. Joseph Kift, which occurred in Westchester, Pa., February 5. She was 89 years of age. Mrs. Kift, who had been an invalid during the last year, was the mother of the well known and popular florist, Robert Kift, and of Joseph Kift, also well known and esteemed as a nurseryman.

Jacob Duetscher pushes the interest of the Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange in this city, while Charles Glazer spends part of his time on out-of-town work.

William J. Baker quietly celebrated an important anniversary February 9.

John Curwen was attracted from Berwyn to the Florists' Club's carnation meeting last week.

Emile F. Lieker, of Lansdowne, Pa., made his first appearance as an exhibitor of carnations at the Florists' Club meeting February 1. His standard varieties and seedlings were much admired.

Some wonderful snapdragon and gold basket sweet peas are seen at William J. Baker's. Phil.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

The cold days of last week had a tendency to curtail stock of all kinds. There was a drop in receipts of nearly fifty per cent on days when there was much ice and sleet. As a result there was a shortage of roses and carnations. Carnations which had been down to $2 per hundred quickly doubled in value. American Beauty roses still are scarce and the prices remain at $7.50 to $9 per dozen. Valley is in fair supply, with the price down to $4 per hundred following the glut of the week previous. Orchid-flowering sweet peas are much more plentiful and are to be had in fine colors at $2 to $2.50. They meet with a ready sale. Mignonette still is in good demand at $4 to $6 per hundred. The market during the latter part of the week was flooded with freesia and the price, which had been $5 per hundred, dropped to $2. Single violets still are in heavy supply. Orchids are plentiful at $30 to $40 per hundred, but there is a marked scarcity of gardenias, which remain at $3 per dozen. There is hardly enough good snapdragon to meet all calls.

Azaleas, white lilacs and other blooming plants helped to overcome the ill effects produced by the shortage in the cut flower market. The plants were stripped of their blooms and used largely in decorations. Cyclamens and begonias are fine. It is possible to buy good poinsettias, which were grown cool and came in late. These are being used in decorations and when placed in wall pockets can be removed the following day still in good shape.

Club Meeting.

The February meeting of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., was one of the most enthusiastic in the history of the organization. A considerable portion of the evening was given over to a discussion of plans for the members to attend the National Flower Show at Philadelphia the latter part of March. Harry B. Lewis, chairman of the committee on arrangements, of which M. J.

McCabe and Milton Thomas are members, reported that he had been asked to make arrangements for the transportation of more than thirty and, although a systematic canvass had not yet been made, the probabilities are that there will be more than 100 to go. Mr. Lewis stated that a private train will be run over the Baltimore & Ohio railroad for the accommodation of the florists, their families and friends, if enough applications can be obtained. Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., stated that the members of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Baltimore would join the Washingtonians when the train reached Baltimore. An invitation is extended to the florists of the south to stop off in this city and join the party.

On motion of William F. Gude, the club placed itself on record as favoring the inclusion of dahlias in the tests made of flowers and plants in the government experiment gardens.

Plans were discussed for the further education of the public with respect to flowers, with a view to popularizing their use as valentines. It was suggested that an advertisement be prepared for insertion in one or more of the local papers, such advertisement to be signed with the name of the club and the expense to be borne by individual contributions from retailers, wholesalers and growers.

The following nominations for officers for the ensuing year were posted: President, Lloyd Jenkins; vice-president, Adolph Gude; secretary, Clarence L. Linz; treasurer, William F. Gude; executive committee, George Field, Adolph Gude, George H. Cooke, Theodore Diedrich, David Bisset, William H. Ernest. The election of officers will take place at the March meeting.

The Market.

Last week was unsatisfactory, the volume of business lighter than expected, notwithstanding many banquets and graduations. Apart from roses, there was a decided fall in values. The lower price for roses was caused by lack of quality as much as by the lighter shipments. The week furnished all kinds of weather, Saturday bringing rain, and local trade with the retailers was light, while the surplus of carnations and bulbous stock filled the wholesalers' iceboxes and windows.

There are few good Beauties in the market. Prices for the best are steady at 60 cents and over. The lower grades were hardly salable at the week end. The warm spell got the blame. In other roses the short-stemmed stock fell to as low as $25 per thousand and a reduction of twenty per cent was made on all the specials and high grades, including the novelties. Hadley, Prima Donna and Ophelia lose none of their popularity.

The market has become surfeited with carnations. The best of them do not bring over $25 per thousand and inferior stock fell at times last week to as low as $10 per thousand. Valley is selling from $3 per hundred for the selected, but poor stock sells at $1 and the street peddlers are offering it. Violets have sold at from 25 cents down, the accumulations going to the sidewalk merchants as low as $1 per thousand.

Longiflorums are down to $10 per hundred for the selects. Orchids seem to have touched bottom, the shipments diminishing slowly. Gardenias hold at last week's prices, which are not high. There is a great surplus of tulips and no demand. Prices are unstable and many of the arrivals go into the discard. Freesia, narcissi, lilac, daisies, sweet peas, stocks and mignonette all are abundant.

Many of the wholesalers carry a variety of blooming plants. These are selling well and will sell heavily for St. Valentine's day. Concerning this sentimental day there seem to be great preparations and expectations as a result of The Review's article of January 20.

cultural Society will hold its annual dance and entertainment at Greenwich, February 16. A number from New York will attend.

Edward Branch died February 4. He was one of the oldest speculators in cut flowers in this city, and was much respected in the trade. His son is one of the force of Charles Brown, of Broadway.

The floral decorations of the Vanderbilt gallery of the Fine Arts Academy on West Fifty-seventh street were completed February 4, after several days of labor by Woodrow & Marketos and their staff, including Robert Woodrow and Walter Klein. The decoration is one of the most unique and elaborate of the season. Every florist in New York should see it during the three weeks it will be maintained. Mr. Woodrow has secured the order for the Red Cross decoration, another elaborate commission. In the meantime he is resting a week with his family at Delhi, N. Y.

Eddie Anker, salesman for Traendly & Schenck, has returned from his honeymoon.

The Greek-American Florists' Association will celebrate at Terrace Gardens as usual this year. The date is February 24.

Miss Mabel Conklin, bookkeeper for H. E. Froment, has returned home from the hospital and is rapidly recovering.

J. E. Rolker, of August Rolker & Sons, is making a business trip in his western territory.

Lord & Burnham Co. has the contract for $40,000 worth of new greenhouses at Spring Valley, N. Y., for A. S. Burns, Jr.

Miss Winklehouse, formerly bookkeeper for Wm. Elliott & Sons, now is in the office of Weeber & Don.

David Burpee, of Philadelphia, was a recent visitor.

Wm. J. Elliott has recovered so completely from his auto accident that he is able to serve his country on the grand jury.

Robert Wilson and Hugo Jahn, of Brooklyn, each has added another automobile to his delivery equipment.

J. V. Phillips has been suffering from poison contracted from rose thorns. Mrs. Phillips has recovered from her illness.

The second flower show at the Country Life Permanent Exposition will remain open until Saturday night, February 12. It mostly is amateur and private gardener in character.

A. L. Miller had a meeting of his committee February 8 to forward plans for New York's trip to the Philadelphia show. It is expected to have 400 in the party, according to John Young.

D. C. Arnold & Co. have about 50,000 square feet devoted almost exclusively to carnations.

FLOWER THIEF IN TOILS.

We have had the "weeping" forger, the forger buying flowers for a dead fellow-employee and other bogus check operators with schemes more or less antiquated, but it has remained for a Columbus, O., denizen of the underworld to devise a new method of swindling florists—not of money, but of flowers. This scheme was so simple and innocent-like that the thief succeeded in victimizing several Columbus florists before he was caught with the goods. The fact that he was not after the florists' money but the florists' flowers made it all the easier. The man would come into the store and say he was a member of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen buying flowers for the funeral of a dead member. He would order a $15 or $20 pillow and, as if on the spur of the moment, he would ask for a large bouquet of flowers to take with him to the supposed house of death. Payment for the entire order would be made at the house to which the pillow was to be delivered. The number given would turn out to be fictitious. The thief took the flowers with him in all cases but the last, when he was recognized by a downtown florist and arrested. He was fined and sent to jail. It is not clear how he disposed of the flowers, but it is clear that florists not only should be wary of cashing checks without proper identification but also be sure of new cash-on-delivery customers.

HARTFORD, CONN.

January 28 was carnation night with the Connecticut Horticultural Society at its meeting in the County building, Hartford. Alfred Cebelius, gardener for M. W. Jacobus, exhibited Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, Enchantress Supreme, White Wonder, Beacon and a vase of Buddleia Asiatica. Mr. Cebelius was awarded a first-class certificate for carnations and a cultural certificate for the buddleia.

Theodore Staudt, of Rockville, showed Benora, several sports of Benora and Narcissus Sir Watkin. He was given a first-class certificate for the sports of Benora and a certificate of merit for Sir Watkin.

John F. Huss, gardener for J. J. Goodwin, was awarded a cultural certificate for carnations, of which he had a good showing, including Alice, Gorgeous and Beacon.

W. A. Dawson, of Willimantic, staged the new carnation, Red Wing, a scarlet, for which he was given a first-class certificate.

The judges of the exhibits were F. Boss, C. H. Sierman and A. Righenzi. After the awards had been made President Hollister read an article entitled "Jackson Dawson, His Work and His Workshop."

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The supply of stock is larger than at the last writing, but not sufficient for present needs. The shipping business is good. Roses are more plentiful, but American Beauties at present are somewhat scarce. Killarney, White Killarney, Ophelia and Mock are the most abundant. The color of Killarney is much better now.

The supply of carnations has not increased enough to make a decided difference, with the exception of red carnations, for which there is no demand. Sweet peas are coming along nicely, but the supply is not what it should be. The majority of these are rather short-stemmed. The orchid-flowering variety prevails. Easter lilies, callas and Paper Whites are scarce.

Jonquils and daffodils are the most plentiful flowers on the market. The Victoria jonquil is not as abundant as Golden Spur. Daisies, both yellow and white, freesias and myosotis are few. Roman hyacinths are quite plentiful. Violets continue to sell well. Some good singles are to be had just now. Potted bulbous stock is becoming more plentiful, with white and yellow tulips in the lead. Greens are not overabundant and it seems as if all the growers are just cleaning their beds of greens.

Various Notes.

Tuesday evening, February 1, the Buffalo Florists' Club held its annual meeting for the nomination of its officers. The following were nominated: President, Robert Scott, L. H. Neubeck, Emil Brucker; vice-president, William Grever, Mark Palmer, William Peake; financial secretary, Edward Stratmeyer, Oliver Klingermeyer; treasurer, William Legge.

Recent visitors were William B. Leipzig, of A. Leipzig, Inc., New York; R. E. Blackshaw, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago.

The Colonial Flower Shop is progressing successfully. There is a new automobile for delivery purposes, painted white with a lavender finish that gives it a colonial effect.

Palmer's report a great business on the dollar box which they feature Friday and Saturday of each week.

L. H. Neubeck is delivering his parcels with a new delivery car. It is painted a napier green. It was said in a jesting manner, "You certainly must be getting rich up there on the corner." "Oh, no," was the reply, "I am working hard for everything I get, and anyone that wants anything must work for it."

Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Anderson are visiting at Colorado Springs, Colo.

Leon Neubeck recently opened a flower store on Connecticut street. The trade wishes him all kinds of success.

Manchester, N. H.—A florists' business has been started here by G. T. Davis.

Durham, N. C.—Fred Roll, the Florist, says he has to fight mildew every minute of the day. Sulphur is used liberally on the pipes and dusting is done all the time. On sticky, cloudy days, even with the outside temperature at 75 degrees, Mr. Roll fires his boilers and opens the ventilators.

FIRST REPORT
OF THE
National Floral Corporation

A STORY THAT WILL INTEREST EVERY RETAIL FLORIST

THE organization of the National Floral Corporation in the early part of 1915 was received by the retail florists with a mixture of enthusiasm, skepticism and cordiality. It is fitting, therefore, that the National Floral Corporation, having finished its first holiday season, should render some report of its success or failure.

The National Floral Corporation has suffered from the fact that there have been previous attempts to form coöperative organizations among florists which were either weak financially, or carried on in bad faith. The National Floral Corporation has been fortunate in that it immediately secured the coöperation and assistance of such representative florists as Blick the Florist, Norfolk, Va.; E. A. Butler & Son, Niagara Falls, N. Y.; C. P. Mueller, Wichita, Kas.; North Floral Co., Ft. Dodge, Ia.; The Flower Shop, Pittsfield, Mass., and others; so that its enlistment, although gradual, already numbers more than seventy representative retail florists in more than thirty States.

Among some well-known florists who have the welfare of the trade at heart there has been a reluctance to join our organization for fear of conflict with the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, which has operated so unselfishly for the benefit of retail florists in the last few years. A reading of the next few lines will show conclusively why this fear is unfounded.

The National Floral Corporation in its first holiday season has secured orders for delivery to florists from over one hundred and twenty-five cities, among which are the following places:

Petrograd, Russia; Alexandria, Egypt; Nice, France; Madrid, Spain; Maracaibo, Venezuela; Madras, India; Turin, Italy; Tientsin, China; Cavite, Manila, P. I.; Fort Gibbon, Fairbanks, Ala.; Santiago, Havana, Cuba; Cristobal, Canal Zone; Dawson, Cobalt, Canada; Ft. Oglethorpe, Ga.; Copperhill, Tenn.; Grayson, Ky.; Mindon, Baton Rouge, La.; Ft. Bliss, El Paso, Donna, Athens, Ft. McIntosh, Mission, Texas; Oklahoma City, Okla.; Billings, Mont.; San Francisco, San Diego, Los Angeles, Monte Vista, El Toro, Long Beach, Cal.; Duke, N. C.; Bisbee, Warren, Ariz.; Dodge City, Kas.; Springfield, Mo.; Para, Ill.; Salt Lake City, Utah; Traer, Iowa; Rutland, Vt.; San Acacio, Ouray, Pueblo, Colo.; Madison, Wis.; Key West, Pensacola, Fla.; Columbus, N. M.; Vancouver Barracks, Wash., and Portland, Me.

Most of its orders were received from places in which there is no representative of the F. T. D. There can be no doubt that 95% of these orders were CREATED solely by the advertising methods of the National Floral Corporation and that the orders delivered to its florists this season represented an actual increase in the field for retail florists during 1915.

A pleasant feature of its work during the past year has been the enthusiastic approval from influential members of the public who welcomed the National Florist idea and National Florist service.

Though it cannot be said that our advertising for the past season had the effectiveness which the experience of 1915 will enable us to put into our future advertising, yet we can claim the remarkable record of having produced approximately as much business through our 1915 appropriation as the total amount in fees received so far from National Florists throughout the country.

A number of our National Florists have already received more than enough business to pay for fees paid in, although the contracts have been dated from October 1st, 1915, only, and will not expire until October 1st, 1916.

The role of prophet is a dangerous one, but we venture to predict that the coming years will show a considerable transformation in the retail florists' business of America. We do not underestimate the value of large orders and the profit in selling American Beauties at $24 per dozen, but we predict that the substantial fortunes in retail flower selling in America in the coming generation will be made, not on large orders, but from the bountiful repetition of small and profitable orders, a field which has been disdained rather than heretofore cultivated by the retail florist.

When the public learns that it can have delivered in San Francisco, Toledo, Chicago, Denver, Jacksonville, Galveston, Portland and New York a floral token at holiday time for substantially a little more than a telegram, the Western Union receipts may grow less, but the bank accounts of the retail florists will profit in proportion.

Many of our National Florists are exceedingly enthusiastic, not only from the coöperation they have received from us and the advertising service which we have furnished them, but also with the whole National Florist idea, and have taken double pages of newspaper space in their local papers to acquaint the public with the existence of this corporation.

Please note, only one National Florist is allowed in each city, and National Florists have generally, in the absence of other connections, preferred to transfer their orders to National Florists in other cities.

It is a matter of regret that in cities of considerable importance such as Trenton, N. J.; Birmingham, Ala.; Portland, Me.; Columbia, S. C.; Helena, Mont.; Savannah, Ga., and many others, there is not a representative. If you knew what we know of the floral trade, you would immediately telegraph us, preferably mentioning a few references, to serve your CITY for you as the National Florist.

The facts herein stated in regard to orders received by the National Floral Corporation have been confirmed by the representative of The Florists' Review.

Write us for further information.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The cut flower market was in splendid condition last week and the demand was reported as being good. A few bright days seemed to revive the transient trade at the downtown retail stores. Social affairs are creating considerable work for the uptown florists. The south end and north end florists report a good run of funeral work, so it must be understood that business has been splendid.

In looking over the market daily last week, I found the stock coming in of good quality. Roses were not in oversupply and they cleaned up daily at fairly good prices. Killarneys, as usual, were in the majority. Other varieties might be classed as scarce at present. Carnations are fine and the demand for them has been quite heavy, but enough come in so that some are left over for afternoon calls; whites, especially, have a large call. Violets have been in heavy supply all the week at reduced prices and the wholesalers are confident that the supply will be large for St. Valentine's day.

Bulbous stock again cleaned out nicely. Narcissus Golden Spur is now in. Tulips, valley, freesias, Paper Whites, lilies and Romans are in large demand. The few sweet peas coming in sell quickly Fancy greens are scarce and common ferns are up to $2.50 per thousand.

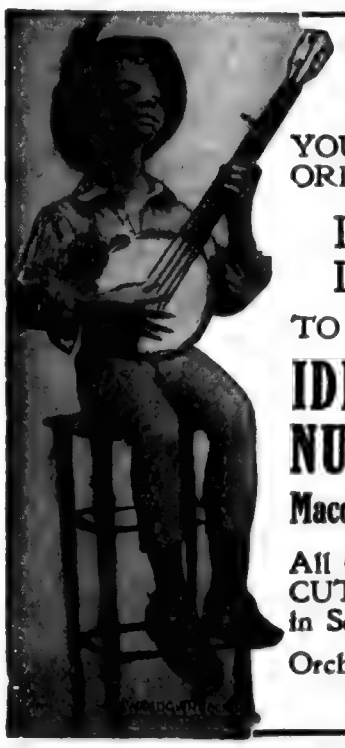
Guy Reburn and Joseph Pollworth, of Chicago, and W. A. Manda, of South Orange, N. J., spent last week here calling on the trade.



W. J. Pilcher, who is growing roses exclusively this season, says the local retail trade has missed his Mazzura violets. The plants are out in the field and he expects a great crop of them in the spring. His rose grower, George Schmidt, has been laid up with the grip for two weeks.

The Florists' Club trustees have arranged for the club's entertainment and dance for the members and their families, to take place February 17 at Kleekamp's hall, 3119 South Grand avenue. Everything is free.

A. Vandereem, gardener for the Samuel C. Davis estate at Lilac Roost, Clayton, and a member of the Florists' Club, called to say good-bye last week. Mr. Vandereem sails for Holland, his old home, on a visit to his mother, but expects to be back in two months.

The officers of the Florists' Club held their regular conference at the home of Trustee Ohlweiler, 4116 Russell avenue, February 1, and arranged for an interesting program for this week's meeting. After the meeting they were entertained by the host and hostess.

The County Growers' Club met February 2 with a large attendance. Vice-president Edwards presided over the meeting. A general discussion was held on the new varieties of carnations seen at the recent carnation exhibition.

Henry Ostertag, head of Ostertag Bros., House of Flowers, says they have had good business so far this year in all lines, especially in the decorative line.

February 2 was ground-hog day and the sun shone brightly, so that the traditional visitor saw his shadow, which, according to the old saying, means six weeks more of winter weather, which is not to the liking of the local greenhousemen.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Seeger, of the Mullanphy Florists, are spending the winter's end in Florida. They are expected back by the end of the month. Miss Carlson and Julius Schaeffer are in charge during their absence.

The visit last week of President and Mrs. Wilson created a big demand for flowers the few hours they spent here. The Jefferson hotel was beautifully decorated and used much choice stock.

John Nyflot, the North Florissant avenue florist, who added considerable glass last year, is stocked up with fine bedding stock of all kinds. The two big cemeteries opposite his place use all his stock when the planting out season starts.

C. C. Sanders, head of the Sanders Nursery Co., says his greenhouse range in the county has produced a splendid crop of cut stock this season in roses and carnations. This company contem-

Count Andrew von Hoffman, manager for George Waldbart's Grand avenue establishment, says the many social affairs of late have created a big demand for orchid and valley corsages.

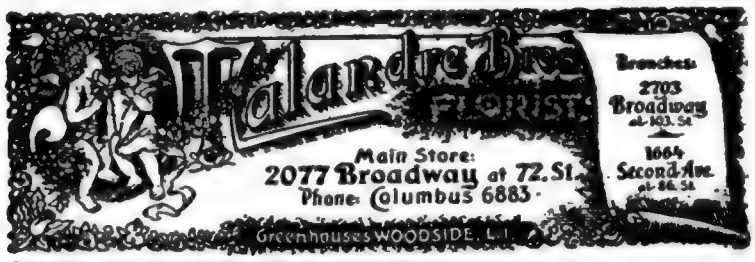
The Bourdet Floral Co. will in another week or so have a big lot of blooming bulbous plants. The men say it will be hard to hold back lilies this year for Easter.

J. J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, and William P. Ward, representing the D. Hill Nursery Co., Dundee, Ill., were with us this week. Both say that trade in their lines has been exceptionally good.

The five wholesale houses have agreed to open their establishments Sunday, February 13, owing to St. Valentine's day falling on Monday, February 14. The retailers were overjoyed at the announcement. J. J. B.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.



Unfavorable weather conditions have caused a general shortage of good stock and a stiffening of prices. Roses have been especially short and high, the appearance of tulips, daffodils and freesias being about the only saving feature. The demand has been somewhat increased by the large number of funerals and social activities. Following a spell of dark, gloomy weather came a few days of warm sunshine that sent prices down, and then came another spell of clouds and snow that turned the tables again.

Various Notes.

appointed to look after the proposed acts relating to tree culture in the state. The association is particularly anxious to secure the passage of a bill requiring the licensing of tree surgeons. The Market.

There is somewhat less congestion in the cut flower market than a week ago. Business is good, but the supply of flowers outside of roses is much heavier, and with milder weather and clear skies the tendency of prices is downward. Roses are at present in an exceptionally strong position. A week ago prices slumped badly, but a recovery has taken place and as supplies coming in are not large and the demand good, they are making good prices. Beauties are scarce and bring almost Christmas prices. The supply of Hadley, Richmond and other red varieties also is rather small. Ophelia, Mock, Sunburst, Miller, Russell and Killarney Brilliant are all selling well. February 5 all short-stemmed flowers easily made $6 to $8 per hundred.

Carnations are less druggy than a week ago and prices a trifle higher. Matchless, Alice, Pink Delight, Benora and Ward are a popular quintette. Scarlets and crimsons are the hardest colors to move. Violets are abundant and are selling about the same as a week ago. Bulbous stock increases in quantity, but so far cleans up well. Recent arrivals include Couronne d'Or and Prosperity tulips, ornatus and double Von Sion, Empress and Silver Spur narcissi. Callas and lilies are abundant and lower in price. There is a large supply of mignonette, but pink snapdragons are less abundant than a year ago and sell well.

There is a heavy supply of sweet peas. The old grandifloras are hard to sell in competition with the Spencers. Lily of the valley, yellow marguerites and blue cornflowers all sell well. There is an abundant supply of freesias, including small lots of the newer colored hybrids.

There are few Trianæ cattleyas seen, but other orchid flowers are in good supply. Gardenias are more abundant. The demand for asparagus is somewhat better.

Florists' Bowling League.

The collection of silver cups and other trophies secured for the Florists' Bowling League is now complete and makes a handsome display. There are some twenty-five of them, all told. Recent additions have come from the Boston Coöperative Market, five cups; McAlpine & McDonald and Patrick Welch. The prizes have been on exhibition this week in the Boston Cooperative Market and in Penn's windows.

The standing of the teams up to February 3 was as follows:

Various Notes.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, who are our largest bulb specialists, are now sending in a wide variety of bulbous flowers. These include Empress, Silver Spur, double Von Sion, ornatus and rugulosus narcissi; Prosperity, White Hawk, King of the Yellows, Thomas Moore and La Reine tulips. They also have large shipments of callas, freesias, giganteum and speciosum lilies and snapdragons.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club's annual banquet at the New American House, February 9, comes a day too late to be reported in this issue of The Review, but the advance sale of tickets assures its being a pronounced success.

The presidents of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and the wholesale flower markets will be among the guests, and the floral decorations will be as fine as ever.

Frank Edgar, of Waverley, has a fine batch of Chautard and Radiance hydrangeas nearly ready for the market. He also has a large batch of rambler roses which will soon be in bloom. He grows giganteum lilies largely for Easter, and finds that by placing the bulbs a few weeks in cold storage after being received the plants grow faster and show a smaller percentage of disease. Last year he lost less than 400 out of 9,000 bulbs.

Peirce Bros. are getting a good cut of roses now while the supply is short. Some of their best varieties are Prince d'Arenberg, Crimson Queen, Ophelia, Killarney Brilliant, Sunburst, Ward and Mlle. Cecile Brunner.

The new officers of the Boston Retail Florists' Club are: President, H. R. Comley; vice-president, Samuel Wax; secretary, B. H. Green; treasurer, Julius H. Zinn. The club has been in a state of suspended animation for a long time and we hope the new officers will regalvanize it into life.

J. H. Butterworth has a fine display now of the beautiful Cymbidium insigne. He also has a fine variety of other orchids in bloom, including cattleyas, phalænopsis, cypripediums, dendrobiums, odontoglossums and Lælia anceps.

The W. W. Edgar Co. has an excellent lot of bulbous stock in pans now; also genistas, French hydrangeas and azaleas. The lilies for Easter are about six inches in height.

H. H. Rogers, of South Sudbury, is shipping in fine Pink Delight, Matchless, Beacon, Enchantress and Winsor carnations. He still finds the last named profitable.

Henry M. Robinson & Co., report trade as exceptionally brisk. They are now getting some grand sweet peas from William Sim, in addition to all his violets, mignonette and pansies. They also are handling all John McFarland's valley.

Penn's windows are attractive this week with banks of lilacs and acacias; orchids also are well featured. Business in plants and cut flowers is splendid.

William Spillsbury, one of our best single violet specialists, usually has 15,000 plants. This season he has only 5,000, losing the difference during the excessive rainfall last summer. He grows superb flowers. Radishes occupy his other houses, which he will soon plant with 7,000 Comet tomatoes, now in pots.

The Houghton-Gorney Co., on Tremont street, below the Park Street church, keeps its windows tastefully arranged at all times, avoiding the overcrowding that is too common. Baskets of hybrid freesias, varicolored cornflowers, calendulas and orchids were pretty here February 5.

Perry E. Green, of Quincy, has a fine crop of ranunculi and Roman anemones, which will be ready to cut in a few days.

February 12 Prof. W. T. Macom, of Ottawa, Canada, will lecture at Horticultural hall. February 5 Prof. S. C. Damon, of Kingston, R. I., addressed an interested audience on "Alfalfa Culture in New England."

at his desk again after a hard siege of the grip.

The annual carnation night of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will be held February 15. There will be a notable display of new and standard varieties. Growers from a distance can send novelties to Horticultural hall and they will be well cared for. Messrs. Peter Fisher, S. J. Goddard, M. A. Patten, C. S. Strout, A. Roper and other specialists will be in attendance.

In Galvin's window displays February 7 I noticed some fine rhododendrons, acacias and camellias. Large vases of forsythias also were effectively used. Phalænopsis Schilleriana was in evidence.

N. A. Hudson, of Natick, is sending in as fine quality yellow marguerites as ever this season. D. F. Lamy handles all his flowers.

R. P. Petersen, of Saxonville, has pink snapdragons of exceptional quality for so early in the season.

Fred L. Sly, of South Stoughton, is doing well with double violets again, and is growing snapdragons equally well.

The Philadelphia flower show is attracting increased attention here and there will be a large attendance from Boston there, including quite a few exhibitors. W. N. C.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

The weather last week was fine; the sun showed itself February 2 and shone the remainder of the week.

The carnation crop now is at its best, but roses are scarce and of inferior quality. The supply of bulbous stock is good and the quality probably was never better. On account of the inability of the eastern supply houses to furnish pips, the last crop of cold storage valley has been cut and it is hard to tell just when we shall be able to get more of it.

From Chicago he went to Indiana, where he visited relatives and some of the leading florists. He stopped at Louisville, Ky., and before returning home will spend several days at Atlanta, Ga.

A. H. Dailey, who has been a victim of the grip for the last three weeks, is improving and probably will be able to get back to his business in a few days. It has been rather hard going for his force during his illness, as Miss Elsie Kirby, who has charge of the uptown store, also has been ill. R. E. M.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

JANUARY mail orders, especially from the south, make an excellent record compared with last year.

ACCORDING to the J. C. Robinson Seed Co., Waterloo, Neb., nearly three-fourths of the cucumber seed grown in the United States now is produced in the Arkansas valley in Colorado.

AT Aurora, Ill., a new concern is starting in the mail order seed business under the name Blair, Harper Seed Co. Adequate quarters have been obtained and an edition of 35,000 catalogues is going into the mails for the first season.

THE general magazines carry less seed trade advertising this year than within the memory of many men old in the business. The seed trade's money now goes into special publications, or into special garden numbers of the more-or-less general publications.

J. W. ALEXANDER, of East Bridgewater, Mass., who heretofore has confined his attention to dahlias, will add seeds to his catalogue for 1917. This is thought to be for the purpose of affording application for the energies of his son, J. Herbert Alexander.

THE International Forwarding Co., Chicago, has been informed by the State Department, Washington, that the British Foreign Office has granted its application for a permit to bring from Hamburg via Rotterdam 3,000,000 lily of the valley pips belonging to H. N. Bruns.

NEARLY a decade ago F. W. Bruggerhof remarked that the ramifications of the seed business had become so wide and the sources of supply so varied that another general seed shortage was extremely unlikely. Not even a war involving most of Europe seems likely to bring the accuracy of his observation into question.

THE spring planting number of the Illustrated Sunday Magazine distributed as a section in many of the Sunday morning papers January 30, carried an article on sweet peas by George W. Kerr, of the Burpee staff. Also, the House of Burpee had the largest seed ad, a quarter page, in the issue, and the new sweet pea, Fiery Cross, was the subject of the cover illustration. The magazine is said to have over two million circulation and Mr. Therkildson thinks the combination of cover, article and ad makes the biggest

DEPENDABILITY

The greatest asset a business can have is dependability. And dependability means more than a desire and willingness to do; it means a strong organization of men of ability to get there in the face of difficulties; men who are alert, cautious, studious and have bulldog pertinacity. Bulbs may be dependable as well—Horseshoe Brand Giganteum are dependable bulbs—you can be sure they will give practical results—not only one year, but every year. They are backed by an organization of the dependable kind—very strong in every way and with a determination that cannot be downed. If you are a florist and want good lily bulbs, order Horseshoe Brand Giganteum. They are sure to be good. Prices upon application.

Not how cheap but how good.

piece of publicity ever put across by any seed house in this country.

THE onion set situation remains trying. Yellow and red have advanced to $2.25 to $2.50 per bushel for immediate delivery. Whites are almost out of the market.

THE wholesale seedsmen and growers who cater to the canners' trade are having a busy time at Louisville this week. It is said to be the biggest gathering of canners on record. There seems to be more interest in sugar corn than in peas, more interest in 1916 crops than in 1915.

THE U. S. consul at Hamilton, Bermuda, who is in fairly close touch with the trade, reports the successful trial of onion seed supplied by an unnamed Los Angeles concern, where heretofore Teneriffe Bermuda onion seed has been used exclusively on the island.

THE British authorities have classed heads of departments and seed experts among "reserved occupations," exempt from the call to arms. A deputation of leading seedsmen made representations to the board of trade that the maintenance of the seed supply was essential to the conservation of the food supply.

GEORGE W. WRIGHT, president of the Dunkirk Seed Co., of Dunkirk, N. Y., was married January 30, his bride being Miss Lillian Baumgartner, a school teacher of Dunkirk. Burpee-Quality Seeds Help Solve the Market Problem

It is our pleasure to record a greatly improved market condition, and we confidently predict that 1916 will prove a most prosperous season for the Market Grower.

Many causes contributed to the unsatisfactory vegetable market of 1915, and it is also true that these same causes created a most profitable market for Staples, such as Wheat, Corn, Oats, etc.

During 1915 we attended many meetings where market growers gathered to formulate plans to overcome the then prevailing unfavorable conditions. Much good resulted from these conventions, as they have proved beyond question that inferior produce in large quantities, dumped without thought of quality or condition, has done more to demoralize the markets than any other factor.

The discussions at these meetings have brought the invariable conclusion that Quality Produce did sell —and sell well—at the highest price obtainable.

Quality Produce can no more be the harvest of inferior seed than high-bred cattle can be the product of inferior or diseased stock.

Burpee's Seeds are known the world over as the American Standard of Excellence. When you buy Burpee's Seeds the element of doubt is removed so far as is possible by human care. A careful canvass of our Market Grower friends has brought this answer: "Yes, we certainly grew first-class crops from Burpee's Seeds."

The conclusion is inevitable: Burpee's Seeds grow Quality Produce, and Quality Produce brought good prices. Burpee's Seeds help solve the market problem.

Did you use Burpee's Seeds in 1915? If not, we earnestly solicit your orders for 1916. The profit is mutual.

Burpee's Annual for 1916, our complete retail catalog of 182 pages, has already been mailed. If you have failed to receive it, please write us at once and a duplicate copy will be forwarded.

VICK'S ASTERS

A WORD ABOUT OUR SEED FARMS

The accompanying pictures of Asters were taken on our Orchard Farm. Only a few years ago our entire crop of Asters was grown on this farm. The demand has grown to such an extent that we shall cultivate, next summer, 250 acres, 125 of which consists of Asters. Even in our efforts to keep up with the demand, we are working still harder to get larger and better varieties. During the summer and autumn months, particularly during August and September, thousands of people visit our farms for the purpose of seeing the vast expanse of flowers, of which we grow many other kinds besides Asters. Last year our field of Phlox Drummondii attracted much attention. In fact, we grow more or less of a large number of varieties all the way from Sweet Alyssum down the alphabetical list to Zinnias. At the time when the flowers were at the height of bloom, about the middle of September, a careful estimate one Sunday placed the number of visitors at more than seven thousand, and 1300 automobiles. Florists and others are always welcome to visit our farms and to study the various varieties needed in their trade.

VICK'S ROYAL ASTERS

VICK'S ROYAL ASTER

A magnificent strain of early Asters, every color of which has been introduced by us, the first of which was Vick's Royal Purple, which for a number of years has been one of the best selling colors. If sown at the same time as Queen of the Market, it follows that variety very closely. The plants are of the Branching type, and many florists find that the use of Vick's Royal in connection with Queen of the Market makes a very profitable arrangement. We have several colors, all of which are popular florist's shades. They are as follows: White, Shell-Pink, Lavender-Pink, Lavender, Purple and Rose.

See our list of varieties for prices.

VICK'S ROCHESTER ASTERS

The plants are like those of the Late Branching, large and strong, with many long branches. The flowers, like all of the Comet type, have petals that are very long and narrow, and gracefully recurved, giving them a lightness and grace that makes them the most artistic of all Asters. The immense size of the flowers—they are the largest Asters now in cultivation—their artistic beauty, their delicacy of coloring and freedom of bloom make them, in our estimation, superior to any Asters heretofore offered of its class. In the following colors: Lavender-Pink, Shell-Pink, Rose, Crimson, White, Dark-Violet, Lavender and Purple.

LARGEST GROWERS OF HIGH-GRADE ASTERS IN THE WORLD

chased the interests of his brothers and since has been sole owner.

THE recently organized Idaho Seed Growers' Association convened in annual session at Caldwell, Idaho, January 26 to 28. Interesting papers and discussions on seed production, grains and farming were given by specialists in these lines.

THE trade is experiencing great difficulty in getting European flower seeds and herbs. This is causing no end of delay and inconvenience in getting out orders, according to A. H. Smith, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago. J. C. Leonard left February 4 to arrange the company's exhibit at the convention of the National Canners' Association at Louisville, Ky., February 7 to 11. S. F. Leonard and others followed February 6.

CUCUMBERS IN MICHIGAN.

An inquiry relative to the acreage, yield and total production of cucumbers grown for pickling in Michigan has just been completed. This is the first comprehensive survey of the cucumber acreage in Michigan since the census of 1909, when the total acreage under cucumbers for the United States was given at 32,310, and the acreage for the state at 7,061. A statement in detail follows:

Acreage in Michigan in 1915	34,260
Number of salting stations	306
Average acreage per salting station	112
Yield per acre in 1915, bushels	34.6
Average yield per acre during last five years	68.2

HORTICULTURAL IMPORTS.

With the bulk of the horticultural imports from Europe coming via Rotterdam this year, it is a matter of importance that the service between Rotterdam and New York is extremely erratic. There are long stretches between arrivals. Two steamers, the Rotterdam and the Noordam, arrived January 31, with these trade consignments, according to the manifests filed at the New York customhouse:

American Express Co., 3,753 bags seed; 9 cases bulbs.
American Shipping Co., 17 cases shrubs.
J. E. Bauer, 80 bags seed.
F. H. Darrow, 21 cases seed.
O. G. Hempstead & Son, 162 cases roots; 14 barrels seed; 1 case bulbs.
Kennedy & Moon, 21 cases seed.
P. C. Kuyper & Co., 80 cases shrubs; 9 cases trees; 14 cases roots; 7 cases bulbs.
R. F. Lang, 9 cases bulbs.
McHutchison & Co., 29 cases trees.
MacNiff Horticultural Co., 1 bag seeds; 8 cases bulbs.
Maltus & Ware, 21 cases shrubs; 196 cases bulbs; 8 cases trees.
Richard & Co., 20 cases trees.
A. H. Ringk & Co., 10 cases trees; 150 cases roots.
J. Roehrs Co., 3 cases trees.
Stumpp & Walter Co., 56 cases seed.
J. M. Thorburn & Co., 16 cases bulbs.
F. B. Vandegrift & Co., 7 bags seed.
Vaughan's Seed Store, 3 cases bulbs.

TRADE CONDITIONS IN HOLLAND.

The following from a British trade paper refers to the conditions in the trade in Holland early in January:

"In looking backward at the end of this, what we may justly call the terrible year of 1915, it cannot be denied that after all bulb growers have done much better than was at first anticipated. Of course prices have been low, and are at present considerably below the cost of production, but the demand and consequent trade have been far better than last year, and in the face of the unusual circumstances which have cut off all cut flower trade between the central and northern countries, bulbous flowers are in much better demand

DESPITE the admirable display of our fellow British competitors, Sutton & Sons was the only English concern to receive Medals of Awards at the Panama-Pacific Fair at San Francisco. The Medal of Honor was awarded to us for the superior merit of our entire display.

This of itself would have been a notable triumph.

To add to it: Gold, Silver and Bronze Medals is indeed a signal victory.

You will, we know, pardon this rather pleasurable rubbing our hands in having received such recognition from your keen American Jury of Horticultural Experts.

Our Antirrhinums won the Gold Medal.

Of course, you will want some of them. You will find them listed on pages 86 and 87 of our 190-page catalogue. If you haven't one, send with your request 35 cents in stamps, which amount will be promptly refunded with your first order for $5.00.

now that French flowers cannot glut the markets.

"Gladiolus bulb trade has also been rather a surprise, because last year's trade was bad and no one expected any improvement so long as war was raging, but it appears that American stocks have been cleared and consequently Holland stocks have to be called out and prices have gone up in consequence.

"Seed trade is just opening and looks as if it was going to be a rushing season, with high prices and good crops, but owing to the uncertain deliveries, there is a constant tendency of changing in prices and the general feeling is that anything may be expected under the present abnormal circumstances."

PHASES OF SEED CONTRACTS.

In a suit brought to recover damages for claimed breach of a contract to sell three cars of cotton seed, the question was raised as to what quantity must be regarded as having been within the contemplation of the parties. In other words, what exact quantity constitutes a carload of seed? The Alabama Supreme court disposes of this question by following the rule recognized by the courts generally: Where goods are sold by the carload, the term may be construed by any existing trade custom, but in the absence of any agreement, or particular custom, it will ordinarily be held to mean the capacity of a car usually utilized for transportation of the particular kind of goods.

Another point decided in the same case is that where a contract to sell goods does not fix any specific time for delivery, and the seller repudiates the contract, the damages assessed against him for breach of the agreement may be computed as of the date when the contract was broken. CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

A. L. Berry & Co., Chicago, Ill., agents for Carter's Tested Seeds, Inc., London, England, and Boston, Mass.—"Carter's American Catalogue of Garden and Lawn Seeds." This is not simply a slightly disguised duplicate of the company's Canadian catalogue, which was mentioned in The Review of January 27, but is an intrinsically different book, both in text and illustrations. It contains ninety-six pages, plus sixteen pages of colored plates, instead of the fifty-six pages and eight colored plates in the Canadian edition.

Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y.—Bulletin containing a "grade-count of unsold stock, offered to the trade only." The lists comprise roses, vines, perennials and a full line of general nursery stock.

George L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I.—A comprehensive catalogue of dahlias, carefully classified, with cultural directions and other information; forty-eight pages, illustrated. "I grow no flowers except dahlias," says Mr. Stillman, "and give my whole attention to originating and cultivating the choicest varieties that can be produced."

Ross Bros.' Seed House, Wichita, Kan.—"Ross Bros.' Seed Book," offering "Acorn Brand" seeds, bulbs, plants, roots, small evergreen trees, vines, roses, garden tools, raffia, poultry and bee supplies, insecticides, etc.; 112 pages, illustrated.

Weeber & Don, New York, N. Y.—An effectively arranged and accurate catalogue of vegetable, farm and flower seeds, bulbs, plants, roses, fruit trees, small fruits, horticultural tools and requisites; 104 pages, well illustrated, and bound in an especially artistic cover.

Perry's Hardy Plant Farm, Enfield, England.—"Catalogue of Alpine and Perennial Seeds, Including a Select List of Annuals and Sweet Peas"; twenty-four pages, in the usual compact Perry style. Is accompanied with a circular containing a special offer of lilies. Enclosed, also, is a supplement bearing a colored picture of the tree lupine, Lupinus arboreus.

J. W. Jung Seed Co., Randolph, Wis.—"Jung's Seed Annual," tenth edition; a freely illustrated, 64-page catalogue of vegetable, flower and farm seeds, including the Jung specialty, the "Eagle Brand" grass and clover seeds. At the end is a condensed wholesale vegetable list for market gardeners.

Wagner Park Nursery Co., Sidney, O.—"Wagner Park Flowers," a particularly attractive, well illustrated, 64-page catalogue of roses, hardy plants, garden furniture, general nursery stock, etc. Accompanying the catalogue is a portfolio illustrating the work of the Wagner landscape department; it contains reproductions of many planting plans, and pictures of artistically planted home grounds.

ST. LOUIS SEED CO. The Home of "Pure and Sure Seeds"
411-13 Washington Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

San Diego, Cal.—H. E. Sies has discontinued his business in East San Diego.

Hillsboro, Ore.—Carl E. Muller, formerly of Portland, Ore., has started a florists' business here.

Berkeley, Cal.—W. H. Wolters has sold his business to his son, George W., and now is conducting a business under the name of Berkeley Seed & Plant Store.

Santa Cruz, Cal.—J. M. Fritz & Co. expect their 1916 crop of freesia bulbs to amount to 300,000, while the crop of calla bulbs to be harvested this year should total 100,000.

Oakland, Cal.—The McDonnell Floral Co. has prospered greatly during the last few years. Mrs. Mary McDonnell points out that the business has grown from 2,000 square feet of glass to more than 14,000 square feet. Carnations, roses and asparagus are the principal crops.

MR. WARD'S ACTIVITIES.

When C. W. Ward goes into a thing he surrounds himself with capable assistants and makes progress at a rate that is astounding to those who are accustomed to rely more largely on their individual efforts. Mr. Ward has been absent from Eureka, Cal., since September, but, on returning, finds the development of the business of the Cottage Gardens Nurseries has progressed apace. In addition to nurseries and greenhouses, a city retail flower store is being established and soon the Cottage Gardens Nurseries of California will be as important a factor in the trade as is the Cottage Gardens of Queens, L. I.

Mr. Ward considers the climate of Humboldt county as ideal from the grower's point of view and the accompanying illustration, showing some sweet peas at the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, will bear out his contention. These vines have grown nine feet in the air and then have dropped a matter of three feet, so that the growth shown in the picture really is twelve feet or more.

CYCLAMEN MITE.

I am sending, under separate cover, a cyclamen which is affected with some sort of disease, as the leaves and flowers are curled and shrunken. In shifting these last August, I used soil composed of two wheelbarrow loads of sandy loam and two of leaf-mold, not old but finely screened, with one 8-inch potful of fish meal and two 8-inch potfuls of wood ashes. About three weeks later the trouble commenced, so I sprayed them with Black Leaf 40, and two weeks ago I sprayed them once more, but I do not think the spraying has done any good. Any information as to the cause of the trouble will be appreciated. G. T. K.—Cal.

The plant forwarded was badly affected with cyclamen mite. I do not know of any remedy for this. Some growers think that dustings of tobacco dust and sprayings with nicotine have somewhat helped their plants, but my personal opinion is that no real remedy has yet been discovered. I have seen many fine batches ruined by this pest and am sorry I cannot suggest any remedy or hold out any hopes for your plants. If they are all in as bad a condition as the sample, you would better throw them away; it will not pay to carry them along. Another season you may not have a trace of this trouble. C. W.

Sweet Peas as Grown at C. W. Ward's New Place at Eureka, Cal.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Although the sun shone brightly last week, the effect of the rain is being felt, and never in my experience in this section have good flowers been so scarce. By February 1 people in Los Angeles begin to look for what are termed spring flowers, and these are usually forthcoming, from both outdoors and indoors. This year they are scarce and those that are on hand are washed out looking specimens, with little color or fragrance. But should the bright weather continue there soon will be flowers—and in plenty. Taken as a whole, Dutch bulbs of last season's crop are not showing so well as usual, most of the stock now being sent in coming from older bulbs.

Roses are becoming better and a little more plentiful, while carnations also have more substance. Violets are arriving in quantity and there is a fair showing of cattleyas and valley. Funeral work constitutes the bulk of the business, but there is a good deal of entertaining, which makes a spirited demand for flowers of medium quality. The shipping business still is difficult on account of the tie-up in the railroads, but it is becoming better every day and soon will be normal.

Various Notes.

The L. A. Floral Co. is handling an exceptionally nice line of freesias, cut in the half open state to permit of long-distance shipping.

Martin Reukauf, of Philadelphia, was among our visitors last week.

J. Terbush, of the Valley View Nurseries, has sold his year's stock of fruit trees and walnuts to the Germain Seed & Plant Co.

Burglars recently entered the store of S. Murata & Co. and helped themselves to some choice orchids and other flowers, afterwards rifling the cash box. Fortunately, only a small amount of cash had been left there.

The shipping business of the California Cut Flower & Evergreen Co. can not be seriously hindered by such a small matter as several railroads being out of commission. All towns within a radius of 100 miles or so of Los Angeles have been reached by this company's automobiles. This had the dual advantage of providing an outlet for the stock and pleasing the customers. Large quantities of Mexican ivy now are being shipped east by this concern.

The usual monthly meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society was held at Kruckeberg's hall, February 1, with President Felgate in the chair. In the unavoidable absence of Secretary Hal Kruckeberg, the duties of this office fell on his father, H. W. Kruckeberg. President Felgate drew attention to the importance of members bringing stock to the meetings, and, as usual, Mr. Felgate practiced what he preached by exhibiting some splendid vegetables. The celery was particularly good, with fine heads, well blanched. The subject for the evening was "Palms We Should Grow," by Ernest Braunton, who showed a close knowledge of his subject and gave a somewhat lengthy list of palms and their habitats. Mr. Braunton's paper was well received and he was accorded a rising vote of thanks.

The monthly meeting of the Los Angeles Nurserymen's Exchange was held at the store of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., February 2. Assessment of nursery stock for taxation was the principal subject of discussion. Parties wishing to communicate with the exchange should write to E. Sidebottom, secretary, care of Germain Seed & Plant Co., this city.

The partnership existing until recently between L. Freeman and C. Lewis, doing business under the firm name of Freeman & Lewis, was dissolved by Mr. Lewis selling his interest to Mr. Freeman, who will continue the business. Mr. Lewis will probably remain in the store until after Easter, after which he is considering a trip east. He has had a flattering offer as artistic director of a well known moving picture concern and is seriously considering taking up this line of work.

Frank Lichtenberg reports numerous funeral orders, three palls of valuable stock in one day being among the recent business.

Azalea mollis has proven to be a good seller with the Germain Seed & Plant Co. this season. Landscape work here has been held up on account of rain, but now it is being actively pushed.

The display of phalænopsis at Wright's Flower Shop last week was magnificent. P. Schilleriana does remarkably well with this concern, producing immense branching panicles of bloom that are extremely useful for corsage bouquets. T. Wright says that his customers now will not take cattleyas when phalænopsis can be had—a good sign.

Bassett & Washburn, of Chicago, are making good progress at the new establishment at Sierra Madre, having built a large lath house covering two acres of land. As previously reported, E. B. Washburn came out here some time ago on account of his poor health, but he now looks the picture of health. He was able to secure an old ranch property close to Sierra Madre, where the soil is about perfect and the climate right. The idea is to grow kentias for eastern and local markets and some greenhouses were secured some time ago at Hollywood to start propagating. The young stock will be taken to Sierra Madre and there grown. Later on greenhouses will be built at Sierra Madre for the purpose, after the lease of the Hollywood property expires. Mr. Washburn is actively engaged in the business himself and incidentally is propagating and distributing on the coast the new red carnation, Belle Washburn.

R. T. Brown, of the Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y., is here for a visit, and C. W. Ward is expected in a few days. Mr. Brown and Dr. Perkins, who accompanied him, were passengers in the train that was wrecked in Arizona the other day. Fortunately, neither was seriously hurt, though Dr. Perkins complains of being shaken up considerably and is under the care of a physician here. It is remarkable that, in such a bad wreck as this, no one was killed. Mr. Brown was en route from New Orleans and after Mr. Ward's arrival they will go on to the new place at Eureka. This concern is going largely into the propagation and culture of rhododendrons, boxwoods, bay trees and other stock now imported from Belgium and Holland, the moist atmosphere and soil of Eureka being well suited to this purpose.

Mr. Davis, vegetable grower of Aurora, Ill., was a visitor here last week and made the rounds with Mr. Rivers, one of our largest commission men.

O. H. Drew is on an eastern trip in connection with the settlement of his mother's estate.

The thermometer fell to 28 degrees at Montebello the night of January 30, this being by far the coldest night we have had this year. Verbenas and heliotropes were touched a little by frost and in the foothill towns wigandias and musas are disfigured some. No damage to the citrus crop is recorded. H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The storm at the close of January whitened with snow all the hills around San Francisco and Oakland, but fair weather since has brightened the retail trade considerably, and the approach of Valentine's day is bringing in many orders for decorative work. Funeral business continues active. Wholesale business is greatly hampered by interruption of rail and, in some cases, wire communication with many markets, but there is hardly stock enough to fill all the orders that could otherwise be handled. Flowers are arriving in larger quantities, but nearly everything still is short of the demand and high in price. New items last week were several kinds of fruit blossoms, which gave a pleasing variety in the stores, and some nice cinerarias.

Carnations now are in fair supply, but with roses so scarce the price is stiffly maintained. A few growers are getting a good cut of roses; Russell is fine and seems to be taking the lead just now, while Sunburst and Cecile Brunner are in strong demand. In fact, there is such competition among buyers that high prices are held for all varieties, and even poor stock cleans up quickly. Freesias are in good supply and Chinese lilies and narcissi are somewhat easier, but still high. Enough daffodils are in to make a fair showing, but they still come slowly; warmer weather is needed to bring them out well. Offerings of forced tulips, hyacinths, etc., are light. There are plenty of trashy violets, but it is hard to get enough good stock to fill shipping orders. A little more sunshine would bring an abundance.

Valley is scarce as before, while Easter lilies are more plentiful. Cut cyclamen, primulas, heather and schizanthus are considerably used. Gardenias continue scarce, while orchids are almost too plentiful, only the finest bringing satisfactory prices. Of the cattleyas, Trianæ is especially fine. Heather plants and azaleas continue to find a good sale and primulas are holding their own. Cyclamen and camellia plants are less in evidence. Blooming acacia, eucalyptus and pussy willow are extensively used. Asparagus is scarce and other greens, such as smilax and cut adiantums, are in strong demand.

Various Notes.

As not infrequently happens after the first of the year, a number of changes are taking place among the retailers, a rather encouraging feature being that most of them are in the direction of expansions. The most important change recently announced is the dissolution of the partnership existing between F. C. Jaeger and H. A. and J. B. Avansino, of the Fairmont Floral Co. The Avansino brothers have retired and their interest is taken over by the MacRorie-McLaren Co. It is understood that the premises at 141 Powell street are to be considerably improved and additions probably will be made to the store force in the near future.

T. Mosco, formerly of Chicago, who has been operating here as a street vender for the last year or so, has decided to get into the business on a more substantial basis, and has leased a small store at 20 Geary street, near one of the busiest corners in town. He is fitting the place up in good shape and will be ready for business before the end of the month.

The Chic Flower Shop is a new establishment recently opened opposite the Alex Mann store on Clement avenue.

M. Poss, who was formerly associated with Henry Maier, of the Hillsborough Nursery Co., has taken over the H. G. Hardy flower store at San Mateo, and is fitting the store up in first-class style. The Hardys have gone to San Diego.

H. Plath put on a new motor truck for The Ferneries' delivery service last week.

Fred Johnson, who was formerly in business with his brother at 490 Castro street, has taken a position as second designer at the B. M. Joseph store.

H. E. Rasmussen, of the Seattle Landscape Engineering Co., Seattle, en route to Florida, stopped off a few days in San Francisco and visited some of his friends.

Albert O. Stein, of Sutter street, has opened a new branch stand in the Palace hotel. The stand is located in a prominent position in the main lobby, with plenty of counter space, and has been fitted up with a handsome case of baskets and accessories, in addition to a good display of stock.

Marin county, north of the Golden Gate, is preparing for a flower pageant in May, and the committee in charge has made arrangements to finance the celebration in good style. In connection with the pageant, the florists, market growers and amateurs are undertaking to hold an indoor flower show at San Rafael. A provisional committee to look after the professional end of the show consists of F. C. Burns, chairman; James Niven, Richard Lohrman, Thomas Stentiford and Paul H. Eckelmann. The first meeting was held February 3.

Martin Reukauf, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, arrived in San Francisco last week, and has been getting up at 4 a. m. to see the sun rise (?) and attend the flower market.

The hard weather of the last few weeks has done more damage, even in the favored bay region, than was believed at first. Many outdoor plants that were not perfectly hardy, even in sheltered locations, have been badly frosted. One of the greatest items of loss seems to have been asparagus, a great deal of which, even under glass, has been killed. A recent hail storm, though it broke no glass worth mentioning, pelted down the violets in San Mateo county so that the blooms, and even the top leaves, were mashed to a pulp, causing a short cut for a week or so. Strong winds have blown down many trees and found many loose panes of glass in the greenhouses.

Charles Stappenbeck, of Polk street, has for some time been getting in a limited quantity of fair sweet peas, grown under glass by a grower in Alameda county. They are a novelty here at this season and find a ready sale.

J. A. Axell, of the E. W. McLellan Co., reports the finest cut of roses the company has ever had at this time of year. Ophelia, he says, is great; Russell is fine, and there are good Sunburst and baby roses. He says they are shipping about all they can get for the outside trade of roses, violets and greens, especially smilax.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Howell, of New Monterey, have bought a lot on Lighthouse avenue and are building a flower store.

The Cottage Gardens Nurseries, at Eureka, have received a large shipment of oriental shrubs and trees.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. J.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.
Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 28 to 30, 1916.

THE Union Orchard & Nursery Co., of Martinsville, Ind., has been incorporated at $10,000 by Benjamin F. Mason, Laura L. Mason and Grace Mason.

E. E. WHITING states that the Whiting Nursery Co., Yankton, N. D., will go out of the retail business, having found a wholesale demand that is equal to its facilities.

THERE is a splendid field for the nursery that will specialize on supplying shrubs and trees to florists, giving quality steadily better than the average run. In building a business in nursery stock, the florist needs good stuff.

GEORGE W. HOLSINGER, secretary of the Western Association of Nurserymen, is distributing printed copies of the proceedings of the twenty-sixth annual meeting, held at Kansas City in December. It is a closely printed volume of sixty pages. The only thing lacking seems to be an index and a list of the association's members.

NEW YORK NURSERYMEN ELECT.

At the annual meeting of the New York State Nurserymen's Association, held January 27 at Rochester, N. Y., the following officers were elected for the year: President, Edwin S. Osborne, of Rochester; vice-president, Maxwell Sweet, of Dansville; secretary, William L. Glenn, of Rochester; treasurer, Horace Hooker, of Rochester. The business transacted was not given out for publication. Part of the discussion, it was said, concerned the workmen's compensation bill.

WARRANTIES OF STOCK.

In a case recently passed upon by the appellate division of the New York Supreme court a buyer of nursery stock sought to recover damages for breach of a verbal warranty made by the salesman employed by the seller, concerning certain peach trees. To defeat the claim, the seller showed that the trees were sold under a written contract which contained a clause limiting his liability in case the trees delivered proved untrue to name and not the varieties ordered. The court held that it was necessary for the buyer, in reply to this defense, to show that the written order was void and of no effect because his signature was obtained thereto by misrepresentations of the salesman; to the effect that the paper was a mere order with no conditions included. The court said:

"The buyer had the right to overcome the effect of the written order by showing it to have been obtained by fraud. When the seller delivered trees of other varieties than those purchased, there was a breach of the contract for which he was liable in damages. This without reference to any express warranty by the salesman. There was an implied warranty that the trees delivered were of the varieties ordered. The seller could avoid liability only by satisfying the jury either that the salesman did not falsely represent the contents of the written and printed order which the buyer signed, or that the latter did, in fact, know the contents of that order. As the seller accepted the order and undertook to fill it, we think that it was bound by any representation by its agent as to the contents of the order made to secure the buyer's signature; hence, it is immaterial whether the salesman had authority to make an express warranty or not." VALIDITY OF RECEIVERSHIP.

Circumstances under which a court will appoint a receiver for a nursery on the verge of insolvency were considered by the Texas Court of Civil Appeals in the recent case of the Hart-Parr Co. versus the Alvin-Japanese Nursery Co. (179 Southwestern Reporter 697).

The Hart-Parr Co., the plaintiff, brought suit on a debt due from the defendant, whereupon other creditors joined the defendant in applying for the appointment of a receiver to take charge of the defendant's affairs. The application having been granted, the plaintiff appealed, urging that it is the law that a receiver will not be appointed for a corporation upon its own application, nor at the instance of creditors acting in collusion with the corporation for the purpose of covering up its assets or delaying the collection of other debts; also, that it is evident from the facts proved that the request for a receiver was made for the purpose of assisting the defendant corporation to pay its debts and have sufficient capital left to continue business upon a profitable basis, and that therefore the court was not authorized to make the appointment. Overruling this claim, the court said:

"The pleading and proof do not support the propositions. This suit was not filed by the corporation and the facts show no more than that the managers of the corporation, realizing that if the creditors were to foreclose and collect their debts by forced public sale it would result in insolvency, frankly told the creditors the facts as they existed. This is not sufficient to constitute collusion for the purpose of covering up the debts of the corporation.

"There is an allegation in the petition that by means of a receivership the assets of the defendant may be conserved to the payment of all its debts and leave something with which the corporation could continue its business, and that it would be a great benefit for the community, where the corporation's principal place of business was located, to have the defendant continue its business, but these allegations were no more than matters of inducement in urging the appointment, and in no wise show that the creditors were in any way attempting to cover up anything or to delay the collection of the debts of others. It is true the appointment of a receiver might result in such delay, but because such might be the result would be no reason to set aside the appointment, where the pleadings and proof show that the parties praying for the receivership are clearly entitled to it.

"The court still is in charge of the property through the receiver, and if at any time it shall be made to appear by motion in the trial court that a receivership is not the best way to administer the affairs of the corporation to the end that the best interests of all concerned may be subserved, the receiver, upon such showing, will be discharged." Belle Washburn

THE BEST RED CARNATION

WASHBURN QUALITY WINS!

RESULTS ARE WHAT COUNT!

WINNER of the Silver Medal of the American Carnation Society, at Buffalo, 1915; also WINNER of the SAME MEDAL in the same class at ST. LOUIS, 1916; First prize at the Illinois State Fair, at Springfield, Ill., September 22 and 23. It has never been beaten at any exhibition. The color is a most brilliant red. The size of the flower is 3½ inches. Stems 24 to 36 inches long, strong and stiff. We have never had a burst calyx, all flowers grading firsts; and, best of all, it is a constant bloomer, giving a steady run of flowers equal in number to the Enchantress family. It has a spicy odor, much greater than the average Carnation. It comes in full flower by the 1st of December and then continues steadily through the balance of the season.

The color is the most brilliant red of any Carnation now in the market. We have grown this variety for five years, it being one of our own seedlings, and we now have 30,000 plants benched in our greenhouses at Greggs, of which 12,000 are for the cut flowers and 18,000 devoted to rooted cuttings. Rooted cuttings now ready for delivery.

Price of the rooted cuttings is $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000. We will bill 500 at the 1000 rate price.

Every cutting guaranteed strong and well rooted.

We have 1500 plants growing in our greenhouses at Hollywood, Cal., devoted exclusively to rooted cuttings.

Orders for Pacific Coast States will please be sent to our Western Branch, care of E. B. Washburn, 252 South Orange Grove Avenue, Pasadena, Cal.

TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

With little sunshine and with a great demand for cut flowers and funeral work, this city finds itself in the grip of one of the greatest flower famines in ten years. Cut flowers of any kind are rare these days and the retailer has to beg each morning to receive one-half of his usual supply.

Carnations and roses are good in quality, but exceedingly short in quantity. Jonquils and tulips have been on the market now for about two weeks and meet a favorable trade. Sweet peas are too short-stemmed for excellent usage, but the shortage of other flowers makes the florist appreciate a few hundreds when he can get them. Narcissi, the flowers that completely glutted the market in 1915, are welcome this season and are selling at a good price. In this vicinity about eight and one-half hours of sunshine in seven days has been recorded.

The florists are anticipating a heavy and extraordinary rush for St. Valentine's day, and preparations are being made to handle the business efficiently. Windows are handsomely trimmed with Cupids and hearts, and dainty corsage bouquets of valley, violets and roses are being displayed. Folders and reminders are being mailed by progressive florists and good results are looked for.

Various Notes.

Harry Heinl and Frank Schramm have returned from a week's visit to Chicago, where they inspected large greenhouse ranges to obtain ideas for building.

Emil Kuhnke sold his greenhouses in East Toledo and left February 9 for Florida. Mr. Kuhnke's health was somewhat impaired by long and active service in his greenhouses, and a trip south was recommended by his doctors. Mr. Kuhnke intends to return to the business in this city toward the end of the year. G. B. S.

Sterling, Ill.—E. C. Swartley is planning to grow a considerable quantity of outdoor stock for sale in the Chicago market this season.

A visitor last week said, "I never saw such a crop of flowers in my life."

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business was fair last week. Stock in general is more plentiful. Roses, however, still are scarce, but carnations are becoming more plentiful. Bulbous stock is arriving in larger quantities and no doubt the shortage soon will be relieved. Freesias, sweet peas, valley and lilies are having a good market. Orchids and violets have been a trifle slow in sales. There is quite a variety of pot plants available, such as lilacs, azaleas, rhododendrons, cyclamens, primulas, tulips, hyacinths and jonquils. The indications point to a big Valentine's day business, and with a little sunny weather during the week stock should become more plentiful.

Various Notes.

Visitors last week were I. Rosnosky, of the H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia; E. A. Marxson, with C. F. Meyer, New York; Joseph Rölker, of A. Rölker & Sons, New York.

Baur & Steinkamp report a fine trade in carnation cuttings. This firm has a fine stock in this line on hand.

William Smith, with the A. Wiegand's Sons Co., has a fine lot of young cyclamens coming on. H. L. W.

SEDALIA, MO.

The Market.

The demand for cut flowers and pot plants has been heavy and funeral work has been plentiful. Roses are in fine shape for Easter and carnations are excellent. Spiræas of good quality are coming in, also jonquils and hyacinths. Freesias are about gone. Spring bedding stock never looked better and is here in abundance.

Various Notes.

Mrs. L. H. Archias and daughter, Ruth, are visiting the mother of Mrs. Archias in Helena, Ark.

Thomas Evans, who for the last few months has been employed by the State Fair Floral Co., has gone to Michigan.

L. H. Archias was in St. Joseph, Mo., recently, visiting the Stuppy establishment.

The Archias Seed Store has issued its seed annual. J. H. H.

ROSES

RED RADIANCE—A sport of Radiance that will be welcomed as a valuable addition to the list of greenhouse Roses and will be of greatest value for the garden. Grafted or Own Root, 2¼-in., $2.50 per doz., $17.50 per 100, $150.00 per 1000.

MRS. WM. R. HEARST—A clear, dark pink sport of My Maryland. The equal of Maryland in habit and growth, and far superior to it in color. Grafted or Own Root, 2¼-in., $2.50 per doz., $17.50 per 100, $150.00 per 1000.

HOOSIER BEAUTY—Deep, rich crimson in color. We have a large stock of this new Rose and can fill your order to your satisfaction. Grafted, 2¼-in., $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100, $140.00 per 1000; OwnRoot, 2¼-in., $1.50 per doz., $10.00 per 100, $90.00 per 1000.

HADLEY—With both Hadley and the above-named variety we have to offer the two best red Roses in commerce. Grafted, 2¼-in., $1.50 per doz., $12.50 per 100, $120.00 per 1000; Own Root, 2¼-in., $1.00 per doz., $7.50 per 100, $60.00 per 1000.

CARNATION NOVELTIES

MISS THEO—(Littlefield & Wyman.) We have 4000 plants of Miss Theo growing here at Cromwell. We can verify the assertion that it is the most prolific Carnation on the market today. The color is true rose pink. The flower is well formed, but not large. It will be a profitable variety. Rooted Cuttings, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

NEBRASKA—We can fill your order for this new scarlet. It appears to us to be one of the finest of the novelties of the year. Rooted Cuttings, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

RED WING—From observation of this variety growing, we believe it is well worth a thorough trial. It looks prolific and the flowers are of fine quality. Rooted Cuttings, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

ALICE—By far the finest light pink Carnation from the standpoint of freedom and profitableness. We have excellent stock for February delivery. Rooted Cuttings, $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000. We cannot accept orders for Good Cheer for earlier than March 15th delivery.

THE BIG FOUR

OPHELIA, DOUBLE WHITE KILLARNEY, KILLARNEY BRILLIANT and MRS. AARON WARD—The four best greenhouse Roses for general growing, $12.50 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

These varieties are better grafted than own root. If wanted on own roots, the price is $7.50 per 100, $60.00 per 1000.

MRS. GEORGE SHAWYER and LADY ALICE STANLEY—On their own roots, $7.50 per 100, $60.00 per 1000.

BEDDING PLANTS

COLEUS, HELIOTROPE, SALVIA, PETUNIAS, FUCHSIAS and other stock. VINCA VARIEGATA cuttings. Write us your wants. Refer to the classified ads.

GOLDEN GLEAM OUR NOVELTY FOR 1916

As a novelty of the year we are offering a seedling of our own raising. It is a bright, glistening yellow in color; medium dwarf in growth. Fully as good two to a plant as single. Matures Oct. 20th to Nov. 1st. Second crown buds were the best. 2¼-in., $1.50 per doz., $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

LAST SEASON'S NOVELTIES

Rooted Cuttings, $7.00 per 100, $60.00 per 1000.

CRYSTAL GEM—A fine, pure white. Midseason.

EARLY FROST—The best early white variety. We have a big lot ready for delivery.

GOLDEN QUEEN—The best yellow since Chrysolora. This is the general opinion.

MARIGOLD—A fancy 'Mum for the careful grower. When well done, it is the best yellow variety in commerce.

MODELLO—Bronze, maturing in early November. Handsome as a Cactus Dahlia.

WHITE CHIEFTAIN—For early delivery we offer fine stock of this high-class variety at $4.00 per 100, $35.00 per 1000. This means January and February delivery, and we have ample stock for your requirements.

GOLDEN EATON—Better in color than Yellow Eaton. One of the finest of the new 'Mums. Early delivery, $4.00 per 100, $35.00 per 1000.

A NEW POMPON

PEACE—A beautiful shell pink; one of the finest varieties ever offered. 2¼-in., $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100.

SINGLES

RAMONA—Deep, rich bronze in color. One of the finest varieties ever offered. Exhibited in the winning five vases at Cleveland. 2¼-in., $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100.

DUSKY MAID—Orange-bronze in color. Well-built, semi-double flowers carried well apart on spray. The finest variety for Thanksgiving. 2¼-in., 2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100.

The Cromwell Gardens Set and the Mount Greenwood Set are offered in our catalog. Look them over. They are improvements on existing varieties and worthy of general growing.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus

We make a specialty of seedlings. We offer now 50,000 seedlings ready for potting. Big, strong seedlings. Big value at $8.00 per 1000; 2500 at $7.50 per 1000; 5000 at $7.00 per 1000.

We deliver anywhere, all charges paid, for 50c. per 1000 in addition to price quoted.

The Market.

Carnations are arriving in large numbers again, every retailer having all he can sell, and for the first time since the first of the year we have seen a good lot of stock on hand at the close of the week. Wholesale business was good last week; the prices were satisfactory. Roses are on the increase, but they still are on the short side. They are of good quality, however. There are violets in plenty, and peas are becoming more abundant. Most of the peas are Spencers, but we still see a few of the old Christmas varieties. The latter, of course, neither sell so well nor bring so good prices as the Spencers. There has been much funeral work during the last week or two.

It has been either too cold or too wet for much outdoor work, so the shrubbery men have had a rest. Propagating has begun in earnest, and everyone seems to have his stock in good shape for the Easter trade. There promises to be a shortage of some of the best selling flowers for Valentine's day. The trade is making more preparation for this day this season than ever before, in the way of special boxes, etc., and there will be plenty of space used in the papers this year.

Various Notes.

The Hillcrest School Farm continues to have promising seedling cannas in bloom. Last week there was a yellow that is deeper than most varieties now in the market and almost as large as Firebird, and a cardinal that is almost the shade of Lobelia cardinalis.

The Joys are cutting several thousand carnations every day. Their Killarney Queen roses continue to attract much attention. A large vase of these was used to decorate one of the windows last week.

Haury & Sons are cutting peas heavily. They are running in a crop of lettuce where the mums grew, before the space is needed for spring bedding plants.

McIntyre Bros. have the best peas I have seen this year. Their roses are somewhat off crop, excepting some excellent Ophelia and Hoosier Beauties.

Geny Bros. are having the largest cut of California violets I have seen this year. They are sending in some good daffodils and their roses are especially good. F. B.

NEPHROLEPIS JOHN WANAMAKER

Introduced August, 1915

The Wanamaker Boston has more than made good. Everyone who has received early shipments from us has been greatly pleased with the variety and repeat orders have been coming in daily. We have a very large stock. A "sport" from Nephrolepis Scholzeli, with longer, narrower, gracefully drooping fronds. It is not so compact in growth as Scholzeli and therefore does not decay in the center, and is a durable house fern. It is a rapid grower, making an abundance of fronds, and is quite distinct from any other Nephrolepis. The following prices are for immediate and spring delivery:

2¼-inch pots, strong plants $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.
4-inch pots, strong plants, $25.00 per 100; $225.00 per 1000.

MUMS -- FOUR WINNERS

Japanese Anemone C. L. HUTCHINSON

In this variety we have the ideal Anemone. The color of the petals is a pure white and the center a bright yellow, making a beautiful contrast. It is a good grower, splendid dark foliage, and, the best of all for pot work, needs no support.

Japanese Anemone MARIE POOLE

Very distinct and beautiful flower, which is very large, and the color is a combination of bronzy salmon, flushed with pink; the high center is bright orange yellow. One of the oddest and most novel flowers ever introduced. Good pot plant.

Single Anemone MRS. CARRIE RYERSON

Creamy white; very good habit; needs no support. An excellent variety for Thanksgiving. Makes good pot plant.

Single Anemone THOMAS DUNN

A very free bloomer, good foliage; ten to twelve flowers on spray, open at once. Color yellow, under petals bronzy yellow. Splendid keeper. Blooms for Thanksgiving and is good two weeks or more afterwards. Needs no support.

The Market.

The supply in the market is practically sufficient for present needs. The demand is fair. The shipping business is good. The rose market shows a supply slightly larger than that of a fortnight ago. It will be at least three or four weeks before roses become plentiful. American Beauties, however, are in good supply. Carnations are plentiful. The receipts of lilies can easily take care of all present needs. The lilies are of excellent quality and fine valley may be had. Enough bulbous stock is coming in to satisfy present requirements. Violets, orchids and sweet peas may be had in quantities. Other offerings include callas, marguerites and primroses. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell has been fortunate in getting in heavy cuts of valley, sweet peas, violets and orchids for Valentine's day.

Hardesty & Co., by means of a neat sign, are suggesting to passersby to send flower valentines February 14.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange during the last fortnight has been having good cuts of valley and Easter lilies. Both have found a fair market.

Among recent visitors were Milton Alexander, representing Lion & Co., of New York; J. Landman, representing the Basket Importing Co., of New York; Warren Huckleberry, of North Vernon, Ind.

Mrs. Augusta Hoffmeister and family mourn the death of Mrs. Hoffmeister's youngest brother, which occurred February 4. C. H. H.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

The large number of weddings and funerals last week caused a heavy demand for flowers. Roses still are scarce, but carnations are quite plentiful. There is a good supply of other cut flowers. Some fine, long-stemmed sweet peas are on the market. The Ohio river has been at flood stage for two months, delaying trains and making it unsafe for shipments.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel & Sons have had much funeral work and are cutting a good batch of carnations and roses.

The Blackman Floral Co. has a large cut of fine carnations. Business is good and the store is making preparations for a good Valentine trade.

Theodore Kuebler has sent out his 1916 price list of chrysanthemum cuttings. E. L. F.

Anderson, Ind.—Both J. S. Stuart and J. E. Haugh were confined to their homes at the same time, for three weeks, by illness, but both have recovered and are able to be about.

Greenhouse Heating.

BOILER HAS AMPLE CAPACITY.

I have a small steam boiler, containing twenty-five 3-inch tubes, six feet long. The shell is three feet in diameter and the grate surface is two feet ten inches by three feet four inches. Is this boiler large enough to heat a greenhouse 20x75? Will you also give instructions for the piping of the house? I wish to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather. The location is a somewhat exposed one.

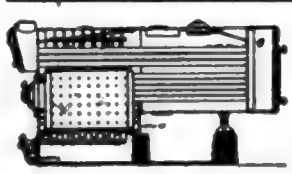
D. A. M.—Pa.

A steam boiler of the size described would be rated at twelve horsepower and would readily handle 800 to 900 square feet of radiation, while less than 400 square feet will be required to heat a house 20x75 to 60 degrees. The principal difficulty is likely to come from the night firing required to keep up steam in zero weather. However, the fact that there is reserve power in the boiler will aid in maintaining steam.

If there is no glass in the sides of the house, and if it is of fairly warm construction and the roof glass is tight, we would expect to keep up the temperature desired by using one 2½-inch overhead main, carried to the farther end of the house about three feet below the ridge, and eight 1¼-inch returns, either in coils on the walls or partly under the benches. The boiler should be set so that the water level will be at least two feet below the lowest part of the returns, and three or four feet would be better. If this can not be done, a steam trap should be used. There should be an automatic air vent at the lower end of each coil. All pipes should have a fall of about one inch to ten or fifteen feet. The main return should be 1½-inch, and 1¼-inch pipes should be used to connect the coils with it.

INSTALLING A GENERATOR.

In The Review of January 20 we read an article entitled "Too Much Night Firing," in which there was a discussion of mercury generators. We have a hot water system that will maintain a temperature of 55 degrees when the outside temperature is 20 degrees below zero, without being forced, but the outdoor temperature here often drops to 40 degrees below zero for a night or two, and we find it difficult to heat one of our greenhouses during these cold spells. We have a Honeywell generator, but the plumbers do not seem to understand it and may not have installed it properly. We have tried it twice, but to no advantage. Would it do any good if properly connected? Please tell us the right place and the right manner in which to connect it.



B. & C.—Man.

As I have stated many times in these columns, the use of a mercury genera-

THE HEATING PROBLEM SOLVED
Judging strictly according to mechanical merits, it's the METROPOLITAN PATENTED BOILER you want.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel and less attention than any other boiler on the market.
The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface.
Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit:—Smooth, perfect finished castings. Push nipple connections. Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals. Deep ash pit, making the removal of ashes a slight task. Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean. Grates that are made for hard usage and long service. And above all, they are Fuel Saving, not Fuel Wasting.
We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50 per cent in coal.

tor in connection with a hot water heating plant makes it possible to add many degrees to the temperature of the water in the coils and thus raise the temperature in a greenhouse or dwelling many degrees above what would be possible with an open-tank system. When a generator is used, we may not only reduce slightly the size of the pipes used for flows and returns, but also the amount of radiating surface. However, I prefer to use heating pipes in size and quantity adapted to giving the needed heat with an open-tank system, in ordinary winter weather, and then, as in such conditions as those of B. & C., rely on a generator to furnish the necessary heat above what can be supplied by open-tank radiation.

A generator may be attached at any point in the system, but for convenience it is generally "cut in" on the pipe leading to the expansion tank, if that is connected with one of the returns near the boiler. In that case, however, I would put in a by-pass, so as to connect the return directly with the expansion tank when the generator is not needed. By means of a shut-off valve in this by-pass, the direct connection with the tank can be closed and the generator will be in operation.

In cases where the expansion tank is connected with one of the flow pipes, it is seldom convenient to "cut in" the generator. I would then, without changing the expansion pipe, except to put in a shut-off valve, connect the generator with one of the returns, directly underneath the expansion tank, and run the overflow from the generator up to the tank, connecting it at or near the bottom.

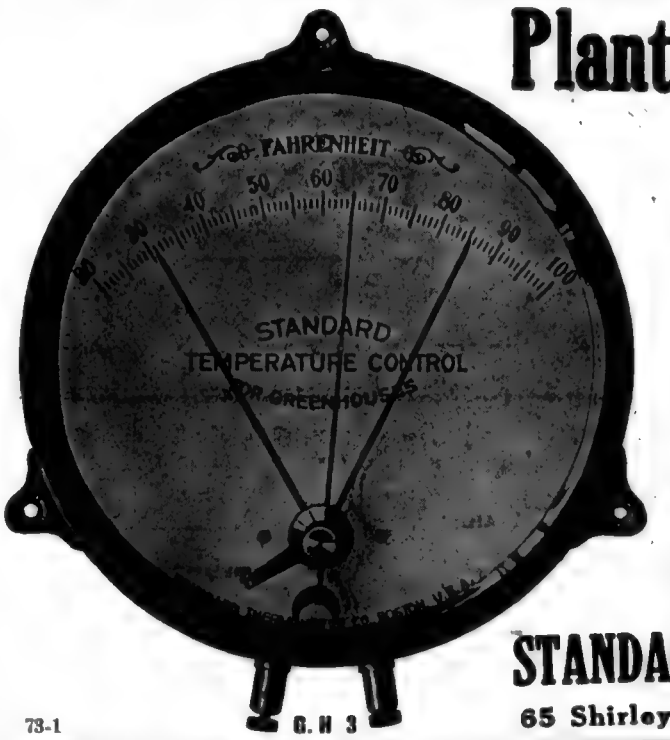
If a given temperature can be maintained with an open-tank system when the outside temperature is 20 degrees below zero, there should be no serious difficulty in securing the same temperature by using a mercury generator when it is 40 degrees below zero.

Many people have the mistaken idea that a generator is so called because it of itself makes or generates heat, but this is not the case. The generator merely makes it possible to increase the temperature of the water above the normal boiling point and thus carry more heat from the boiler through the coils than would be possible with the same size of pipe in an open-tank system. To secure this heat, the boiler should be as large as would be required to furnish the desired temperature with an open-tank system with the same fuel and attention. It is possible that the boiler used by B. & C. is too small.

A RESERVE HEATING SYSTEM.

Allow me to thank you for the answer, in The Review of January 13, to my inquiry with reference to obtaining a higher temperature in my greenhouses. I stated that my present piping would not maintain a temperature of more than 45 or 50 degrees in zero weather, and that I wished to increase this to 65 or 70 degrees. I also asked whether one 1¼-inch flow and four 1-inch returns would be sufficient for the extra radiation.



I notice that I did not fully explain the situation. The four greenhouses, each 23½x90, run east and west. The first house to the south has three feet of glass under the gutter; the balance is solid wall. The gables, however, are all glazed and exposed, to within three feet of the ground. The lean-to, eighteen feet wide, is up against a 2-story building. The heating system used is an open hot water system. I am contemplating the use of low-pressure steam for the additional heating, though I did not state so in my previous communication. The new piping will be a separate heating system from the water system now installed. I simply wish to install a few extra pipes to be used in severe weather, so as to raise the temperature from 45 or 50 degrees in zero weather to 65 or 70 degrees. R. F. G.—Ill.

While one 1¼-inch flow and four 1-inch returns in the houses 23½x90 might raise the temperature from the present point of 45 or 50 degrees to 65 or 70 degrees if the hot water plant is crowded, we would prefer to put in one 1½-inch flow and four 1¼-inch returns in each of the houses, except the south house, with glass in the wall, where we would use five returns. In the lean-to we would use one 1¼-inch flow and three 1¼-inch or four 1-inch returns.

Plant Insurance at $5

WHAT would happen if your night man fell asleep some night in zero weather? What if you should oversleep, or a cold wave hit your greenhouse when your heat is at the minimum? It would mean ruin to your plants—possibly ruin to you. There have been many such cases.

But not if you are equipped with the STANDARD THERMOSTAT. The Standard Thermostat protects you from just such dangers. It will ring a bell at your bedside when danger is near.

The Standard Thermostat is indispensable to the up-to-date grower. You know preparedness counts! Get the Standard today. It costs only $5.00—lasts a lifetime. Write for descriptive matter now, while you are thinking about it. (G. H. 4, same as G. H. 3, only under lock and key, $10.00.)

The Market.

Business was reported as being somewhat slack last week. This does not mean that business was slow, for it averaged up well in comparison with the corresponding week of other years. There has not been so much decorative work as usual, and because of the high prices of cut flowers counter trade has been less than usual. While there has been much funeral work, the profit has been small because of the high prices. Bulbous stock, however, is forcing the prices down, except in the case of roses. Even the roses were not so high as they were a few weeks ago, despite the shortage last week. Most of the growers are busy getting their geraniums and other bedding plants in shape for the spring sales. Callas are coming into the market in larger quantities and bulbous plants are more plentiful and of better quality.

Various Notes.

Charles J. Connolly reports an unusually large business in funeral work.

Henry Hornecker found business good during the latter part of January, but there was a lull the first week of February.

Ernest Radany is getting his bedding plants in shape for the spring business. As he is located near a cemetery, his spring trade in bedding plants is large.

Davies & Davis, of East Orange, have a fine lot of callas coming into crop.

The S. A. Rogers Nursery Co. reports a good business in plants and flowers. The window displays of this concern are made up of plants and flowers not generally seen in florists' windows, such as rare ferns, semitropical plants, etc. R. B. M.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

Adgate & Son, of Warren, O., predict larger sales of plants during the holidays and advance several plausible reasons in support of their claim. Many other retailers are of the same opinion.

Heepe Bros., of Akron, O., ascribe the increase in their business to mantaining a bright display regardless of the scarcity of stock. It conveys the impression that the customer can always be suited even if it is sometimes hard to obtain the goods.

The Brown Floral Co., of Canton, O., finds its two stores often taxed to the limit, keeping pace with the rapid development of the city, so to speak. C. Brown is nursing a heavy cold at home and debating whether or not to erect another greenhouse to square his range.

Charles Lindacher, of Canton, still is doing business at the old stand, not having found a location offering better facilities. He has had a good season and anticipates a fine spring trade.

The F. Dorner & Sons Co., of La Fayette, Ind., is well pleased with returns from the recent carnation convention at St. Louis. Theodore Dorner expressed the opinion that it will be necessary to establish two classes, exhibition and commercial, in order to give the small introducer the chance that now is almost impossible. Looking over the large area of seedlings, one can realize the advisability of creating such classes. A few notes of special interest were made in passing. Nancy, which received the award for the best keeping variety, is a fine grower and should be planted not less than one foot apart each way. Rosalia is a splendid successor to Rosette, and those who have done well with Rosette will do better with Rosalia. Sensation has been somewhat of a disappointment, for which the wet fall is blamed. It is doing well now, however. Good Cheer is proving to be a profitable commercial variety. Old Gold will be sent out next year. A seedling from Pink Delight and a dazzling scarlet are among the bright possibilities of the future. A seedling rose, Hoosier Beauty x Sunburst, is promising. Ophelia is doing finely. A house of single violets for Valentine's day and a large stock of thrifty geraniums were noted.

The Livingston Seed Co., of Columbus, reports big business in all branches. Manager Sperry, of the insecticide department, has had a bad attack of grip, which he declares is a germ, and is spending his few leisure moments in locating it. W. M.

DIRT BANDS

Very soon every grower will be making free use of dirt bands for the growing of all plants. Certainly, no florist can afford to pass them by. They are time and money savers, producing better plants at less cost and with less labor. It simply is a question of getting the best band.

Our new READY-USE dirt band tells its own story. Send a postal for free samples and see how it does it. It comes to you ready to set the plant in, which means saving of very valuable time required to fold the ordinary strips of paper commonly offered for bands.

We make plain bands, too, from high-grade, hard finish stock. Samples will be sent. Compare them with others and put them to any test. It is not how cheap, but how good, is our motto.

PRICES OF PLAIN SQUARE DIRT BANDS.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Business certainly was active last week. A charity ball furnished an opportunity for the designers to show what they could do in the way of corsages, etc.

Various Notes.

Julius, of the Flower Mart, was one of the ushers at the charity ball last week.

W. H. Davenport reports business as being particularly good at his new stand.

Williams Bros. had an unusually busy week of funeral work.

A recent visit to the S. E. Shaw greenhouses found everything in first-class condition. A large house of sweet peas was in splendid crop. A house of carnations left nothing to be desired. Gorgeous was particularly good, having stems up to three and one-half feet long. Mr. Shaw also grows, in smaller quantities, pansies, calendulas, centaureas and callas.

Post & Gray furnished a large decoration for the Mt. Carmel church last week.

I visited the greenhouses of the Kingston Gardens, at Kingston, Mass., last week, where Henry J. Walsh is the grower. Stock was in first-class condition. There was a wonderful crop of sweet peas and violets. His carnations also were of exceptional quality.

W. M. P.

Crookston, Minn.—"He grows every one of his flowers in Crookston, Polk county, Minnesota, and is doing this city and cummunity a distinctive servive." The foregoing unsolicited words of praise were awarded Edward Schuster in a recent issue of the Daily Times. They appeared at the end of a first-page news article descriptive of the Schuster greenhouses. Acquring the property a little more than six months ago, Mr. Schuster has transformed it into a veritable beauty spot that has attracted many visitors and considerable extra custom.

PLANT TUBS

EVERLASTING VIRGINIA WHITE CEDAR

EVERYBODY agrees that Plant Tubs made of everlasting Virginia White Cedar will best resist rot or decay. The "Keystone" brand of White Cedar Plant Tubs are made of this celebrated wood, and these goods are painted inside and out with best oil paints, a rich green.

They are bound with heavy steel hoops for the large size, and electric-welded wire hoops (galvanized) on the small size. The large sizes are trimmed with handsome drop handles and metal feet, and have perforated, removable bottoms.

These Cedar Tubs are made in all sizes, from 24¼ inches top diameter down to 6 inches, amply large for a Bay Tree and small enough for a Hyacinth. Every one guaranteed. Booklet in colors, with prices, furnished upon request.

The Market.

The weather now is nearly ideal for winter and the crops are becoming better every day. The conditions in general have improved to a great extent and things are assuming a more normal trend.

Roses are in fine shape and the supply seems just a little heavier than it has been. Shorter grades still are scarce owing to the heavy demand and the long fancy stock is cleaning up each day. Wards, in particular, are scarce and it is hard to distribute the cut equally or nearly so. Carnations are more plentiful and the stock is showing better quality. Prices have dropped somewhat and the downward tendency is still with us. There is no surplus, however, but the shortage is not acute by any means.

Stevia is entirely out of the market and this helps the sale of greens to a great extent. Valley still is quite scarce and the probabilities are that it will remain so for some time. The quality, while passably good, is nothing extra. Tulips, daffodils, freesias, etc., are arriving in quantity and are in fine shape. The market is cleaning up every day and the prices are fair for this year and good compared with those of last year. Orchids are about equal to the demand and are moving readily. The advance orders for St. Valentine's day are coming in and it would seem that this year's Valentine's day will more than hold its own with that day of last year or the year previous. H. J. S.

WORCESTER, MASS.

The Market.

Retail trade has been good since the first of the year, but stock until recently has been short. Bulbous stock has had a fine market and hyacinths are beginning to arrive. There has been a great demand for funeral work. Indications point to a large Valentine's business and the florists are making ample preparations.

Various Notes.

H. F. A. Lange's Valentine windows are a work of art and his line of novelties for the day is good. Mr. Lange has some unusually good tulips and his stock in general is excellent.

Harry Randall is proud of his healthy stock and expects a large Valentine business. He featured yellow narcissi at a popular price last week and disposed of many of them.

Hermann Lange has been appointed assistant superintendent of the H. F. A. Lange greenhouses. H. L.

Column Anchor Bases for our Reconstructed Construction

ALL COLUMNS in our Reconstructed Construction are clamped at the ground line to heavy four-way braced anchor bases, similar to the ones used on the side posts. The bottom of these bases is big and broad, giving an unusually large bearing surface for the base to rest on, and around which the concrete can grip. The top of the base is equipped with a split half, which friction-grips the column when the four galvanized bolts are tightened. This clamp permits an adjustment up or down of the column, which is a valuable feature in lining up the rafters.

In addition to the powerful friction grip of the clamp, it is equipped with a cold chilled pointed set screw, which bores right into the pipe, doubly insuring it against slipping.

The rafter and post are in one piece from the ground line to the column cap, where it is joined to the balance of the rafter extending to the ridge by a steel splice plate. This plate also carries the main member of the double angle iron truss.

The truss and rafter from the column to the ridge are all put together and hot-riveted in place at the factory. This saves a lot of work on the job and greatly increases speed of erection.

In our next ad we will tell you about the special treatment of the purlins and vent header in the Reconstructed Construction.

DIRT BANDS—Experience in Using Them

H. B. WEAVER
Carnations Mignonettes
Sweet Peas Cut Flowers United Phone.

Bird-in-Hand, Pa., March 23, 1914.

F. W. Rochelle & Sons,
Chester, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your query would state that I planted seedling stock plants and snapdragon cuttings in the first lot of bands that I received from you early in January.

We took some of these out and planted them where they are to remain about the 15th of February. They made GOOD GROWTH while in the bands, and transplanted AS THOUGH they had never been moved at all.

I have now about 14,000 carnation plants started in 2-in. bands which are making a RAPID GROWTH, scarcely losing a plant in transplanting from the sand.

I also have about 20,000 aster plants transplanted in 2-in. bands which can stay there till time to plant out of doors WITHOUT FEAR OF BECOMING ROOT BOUND, as would be the case if I used 2-in. pots.

Plants SELDOM BECOME ROOT BOUND enough to injure them IN THE DIRT BANDS, and DO NOT REQUIRE NEAR THE AMOUNT OF ATTENTION that a pot plant does, in watering, shifting, transplanting, etc.

I make my bands and set them in flats, as I make them up, each flat holding 117.

When we get crowded indoors it takes but a short time to move the flats to a cold frame, where we harden them off before setting them in the field.

One man can set MORE THAN ANOTHER TIME AS MANY (twice as many) plants in the field from these bands and flats than he can from pots, and after he is through DOES NOT HAVE THE BOTHER OF GATHERING UP, CLEANING, and STORING AWAY A LOT OF POTS.

I believe anyone using these bands ONCE WILL BECOME A REGULAR CUSTOMER.

Yours truly,
H. B. Weaver.

Mr. Weaver grows carnations, mignonette, sweet peas, asters, etc. He ordered 5,000 Dirt Bands the first year, 60,000 the second year, 70,000 last year and has just ordered 50,000 more and a further order of 50,000.

Send for Free Samples of both Pots and Bands

PAPER POTS—Experience in using them.

BLACKADAR & CO.

Dauphin Nursery and Greenhouses.

Dauphin, Manitoba, Can., Dec. 4, 1915.

F. W. Rochelle & Sons, Chester, N. J.

Gentlemen: * * * We would say that we used all the Paper Pots we got from you to raise tomato plants.

Our weather is often very severe late in May, therefore we have to keep them inside and we were certainly very satisfied with the splendid results obtained from the Paper Pots.

In fact, WE DID NOT HAVE HALF ENOUGH TO FILL OUR ORDERS. WE CHARGED EXACTLY TWICE THE AMOUNT we did other years and yet our CUSTOMERS INSISTED ON HAVING THOSE IN PAPER POTS.

In our hot sun they never wilted.

We reserved a few for Primulas and certainly have some fine ones.

It was easier to keep them watered and growing during the hot months.

Wishing you success.

Yours truly,
Blackadar & Co.

Gentlemen: I used some of your Paper Pots last spring, which were highly satisfactory.

I grew Roses, Salvias, Verbenas, Petunias and Geraniums in the Paper Pots for retail trade.

THEY NEARLY DOUBLED MY SALES.

I always had fine thrifty plants to send out and I delivered them in the pots, which insured them reaching my patrons in good condition.

I never had a complaint of flowers dying or wilting.

I buy some of my plants, which I set right in the pots.

They are ready for delivery within a few days.

When plants are set out there is no collecting pots or watering to be done.

I intend to use them altogether next season.

Yours very truly,
Mrs. W. T. Barber.

The Market.

The weather last week varied from summer's temperatures to winter's cold blasts, and business was about as variable as the weather. Carnations are arriving in larger numbers and the prices have receded, but at the end of the week all stock had been sold. Roses sold at a lower figure than formerly, but nearly everything was moved. Violets, both single and double, could be bought in unlimited quantities at low prices. Daffodils are plentiful and sell cheaply. Some of the first bicolors were seen last week and they were all snapped up. Owing to the cloudy weather, peas are of rather poor quality, but plenty of them are to be had. Bulbous stock was rather plentiful, with the exception of tulips, and did not move any too well. The demand during the early part of the week was poor, but later it picked up considerably. White in all kinds of flowers was in good demand, owing to the large quantity of funeral work. Plant sales are holding out well. Azaleas, primulas and potted bulbous stock are moving well, with a good supply on hand.

Various Notes.

James Glass is cutting fine calendulas. His sweet peas promise a heavy cut of good quality and a bed of Godfrey callas is covered with flowers.

Black Bros. had the decorations for the Midnight Musketeers at the Lyric February 1.

At the next club meeting, February 14, William E. McKissick will talk on "Business Good and Bad from a Wholesale Point of View," which will be followed by a discussion. This meeting is nomination meeting, for the nomination of officers for the year will be made.

The National Flower Show, to be held in Philadelphia, is the subject of much interest to the members of the trade and from present indications this city will be well represented, for a large number have already signified their intention of attending the show.

WANTS DWARF ASPARAGUS.

We have always understood that Asparagus plumosus nanus was a dwarf variety, growing about twelve to eighteen inches high, but all the seed of this variety that we have sown has produced large plants with long runners. Please inform us if there is a dwarf variety more suitable for table decorations. H. M. H.—Mich.

Asparagus plumosus nanus is not a dwarf-growing variety, as the name would indicate. It grows quite as tall as the original, A. plumosus, the chief distinction between the two being that the nanus variety has flatter branches and is more leafy or fuller than plumosus. A. plumosus nanus is the best variety in the trade for table use, and when it is grown in a moderately light greenhouse it is sufficiently dwarf for all ordinary purposes. It should be grown in 3 or 4-inch pots, but beyond that size it needs to be cut back occasionally in order to keep it within bounds. W. H. T.

PROPAGATING POINSETTIAS.

When is the best time to begin propagating poinsettias? Do they need much bottom heat? Do you think a beginner should buy rooted cuttings, and when? How should these be handled in summer? Can the poinsettias be carried in a chrysanthemum house through the summer? I have only one house, but intend to build more this year.
C. F.—Ohio.

Stock plants of poinsettias should now be resting below a dry greenhouse bench. Such plants can be started into growth in a warm house from the middle of April onward. Rub off cuttings with heels when they are three or four inches long. Give them a good bottom heat, protect them from the sun and water them three or four times a week. As you are a beginner, it would be preferable to buy rooted cuttings in June or July if you want small, dwarf stock in pans. C. W.

Phoenix, Ariz.—For the purpose of encouraging the planting and growing of roses in the city, the president of the Chamber of Commerce has appointed a committee to make arrangements for an annual rose carnival. There are several florists on the committee. Needless to say, the proposed festival would result in good business for florists.

Why Duo-Glazed Sash for Hotbeds?

Because it takes most of the labor and nearly all the risk out of Hotbed and Coldframe gardening.

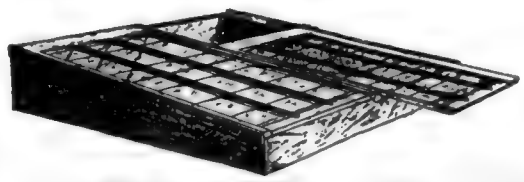
With Duo-Glazed Sash—two layers of glass with insulating air space between—no shutters or night coverings are needed. Think of the labor saved. Being frost-proof, which single glazed sash is not, a sudden change in temperature isn't going to catch you unprepared. Think of the saving in plants.

The cost of Duo-Glazed Sash over that of the single glazed (about 33c on the sash and 75c for glass), is no more than the cost of night coverings, without any consideration of the labor cost of handling the covers.

Strongly built of Red Cypress, tenons creosoted before joining. Duo-Glazed lockstrip makes glazing easy and quick, and prevents any possibility of slipping or splintering.

In lots of 60 sash the cost of 3 ft. x 6 ft. size is but $1.75 each; smaller quantities only slightly more.

Since we also make and sell Single Glass Putty Glazed Sash, our advice is unbiased.



Ask for our free catalogue, which also shows Frame Equipment, Sectional Greenhouses and Greenhouse Materials.

LONGER STEMS MORE VIGOR

H. T. & A. H. FUNNELL, Huntington, N. Y., write:

"With Asters we see a marked improvement in length of flower stem, vigor of plant, and size of flowers, since we installed the Irrigation System. Being surface rooters, the Asters are greatly damaged by dry weather, and we have formerly lost nearly half of our crop by drought. We advise not waiting too long for rain, before starting the sprinklers."

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

TIME TO TACKLE INCOME TAXES

Failure to file an income tax return on or before Wednesday, March 1, is punishable by a fine of from $20 to $1,000. All florists who had net incomes of $3,000 or more from any source during the year 1915 must file the return. Have you started yours?

YOUR Uncle Samuel, who typifies the government at Washington, has noted that the number of individuals who filed income tax returns last year was only a little over 350,000, while the records of the Automobile Chamber of Commerce show 812,000 cars sold in 1915. Official count of licenses issued shows 2,400,000 cars in use in the United States. There is good authority for saying your Uncle Samuel regards it as interesting, not to say suspicious, that there should have been three cars sold last year for every man who has an income of as much as $3,000; that there are seven times as many men who own autos as there are who admit they are subject to the income tax.

Which is just another way of saying the authorities may be expected to check up more closely this year and make a public example here and there if evasions are found. It would be extremely unpleasant to be an example, don't you think? Besides, it would be costly.

Excuses Futile.

Of course no florist would willfully evade the tax, but it must be remembered neither ignorance nor neglect will stand as an excuse. The only course for a man to take who had a net income as much as $3,000 in 1915 is to file his tax return before March 1.

When the income tax was new The Review published an article that showed how a member of the trade handled the tax return. So many readers commented on it as being just what they needed as a guide in making up their own returns that the blank for 1916 is reproduced herewith, filled in to show the financial operations of A. F. Lorist and his wife for 1915.

As this taxpayer filed a return last year, the Collector of Internal Revenue in his district sent him a blank some weeks ago. The first thing for a man to do who has not received the blank, but whose net income was as much as $3,000 last year, is to send to the Collector for a blank. A married man has $4,000 exemption, but he must file the return if his income is as much as $3,000 and not so much as $4,000.

Keep a Running Record.

When A. F. Lorist first was called on to file an income tax return he found it an almost hopeless task to fill the blanks exactly, as he had no record outside his store accounts. Next year, however, he obtained a book from his bank, distributed free as an ad, in which he made entries as the transactions occurred, so that now, blank in hand, it is only a moment's work to fill in the figures with accuracy.

Page 1 of the blank is a summary. The place to begin is at the top of page 2.

This florist is something of a literary person. In the year he wrote several articles for The Review, for which he received $60; also two articles for a gardening paper which paid him $30. The total he enters on line 12, column B. It would as well go on line 13, one or the other remaining blank. His wife spends part of each day in the store and draws $15 per week for her personal use. As it is charged on the store's pay roll, it must here be entered as a part of their joint income. He doesn't allow himself any salary.

A. F. Lorist runs a retail flower store in a city of some size and reference to his books shows its total receipts for the year to have been $18,657.87, for business was not quite so good as in 1914. It goes on line 14, column B.

A Flier in Stocks.

Being a venturesome person who heard much talk of war stocks, February 8, 1915, this taxpayer bought 100 shares of "Steel common," at 41, his first venture in the stock market. Having surplus funds from a real estate transaction closed a few weeks before, he paid for the stock and had it taken out in his wife's name. They held it until November 1, 1915, when they sold at 82, doubling their money. The net profit, $4,071, we will credit to Friend Wife, on the line under the store's receipts. This money now has gone into the purchase of some acre property adjoining the greenhouses in which the taxpayer is interested and a record is made of the cost, to which expenses of purchase, betterments and sale will be added in due course, for the purpose of figuring taxable profit when the property is sold. Thus far the investment has produced no income. Nor did the war stocks pay a dividend; had they done so while held it would have been included in the sum entered on line 25.

From the rooms over the store A. F. Lorist last year received $330 rent, the premises having been vacant one month. It goes on line 15.

Miscellaneous Income.

As interest on notes he received $30; on mortgages, $75, and on his bank balance $47, make a total of $152. It goes

GENERAL DEDUCTIONS.

NOTE.—Claims for deductions can not be allowed unless the information required below is clearly set forth.

	Millions, Thousands, Hundreds, Cents
29. The amount of necessary expenses actually paid within the calendar year, for which the return is made, in carrying on any individual business. There must not be included under this head personal, living, or family expenses, business expenses of partnerships, or cost of merchandise. Amounts paid for permanent improvement or betterment of property are not proper expense deductions	$ 15284.15
Wife's deduction
Note.—State on the following lines the principal businesses in which the above expenses were incurred. Retail flower store
30. All interest paid within the year on personal indebtedness of taxpayer	320.00
Wife's deduction
31. All national, State, county, school, and municipal taxes paid within the year (not including those assessed against local benefits)	169.75
Wife's deduction	146.25
32. Losses actually sustained during the year incurred in trade or arising from fires, storms, or shipwreck, and not compensated by insurance or otherwise	185.00
Wife's deduction
Note.—State (a) of what the loss consisted, (b) when it was actually sustained, and (c) how it was determined to be a loss. $35 on plate glass show windows 150 on wearing apparel, burned; uninsured
33. Debts past due which have been actually ascertained to be worthless and which have been charged off within the year	388.75
Wife's deduction
Note.—State (a) of what the debts consisted, (b) when they were created, (c) when they became due, and (d) how they were actually determined to be worthless. Bad accounts charged to profit & loss
34. Amount representing a reasonable allowance for the exhaustion, wear and tear of property arising out of its use or employment in business. No deduction shall be made for any amount of expense of restoring property or making good the exhaustion thereof for which a deduction is claimed elsewhere in this return	1325.00
Note.—State (a) what the property was on which depreciation is taken (if buildings, state when erected, of what material constructed, and value of same, as of January 1, of the calendar year for which this return is rendered), and (b) what percentage of depreciation is claimed. Store building, 5%; Greenhouse 10%. auto, 20%; fixtures, 10%.
35. Amount allowed to cover depletion, in case of mines and oil wells, not to exceed 5 per cent of the gross value at the mine or well of the output for the calendar year for which this return is rendered
Wife's deduction
Note.—State (a) cost of mine or well, (b) gross value at the mine or well of the output for the calendar year for which this return is rendered, and (c) what percentage of depletion is claimed.
36. TOTAL "GENERAL DEDUCTIONS" (to be entered on line 2)	$ 16759.90

Note.—If space is insufficient for answering any question, attach a supplemental sheet to this return.

on line 16. Wife's interest on $500 she keeps in the savings bank against a time of need was $18. On money invested in bonds he received $300. His wife received $180 interest on bonds on which the tax was paid at the source; so one amount goes in column B, the other in column A.

The taxpayer receives $72 per year as his share of the income from property which, according to his father's will, is not to be divided until two nephews become 21 years of age. Of this $72, $20 comes from a corporation that pays an income tax, so it is entered farther down, but $52 comes from a mortgage, and is entered on line 18, fiduciary being a general name for executors, trustees and the like.

Greenhouse Profits.

In years gone by A. F. Lorist has invested part of his profits in a partnership wholesale growing establishment on the edge of town. These greenhouses did not pay so well in 1915 as in the past. After the active partner had drawn a salary for his time there was only $2,500 as profit on the total investment. But before it was seen which way the cat would jump it had been decided to build another greenhouse. It cost $2,000. So the cash for each partner is only $250. It is necessary, however, to schedule the entire profit, "whether distributed or not." So $1,250 goes on line 19.

Some years ago this taxpayer made an investment in stock of a Canadian corporation; it paid him $240 in 1914, but in 1915 it cut its dividends in two, so $120 goes on line 20.

A greenhouse building firm is paying our friend a royalty for the use of a patent he obtained in 1913, but in 1915 this did not amount to quite so much as in 1914; $298.75 goes on line 21. On line 25 he enters $110 dividends received on some stock in his bank, and all his income is accounted for. The footings are simple.

General Deductions.

At the top of page 3 he puts down the expense of carrying on the store during 1915, $15,025.15. This florist discounts all his bills and for that purpose sometimes borrows money of his bank, but such interest charges go into the expense account of the store. On line 30 is entered $320 interest paid on the mortgage on the store property. The taxes were $169.75. The home stands in the wife's name and her taxes were $146.25. During the year there were two losses at the store; the plate glass window was broken, the loss being $35 more than the insurance, and a fire started from the heating apparatus in the basement, entailing a loss estimated at $150 on wearing apparel not covered by the insurance. So $185 goes on line 32, with subjoined description.

Before this taxpayer charges any account to profit and loss he turns it over to a collection agency. In 1915 the agency returned as uncollectible $388.75 in accounts. Entered on line 33. He figured five per cent depreciation on his brick store building, ten per cent on the conservatory in its rear, twelve per cent on the store fixtures and twenty per cent on his White delivery car, the total being $1,325. The total deductions then, are $16,759.90.

Striking the Balance.

The totals of each of pages 2 and 3 are entered on page 1, on lines 1 and 2, and the difference computed. From this amount are deducted the entries on lines 23 and 27 of page 2, also the exemption of $4,000 given a married man who lives with his wife. The remainder is the taxable income, in this case $4,559.72, which, it will be noted, nearly all comes from the fortunate investment in stocks. One per cent of the taxable income is entered at the foot of the page and the return is ready for the signature before a notary, a place for which is provided on page 4.

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY.

The trade was handicapped a bit this year, but the business for the day nevertheless was so good as to afford high hopes for the future. In many of the city news-letters in this issue of The Review it will be found the sales of flowers for valentine purposes not only broke all records but were so large as to rank the day as one of the big special flower events of the entire year. There are those who are so enthusiastic as to predict it soon will class with Christmas in its demand for gift flowers.

The obstacles this year were three in number. Perhaps not all three operated in any one place, or perhaps there were places where everything was favorable, but: In many markets stock has been scarce and high, so that retailers were deterred from buying liberally and advertising widely; in the east winter gave a dying kick that day, many places reporting the lowest temperatures of the year; and Monday is proverbially a poor day for a flower gift holiday.

An interesting feature is that the post-office people in many cities noted a sharp decrease in the number of valentines passing through the mails and that in several instances it was explained in the daily papers as due to the "increasing custom of sending flowers." That's what we like to read.

NEW STORE IN THE SOUTHLAND.

Down in the Lone Star state, in the city of Dallas, two enterprising men pooled their experiences and interests and launched out into the florists' craft August 21. They are Ernest Rische, Jr., and Charles C. Chollar, both of whom bring years of experience to their venture, the Rische-Chollar Floral Co. Mr. Rische is a young man. He was formerly manager of the retail store of the Texas Seed & Floral Co., and for the last two years has been manager of the Lone Star Floral Co. Mr. Chollar does not need an introduction to the Texas trade, having been associated with some of the largest firms in the state. During the last two years he has been decorator for the Brown-Dawson Co.

The accompanying illustration pictures the interior of their shop, at Elm and Stone streets, Dallas. The store was opened August 21. In addition to cut flowers, floral designs, plants, seeds and bulbs, the owners retail canaries and goldfishes.

ADVERTISING AND ITS COST.

Consider Results First.

The number of retail florists who talk to the public through the newspapers has increased rapidly in recent years, but there still are a good many who say, "I can't afford to advertise." They have absolutely the wrong idea. According to a somewhat hackneyed phrase, advertising is not an expense, but an investment. Some men like to invest in oil wells, gold mines, gold bricks or the hope of quick riches. If they consider advertising as being in this class, well, they are correct in saying they can not "afford" it. But for the man who finds an endowment policy in a strong company a good investment, advertising is attractive.

How Much to Invest.

Advertising is of two classes: That done with the expectation of direct returns and that done for the purpose of building a reputation. If a man advertises to make immediate sales he can go as far as results justify, but it may be taken as axiomatic that the first sale never paid anybody—it is the repeats from the new customer that bring the real profits.

For the upbuilding of a business a retailer may spend what he will. The intelligence with which he spends the money will count for more than the amount of the expenditure.

It certainly is a capital crime to set apart a sum for "advertising" and to spend it without regard for results—a man can get a reputation easily enough by the thoughtless use of money, but it seldom is a reputation that does a business man any good. A florist may have money to burn, but he will find not many people worth while like the smell of the smoke. Don't buy space until you have something worth while to put in it.

Eight Cents out of Every Dollar.

For general publicity purposes it still is the practice to set aside a certain percentage of the gross sales and the question frequently is asked, "How much is a retail florist justified in putting back into his business?" It all depends. Andrew L. Demling says Penn, in Boston, reinvests in this way eight per cent of the annual sales and, as Penn's sent The Review proofsheets of the interview, it must be correct.

How Penn Started.

It was the chance remark of an early customer that started this Boston florist advertising, according to Mr. Demling. "It was a good many years ago, and I was doing a modest business in my first establishment over in Chapman place," Henry Penn is quoted in the Cincinnati Enquirer as saying. "One morning a well-known citizen of Boston came into my store and said:

"'Mr. Penn, what are you going to soak me for a dozen carnations?'

"It set me thinking. That man didn't know before he came in that my prices and quality were right. There were thousands of people in Boston who didn't know it. Why? Because I hadn't told them. Yet if they were to become my customers—if my business was to assume the proportions I was determined it should—they would have to know it.

"It was plainly my duty to tell everybody in Boston that this 'Penn' spelled quality, service and economy in flower buying. How?

"There's only one medium through which your message reaches everybody. The newspaper. There's only one way to make people realize what you're telling them—to tell them constantly, and so conspicuously they can't overlook it.

A Quick Sales Proposition.

"Advertising is peculiarly essential to the flower business," he continued,

New Store of the Rische-Chollar Floral Co., Dallas, Tex.

"because prompt sales are the only kind we can make. A house will keep, a lot won't run away, but I don't know of many things more unsalable than a withered flower.

"Another thing, this business offers unlimited possibilities for attractive advertising. Every season of the year has its sentiment that only flowers can express, and in addition to the days and occasions that are celebrated generally in flowers, every week is full of the more intimate anniversaries and celebrations. Flowers are always in season."

The Key to Success.

"Here's the situation in a nutshell," Mr. Penn summed up, checking off his points on his fingers. "Take a young man of personality and good habits, who delights in flowers and the society of other flower lovers. See that he's a young man of an original turn of mind, a brain he's not afraid to use in constant quest for new ideas.

"Give this man from $300 to $5,000, according to his town and the volume he's after. My original capital was $300.

"And last, but most essential of all, teach this young man how to keep the newspapers working for him through their advertising pages. Impress him thoroughly with the necessity of keeping his business constantly in people's minds—so that the mention of buying flowers suggests to them the mental picture of his individual ads—so that his firm and his ads are welded for all time with the thought of flower buying. That man's chances in the flower business are absolutely A1."

LABELING IN THE BENCH.

In The Review for February 10 C. W. invites the opinion of others concerning the proper labeling of plants in the cutting bench. I believe the best way to label batches of cuttings and plants, especially smaller batches, is to use two labels, one at the beginning and one at the end of each batch. In that case, unless a man is extremely careless, he is not liable to get cuttings or plants mixed. Geo. C. Schmidt.

CROPS FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

In regard to the article, "Crops for Memorial Day" on page 20 of the Florists' Review for February 10, I write to suggest what I consider a much better method than the one recommended for the handling of stocks. They should be planted January 1 to 10, according to variety, and pinched once after benching. Unpinched plants will give one large spike and pinched plants will give from five to twelve good spikes. Pinched plants require more time than unpinched ones. Whenever I have followed the above rule I never failed to have a good crop for May 30 in this climate. Alexander Skillin.

Maine.

FAHRENHEIT AND CENTIGRADE.

In The Review of January 20, on page 22, you speak of the bill that has been introduced in Congress to abolish the Fahrenheit thermometer scale and substitute therefor the centigrade scale. After reading the article it occurred to us that an easy formula for converting centigrade readings to Fahrenheit would be of interest to your readers. The formula is as follows: Multiply any centigrade reading by nine-fifths, then add thirty-two to the result. As an example, take the boiling point of water on the centigrade scale, which is 100 degrees. In changing this to Fahrenheit the formula works like this: $100 \times 9/5 = 180$; $180 + 32 = 212$. Therefore the boiling point of water in Fahrenheit is 212 degrees, which is, of course, common knowledge. To convert Fahrenheit to centigrade the formula is reversed, thus: Subtract thirty-two from the Fahrenheit reading and multiply the result by five-ninths. By this rule 212 degrees Fahrenheit will become 100 degrees centigrade. George W. Haas & Son.

MORE ABOUT LABELING.

I have read with interest a question in The Review where someone wants to know what is the correct way of labeling plants on a bench, and I would like to offer my opinion on this subject, because I also find that almost every new man the boss hires, and who is put to work under my supervision, has a new way of labeling plants or cuttings; also, each new way is the only correct way. The trouble is that the new man often works just long enough to succeed in mislabeling a batch of plants when I have my back turned. The fact is that the batch of plants is not really labeled to a wrong name, but mislabeled, by which I mean so that the next man does not know to which batch of plants the label belongs, unless he is a real plantsman, who can recognize a variety by the leaves. The result is that the itinerant florist has balled up the job and started trouble for the foreman. So I have my own system of labeling, to-wit: One label at the first row of a sort, facing the sort, and another label at the last row of the same sort, also facing the sort. And the man who does not follow my rule is put to work where he handles no labels at all. I maintain that the only correct way is some way by which mistakes cannot occur. All other ways are not the correct way. Of course, I realize full well that I am a crank and a crab, but what foreman does not find that quality more or less a necessity? I have kept my job for nearly twenty years at one and the same establishment. R. I. Diculus.

FREESIAS FROM SEED?

We usually have saved and planted our own freesia bulbs, which were long and slim and seldom failed to bloom, but during the last few years we had to cut the foliage with the blooms and thereby naturally killed the bulbs. The only bulbs we can purchase in the market are round and thick, of which a good percentage never come up. Recently we noticed in a catalogue that freesias from seed will bloom the first year. Has any reader tried this? If so, is it practical? F. Blondeel.

THE MRS. HEAL BEGONIA.

The Review several times has spoken of the Mrs. Heal begonia as a promising Christmas pot plant for the trade. Probably the most successful grower in the United States has been William Downs, whose plants, shown at Boston, have attracted much attention. The following cultural notes were written by Mr. Downs:

A Good New Christmas Plant, Begonia Mrs. Heal.

"This new type of red winter-flowering begonia, Mrs. John Heal, really flowers in the fall in America, and is a valuable acquisition, provided the plants receive careful culture. Being semi-tuberous, the plants require to be treated somewhat differently from both the tuberous and fibrous-rooted sections. They must not be dried off as the tuberous, nor be kept growing like the fibrous, but a sort of halfway treatment is necessary. Indeed, the stems must be kept green, and a few leaves generally remain fresh until we start them in the spring. During the resting period we keep them in the cool house with cyclamens, pelargoniums and similar plants, and on the bench, not under it. Towards spring we give them more heat. When they break freely and after taking off what cuttings we need, we repot the old plants, shaking them out thoroughly and using rough material for the potting mixture. Watering is done most carefully at this stage, or they turn yellow and finally rot; in fact, at all times they must be preserved from any excess. The cuttings root as freely as a pelargonium. We grow them with Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, using much the same soil—rough fibrous loam, leaf-soil and sand, with cow manure. This last material we pick up in the pastures and break it in lumps, and I find the plants revel in this rough mixture. Just a dash of Clay's fertilizer in the final potting is good, and we use the same with alternate waterings of liquid manure after the pots become filled with roots. A moist atmosphere and a temperature of 60 degrees at night and 10 degrees higher in the day suits them during the season of growth. We use for shade the stripe system, much the same as if we had slat shades, using on our 24-inch glass five stripes which cover about half the surface, and I find this system of shade is far better than covering the whole surface for all plants except palms and ferns. The begonias must not be exposed to drafts, or they will be susceptible to mildew. We use side ventilation under the benches."

NOVELTY NIGHT IN CHICAGO.

Many Fine Exhibits.

More than 100 members and guests of the Chicago Florists' Club graced the occasion of its novelty night, February 10, at the Morrison hotel. In a hall adjoining the meeting room were staged the novelty exhibits. These made up in quality and variety anything they lacked in numbers.

The exhibits, together with the comments made by the judges, were as follows:

One vase new Rainbow freesia—Alois Frey, Crown Point, Ind.; club certificate. Mr. Frey also showed a basket of these Rainbow freesias arranged by George Wienhoeber.

One vase Freesia Purity—W. H. Amling, Maywood, Ill.; highly commended.

One vase Cyclamen giganteum, improved Wandsbek type—Ernest Rober, Wilmette, Ill.; vote of thanks.

One vase Irish Fireflame—George Weiland, Evanston, Ill.; special mention.

Vase of Mrs. Bayard Thayer roses—Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass.; foliage and stems good, but bruised in shipment.

Vase of Dark Pink Russell roses—Waban Rose Conservatories; good color and foliage; stems too short to be scored.

Vase of Hoosier Beauty roses—E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.; good.

Vase of Tipperary roses—E. G. Hill Co.; stem good, foliage good, color fair; seems to have the good habits of Ward.

Vase of Belle Washburn carnations—Bassett & Washburn, Hinsdale, Ill.; already certificated by Chicago Florists' Club, eighty-one points.

Vase of Superb carnations—Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill.

Collection of primulas and cinerarias—A. H. Schneider, Oak Park, Ill.; vote of thanks.

Twelve plants Primula malacoides rosea in several sizes—F. H. Lemon & Co., Richmond, Ind.; awarded club certificate.

Two vases of Alice Coombs carnations—E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.; good.

Bouquet of violets—M. C. Gunterberg, Chicago, Ill.; vote of thanks.

Vase of pink carnations—Kirscht Bros., Morton Grove, Ill.; not enough blooms to score.

No. 1-12 pink seedling carnation—Department of Horticulture, University of Illinois; eighty-nine points.

Vase of Merry Christmas red carnations—Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind.; eighty-nine points.

Vase of Pollyana carnations—Baur & Steinkamp; eighty-five points.

Vase dark pink seedling carnation No. 39-12A—Mount Greenwood Cemetery Association, Chicago; rose pink.

Vase dark pink seedling carnation No. 1-12B—Mount Greenwood Cemetery Association; rose pink.

Vase light pink carnation No. 125-11—F. Dorner & Sons Co., La Fayette, Ind.; eighty-eight points.

Vase of Nancy, blush pink carnation—F. Dorner & Sons Co.; eighty-seven points.

Vase of Rosalia carnations—F. Dorner & Sons Co.; eighty-seven points.

Vase of Old Gold carnations, yellow edged with red—F. Dorner & Sons Co.; eighty points.

Vase of seedling carnation No. 30-10—John Then, Chicago; eighty-three points.

Vase of Alice carnations—C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; fine blooms.

Vase of Aviator carnations—J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill.; fine blooms.

Vase of Firebird cannas—Vaughan's Greenhouses, Western Springs, Ill.; vote of thanks.

Seedling carnation No. 4—Henry Symonds, Decorah, Ia.; not received in good condition.

The judges on carnations were C. W. Johnson, A. F. J. Baur, F. H. Lemon and H. B. Dorner. The rose judges were George Wienhoeber, Emil Reichling and J. G. Schumann. On miscellaneous exhibits W. E. Tricker, W. A. Manda and H. N. Bruns were the judges.

The Routine Business.

When everyone had satisfied his curiosity in the exhibition room, the regular meeting was convened. Applications for membership were filed by A. F. J. Baur, Indianapolis, Ind.; W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.; William Graham, 84 East Jackson boulevard; D. D. P. Roy, 168 North Michigan avenue, and Peter Schaefer, 36 South Wabash avenue, all of Chicago.

The transportation committee submitted a report recommending the train leaving Chicago, March 25, at 3:15 p. m., for the use of the club party to the National Flower Show at Philadelphia; also, the Rock Island train leaving Chicago at 10 a. m., March 7, for the use of the party attending the meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association at Moline. The recommendations were accepted.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

ALEXANDER J. GUTTMAN.

WHEN a commission man gets to the point where his growers name new varieties after him, he may well be said to have "arrived." The Alexander Jacob Guttman mum was raised by Frank Dinda, of Farmingdale, L. I. Mr. Guttman was born in 1877, at Iglo, Austria-Hungary, his parents bringing him to New York at the age of 11. His first florist job was with Traendly & Schenck. He went into business for himself in 1899. He first attracted nation-wide attention in the trade when, in 1906, in partnership with the originator, he disseminated Carnation Victory. Since then Guttman never has been idle; he has had his ups and downs in business, but he always has been on the move, forward if possible, back if he must, but never still. One of his chief pleasures has been the selection, exploitation and dissemination of new varieties and at present he has half a dozen, carnations, roses and mums, in hand.

When business was disposed of the club listened to most instructive and entertaining talks by the numerous visitors. E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., gave a criticism of the roses now occupying the attention of the growers. This was followed by a few remarks on the work of the department of floriculture at the University of Illinois by H. B. Dorner. A. F. J. Baur, of Indianapolis, Ind., secretary of the American Carnation Society, scored the growers of the middle west for letting New England send more blooms to St. Louis than they, and carry away more prizes. He warned those present that the Yankees would try to repeat this next year at Indianapolis. S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, spoke interestingly of the coming show in that city. Fred Lemon, of Richmond, Ind., when called upon, subscribed to what had been said by Mr. Baur. William Graham, the new manager of the Fleischman Floral Co., expressed his pleasure with things as he found them in Chicago. A short review of the progress made by the florists' trade in Chicago since his first visit in 1893 was given by W. A. Manda, of South Orange, N. J. C. C. Pollworth assured the members of the club that anything in the shape of a speech by him would be a greater novelty than any on exhibition in the adjoining room.

TRI-CITIES' CLUB MEETING.

The monthly meeting of the Tri-City Florists' Club was held Thursday, February 10, at the residence of William Goos, at Bettendorf, Ia. This was one of the best attended, most interesting and enjoyable meetings ever held in the history of the club. The main business of the meeting was the consideration of the reports from the various committees in charge of the arrangements for the forthcoming convention and exhibition of the Illinois State Florists' Association, to be held at Turner hall, Moline, Ill., March 7 and 8.

Satisfactory progress was reported by the committees at this meeting. John Staack, of Moline, one of the vice-presidents of the Illinois State Florists' Association, volunteered to furnish the orchestra for the banquet, and L. Stapp invited the conventionists to his place to lunch February 8. As the convention matters overshadowed everything else at this meeting, no reports were made as to the trade conditions in the Tri-Cities. The meeting adjourned after a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Goos for their whole-hearted hospitality. A special meeting will be held at the Rock Island Turner hall, February 24, at 2:30 p. m. A. A.

The general committee in charge of the local arrangements for the meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association was photographed at its recent meeting. Accompanying the picture reproduced herewith came the following comment from one of the Moline members: Top row, left to right—Chairman John Staack, retiring but energetic; Ed. R. Patton, as upstanding as his roses; P. G. Pearson, of receptive character, see his open countenance; "Lud" Stapp, universal Big Brother; W. C. Wilson, utility man. Middle row—Secretary Wm. Knees, Jr., "man afraid of his shirt;" Henry Gaetge, high-powered but steers well. Front row—Secretary Tri-City Florists' Club, Wm. Goos, our "wheel horse;" Messrs. C. J. Reardon, A. Anderson and C. Sorensen, the Purity League; Davenport Superintendent of Parks C. O. E. Boehm, not "born to blush unseen."

THE NEWER FORCING ROSES.

[A synopsis of a talk by E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., before the Chicago Florists' Club, February 10, 1916.]

The rose will always have first place in our calling, and it is well that we, as growers of roses, are catching on to the fact that novelty is one of the potent factors in roses as well as in ribbons, silks and the trimming for the ladies' hats. We have been supinely indifferent to this phase of our business, but a new era has dawned, and this means good and not ill, for our business. Rose growers are at work in more earnest effort than ever to meet this new feature of our trade.

The Season's Offerings.

The Waban Rose Conservatories are sending out two sports from Mrs. Russell, which most of you have had opportunity to inspect and criticise. These two varieties, Mrs. Bayard Thayer and Dark Pink Russell, should certainly commend themselves to all who do Russell well. The last named, maintaining, as it does, its fine rich color, may be a dangerous rival of its parent. Mrs. Thayer certainly will be in demand, and I predict a goodly number will be grown in the near future.

If a fine corsage and bowl rose is desired I can commend Tipperary as filling the bill. This rose is free in its production of bloom, and is greatly esteemed at the two retail stores I am interested in, many preferring it to Mrs. Aaron Ward.

Tip-Top is a charmingly colored little gem of a rose in the way of a polyantha. Nothing imaginable can be more beautiful than the color scheme of this little rose. A corsage bouquet made of this little beauty captivates the most fastidious. This variety has only one defect—it lacks stiffness of stem, but as all corsage roses are wired, this does not militate against its usefulness.

A. N. Pierson is sending out Red Radiance; also a deeper colored sport from My Maryland. These should be valuable additions for summer cut blooms.

You all know about Champ Weiland and you who are here can speak, for I have not seen it.

Chas. H. Totty offers Gorgeous and Cleveland, two of the Hugh Dickson productions. These are being put out with the endorsement of Mr. Totty, which certainly is warrant for their introduction.

The Hugh Dickson rose, winner of the $1,000 prize at the Panama-Pacific exposition, will not be distributed before next year. It is a rich, pure yellow, with extremely long petals and a shapely bud. If it has sufficient petalage, it has all the earmarks of a great rose for forcing. It certainly made a deep impression on my mind.

The Newer Forcing Roses.

Mrs. Russell has made good, if we may credit all that is said about it by the Chicago growers; in fact, growers distant from Chicago are succeeding admirably with it. On the other hand, failure has attended the growing of this rose by some up-to-date and experienced growers, and with a goodly number has disappointment followed their best efforts. A recent visit south was instructive and of great interest as pertains to Mrs. Russell; it was, in the great majority of the places in the south, doing remarkably well, and thriving amazingly in a few places. It occurred to your speaker that the rose likes abundant sunshine and considerable heat to do its best, but your club members are better able to discuss this point than myself. This rose has great merit and is well liked by those who appreciate a long-stemmed variety that possesses good keeping qualities. Those two qualities certainly give it standing with critical rose buyers.

Mme. P. Euler is finding favor with many growers on the Pacific slope, and under the bright sunshine and climatic conditions of California it will make a large place for itself. Our firm was the first to test and try out this rose after its introduction; we found a small percentage perfected themselves, but the major portion were bull-headed, as the growers use the term. If it succeeds in the eastern part of the United States, I shall be pleased to know it, for it is a beautiful rose when nicely developed.

Wanted: Colored Ophelias.

Ophelia certainly deserves all the praise bestowed upon it. A seedling of Antoine Rivoire x Taft, having all the good qualities of its parent, without any of its faults, surely this rose comes nearer being the ideal cut flower forcing rose, measuring up to Killarney in its productiveness, but without its tendency to mildew. As one noted rose grower puts it: "The finest and most useful of all roses." One grower said: "What we want is a pink, a red and a white Ophelia; then surely the rose millennium will have come." At Richmond in a cross between Ophelia and Mrs. Shawyer we seem to have found the good growing qualities of Ophelia with the fine shape and coloring of Shawyer.

Mrs. Shawyer with many is considered the finest of all pink roses and is deservedly popular with all who love a fine bud and a beautiful rose, but it has a tendency to mildew without provocation under seemingly good culture. It is a rose requiring careful handling of the ventilators.

The Velvety Reds.

Hadley is a rose that has had extensive trial and is a grand variety when well done. It certainly is fine when grown as it is done in its home town. Nothing could be more desirable in a red rose if it were productive enough; its great fault is the unusual amount of blind wood produced, especially in winter. I fear this rose will not hold place for this reason.

Gentlemen:-

Having noted with interest the many paragraphs in the Florists' Review urging the use of letter-heads and telling of the advertising value of same, we think perhaps you will be interested in receiving this letter on our new stationery, of which we are very proud.

We also wish to state that we appreciate the wonderful service The Review gives its subscribers and advertisers and believe that it is this honest co-operation on your part that has made The Review the paper it is today. The returns from our advertising in your paper prove the investment a good one.

Thanking you for your many courtesies, and wishing you continued success, we remain

Very truly yours,

THE RAEDLEIN BASKET COMPANY.

CK/IF. Per Curt. H. Kindler.

Hoosier Beauty, as grown for two years at Richmond, has fully sustained the claims made by the Dorners; in fact, visitors who have noted its behavior through the winter with us have only words of praise for the variety. We have had most gratifying results from the 10,000 plants grown by our firm the present season. It has its faults, like every other variety, but its virtues offset any tendency to weakness of stem in the short growths. Unlike Hadley, it does not produce any blind wood. It is fine in color and is a wonderful keeper and shipper. I understand failure has attended the growing of this rose on some of the large places at Chicago, but further experience, I think, will put the variety in the front row of forcing reds. Too heavy feed and too much heat are the two things that have caused disappointment. It is a wonderful hot weather rose.

A few more petals, and a little more scarlet in its color scheme, would have put Crimson Queen in the front rank as a forcing variety.

Criticism of Brilliant.

One of the roses most criticised has been Killarney Brilliant. This rose, for some reason or other, did not move off in growth the first season after dissemination. Up to December we thought the variety totally lacking in vigor, but after that time and up to the present its growth and flowering qualities are all that could be desired. Certainly its fine color commends it to all, for it does not have the faults of its parent as regards color. I cheerfully commend Killarney Brilliant to all who want an improved Killarney.

Killarney Queen has had a meteoric existence and is grown in limited quantities only. Setting two or three plants together is urged, a few claiming that when so planted it gives a profitable cut.

There have been other sports of Killarney, viz.: Dark Red and the Double Killarney, but these two sorts have been dropped almost entirely.

Double White Killarney has a place and is considered by a great many growers to be a decided acquisition in a white forcing rose. It is certainly superior in summer to the old White Killarney in its keeping qualities.

Various Varieties.

There have been many entries in the red rose class, all trying to oust Richmond, but they are having a hard time of it. Milady, as grown by a few, would seem desirable, but it has its faults, and with me it has not behaved satisfactorily. W. J. Keimel and Adolph Poehlmann seem to be able to get results. I think Mr. Keimel was undecided some time ago whether or not to go on with the variety, but this gentleman finally said: "I will continue to grow it until I find a better red."

Prince E. C. d'Arenberg is unsatisfactory in many ways; it opens wide immediately on exposure to the heat of a room. It is a fine, strong grower, but the size of the bud does not measure up with its fine foliage and heavy stem.

Jonkheer J. L. Mock is a variety with an uncertain future. It is a most magnificent rose in the spring when there is sufficient sun heat to open its buds. I thought the vase of this rose staged at the New York show in 1914 by Robert Simpson was the handsomest vase of roses ever staged. As a spring and summer rose it should find a place, but it gives too many deformed buds in dark weather to be profitable.

Lady Alice Stanley is a beautiful two-toned pink rose and is esteemed by rose fanciers. This is a high-class variety and will always bring a good price in the retail shops. It has fine foliage and is free from any tendency to weakness of growth. We shall grow an increased quantity the coming season.

Lady Hillingdon has gone by the board, so to speak; a few are still growing it, but its tendency to fly open and its lack of petals have been the determining factors.

Francis Scott Key is liked by a few, but I predict its speedy eclipse as a forcing rose.

MODERN SALESMANSHIP.

The accompanying illustrations will give an idea how florists' supplies may be brought to the customer when the customer can not come to the warehouse. Every first-class commercial hotel now contains one or more rooms where a salesman who travels, with a surprising number of trunks, can display his stock. The view shows Frank J. Farney's display of the M. Rice Co. made-in-America products in a leading Detroit hostelry. Engagements are made with every reachable retailer in turn, engagements that may or may not be kept, but the salesman generally can be trusted to get him there in the end, exemplifying the old adage that when Mahomet can not come to the mountain, why, the mountain can go to Mahomet.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The American Rose Society is likely to have an extra large display at the National Flower Show in Philadelphia, March 25 to April 2. The prize list is growing. Since the publication of forty-two special prizes we have received prizes from the following: Malcolm Franklin, Philadelphia, $25; William L. Rock Flower Co., Kansas City, $10; Henry Penn, Boston, $10; Mann & Brown, Richmond, Va., $10.

George E. Campbell, Erdenheim, Pa., has been appointed manager of the rose exhibits.

A list of judges, men of the first class, has been named. Up to this writing the following have accepted: Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit; Frank H. Traendly, New York; Wm. J. Palmer, Buffalo; Eugene Dailledouze, Flatbush.

The rose garden, for which prizes of $500, $400 and $300 are offered, will make a most interesting display and is an assured successful feature of the exhibition.

The annual bulletin is now in press and it copies in a great measure the general character of the annual as issued by the National Rose Society of England. It will contain various illustrations and is edited by J. Horace McFarland Co., Harrisburg, Pa.

We have more paid subscriptions for the year to date than usual.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Asters.

For an early crop to be grown under glass or for the first outdoor crop, a sowing of asters can be made now. Queen of the Market is the best variety to use, and white, pink and lavender are the best selling colors, in this order. Early Wonder, which comes in a little ahead of Queen of the Market, is a poor, though early, sort. Asters succeed well in a cool, airy house, under conditions similar to those given chrysanthemums. Keep the seedlings growing right along and never let them get starved before planting them out, or they will be of no account.

Moonflowers.

The latter part of February is a suitable time to make a sowing of Ipomœa grandiflora alba, better known as the moonflower. Sow the seed in flats or pans in a warm, moist house. Pot off the seedlings when large enough to handle and give a shift before the time for spring sales arrives. Also, give each plant a stake to support the shoots. There is a steady demand for this popular night-blooming climber.

Heliotropes.

The heliotrope is one of the most deliciously scented of all bedding plants. It has the advantage of being a persistent bloomer and is valuable in vases, window-boxes and even in hanging-baskets as well as when bedded out. It is easily propagated and a rapid grower and if you will put in a generous batch of cuttings now, pot off and give a shift to 3½-inch or 4-inch pots later, you will have splendid plants in time for the bedding-out season. Of course, these plants will need some pinching to keep them bushy.

The call for standard heliotropes is good. These are fine to use either as pot plants in small tubs or bedded out with lower growing plants below them. Seedlings possess greater vigor than cuttings and make better standards. Their culture is simple. Rub off all side shoots and flowers and keep the stem well staked. A height of eighteen to thirty inches gives nice standards, but for large specimens to be finally placed in tubs, and which can be kept in good condition for a number of years if treated carefully, the stems should be thirty to thirty-six inches in the clear.

Gladioli.

It is time to plant a large batch of gladioli for Memorial day use. Bright-colored varieties like the old Brenchleyensis and Mrs. King sell particularly well at that time, as does that common but still popular pink variety, America. It would be well to plant some of that inexpensive white variety, Augusta, or any others of a salable color. It is impossible to get more than a fraction of the spikes just right for Memorial day. There always is, however, a tolerably good call for gladioli, both before and after that holiday. It is often difficult at this season to secure any rotted manure to add to the soil in the beds or benches, in which case some fine bone and pulverized animal manure can be used with advantage.

Antirrhinums.

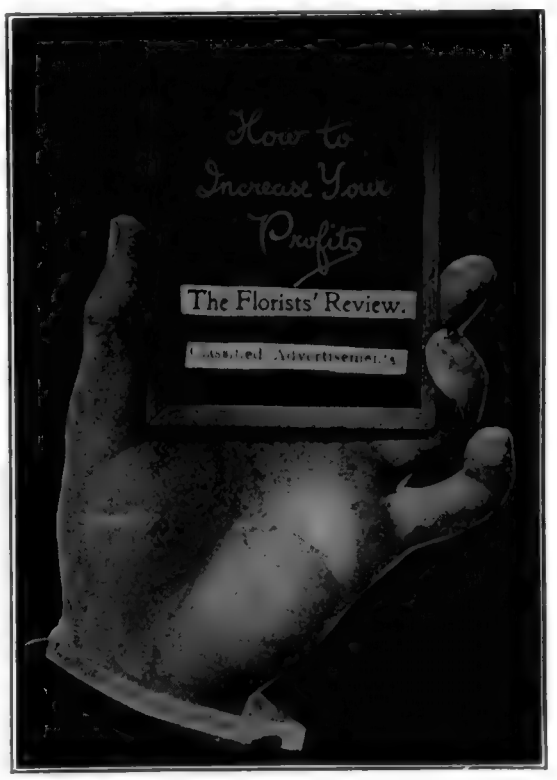
In order to have strong antirrhinums in 3½-inch or 4-inch pots for spring sales, sow the seed now. For bedding purposes the intermediate types are, on the whole, preferable to the tall and dwarf strains, pink, pure white, yellow and red being the favorite colors. You also can take cuttings from the greenhouse stock and get almost equally good plants at the time they are wanted, but it is well to remember that such plants possess much less vigor than seedlings and will be sure to develop more stem-rot in case we get such a wet spell as we had last July and August.



For a Memorial day crop the present is a suitable time to plant out snapdragons. They give an enormous quantity of bloom and few flowers are better adapted for bouquet work. It is not necessary to disbud the shoots severely for a Memorial day crop, for, as a rule, spikes of moderate size are preferable to the larger ones. Let your young plants run up to flower and at least show color before pinching back. The plants will then branch much more vigorously than if the pinching was done while the shoots were soft.

Plants which have been flowering since fall should now have a good topdressing of cow manure, or pulverized sheep manure. Mix the latter with an equal proportion of damp, screened loam before using it. This prevents the manure washing into ridges in the benches, as is often the case when the dry manure is applied alone. A night temperature of 48 to 50 degrees should not be exceeded for snapdragons.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Last week was not a satisfactory one for cut flower growers. Supplies were considerably in excess of demand, except in the case of roses, which continue off crop. Weather has been, on the whole, cold and decidedly wintry in character, with more snow than we have previously had. Valentine's day gave considerable of a fillip to the market, such flowers as violets, valley, sweet peas, cattleyas and roses being in the strongest demand, and the outlook is now slightly improved. Carnations are in heavy supply and there is an unusually large number of split flowers, Enchantress and Beacon being specially bad in this respect. Roses are not in heavy supply and there is no trouble in cleaning all up at excellent prices. Of Russell the supply at present is limited. Beauties also are scarce. Killarney Brilliant and Sunburst are coming off color with several growers. For the little Mlle. Cecile Brunner there is an excellent demand at $2 to $2.50 per hundred.

Violets had a great sale for Valentine's day and made as high as $1 for fancy singles, but have now dropped back again. Somehow violets are not so popular as they were a few years ago. Sweet peas are arriving in large quantities. For the Spencer type the demand is good. Bulbous flowers rule lower in price, owing to the heavily increased supply, but prices are much better than a year ago. Calendulas have been selling well, also yellow marguerites and pink snapdragons. Of lilies and callas the supply is in excess of the demand. Mignonette is now of fine quality, but moves slowly.

Forget-me-not is eagerly bought up and English primroses and cornflowers clean up well. Gardenias have been scarce and still sell at $6 per dozen. Cattleyas are in abundant supply and sell at from $3 to $5 per dozen, according to quality. For asparagus there is a decidedly better market.

Club Banquet.

The annual banquet of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club at the New American House February 9 was a successful and enjoyable one. There was an attendance of 300, including a number of guests. The tables were, as usual, beautifully decorated with orchids, roses, carnations, freesias, sweet peas and other cut flowers and pot plants. James Methven acted as toastmaster at the postprandial exercises. The speakers included William P. Rich, who responded for the Massachusetts Horticultural Society; Wilfrid Wheeler, secretary of the state board of agriculture, who spoke for that body; William N. Craig, who replied on behalf of the National Association of Gardeners; William C. Stickel, for the Boston Flower Exchange, and John McFarland, for the Boston Coöperative Flower Market. The concluding speaker was the new vice-president, William J. Patterson.

Entertainment was furnished by Miss Barbara Mayer, contralto; Miss Annette Luvick, contralto; C. E. Tasker, tenor; Gilmore Corbin, monologuist; Raymond Pugh, pianist. Following the speechmaking and entertainment, dancing was enjoyed until midnight. Donald J. Crighton was floor director, his aides being J. R. Ness, J. L. Russell, Edward Rose, Geo. W. Hamer, Luther Webb and Robert E. Montgomery.

Club's Carnation Night.

The annual carnation meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held February 15 in Horticultural hall. The roll call showed an attendance of 175

Club's Carnation Night.

The annual carnation meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held February 15 in Horticultural hall. The roll call showed an attendance of 175 and nine new members were added to the list. S. J. Goddard, of Framingham, spoke on the recent St. Louis carnation convention and of his visits to Chicago, Indianapolis, La Fayette and Richmond, Ind. Charles S. Strout, of Biddeford, Me., also gave an interesting talk on the carnation convention and said he believes the superior climate is the reason for the superior blooms and stems of carnations in the east. David S. Ward, of Queens, N. Y., spoke interestingly of the convention, with special reference to new varieties. William Downs then gave a talk on carnations from the private gardener's point of view, and Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass., spoke on the culture of the carnation, saying that he believes in early planting. R. W. Curtis, of Cornell University, and John H. Stalford, of Bar Harbor, also were speakers. The latter spoke enthusiastically of this year's sweet pea show, which will be held at Bar Harbor, and for which the club donated a $25 prize.

The exhibition was large and of high quality. The F. Dorner & Sons Co., of La Fayette, Ind., was awarded reports of merit for Rosalia, Good Cheer and Pink Sensation. This concern also showed seedlings grown by S. J. Goddard, who was given a report of merit for his crimson seedling No. 16-12. C. S. Strout staged Pocahontas, Matchless, Champion and Beacon. Nelson Seaver, of Dover, N. H., exhibited a good variegated seedling and Peter Fisher was awarded honorable mention for his exhibit, which included new seedlings and Alice. E. K. Farr, of Stoneham, Mass., showed Harry Fenn and Benora. Littlefield & Wyman, of North Abington, Mass., staged Miss Theo. The Cottage Gardens Co., of Queens, N. Y., won a report of merit for Crystal White and an honorable mention for Cottage Maid. Wadsworth & Co. were given an honorable mention for Samuel Wheeler, a good light pink. Eclipse mignonette was shown by the T. J. Grey Co., of Boston, and an entry of Superb cyclamen, exhibited by Borowski & Son, was awarded a cultural report of merit.

Florists' Bowling League.

Interest in the bowling league contest grows as the competition draws toward a close. The present leaders are by no means sure of their positions, as the other teams are now coming strong. The standing up to and including February 10 is as follows:

Team—	Won.	Lost.	Total Feb. 10
Galvin's	41	23	1248
Carbone's	40	24	1240
Flower Market	40	24	1250

Various Notes.

William J. Marshall, of Campello, is sending W. A. Hastings a splendid lot of Formosa lilies; also Murillo tulips, freesias, Von Sion narcissi and other bulbous flowers. He has a good white, fringed seedling carnation.

William H. Ward, of Montvale, is strong on forget-me-not at present and still has excellent freesias. Among carnations he has fine Rosette, Benora, Pink Delight, Beacon, White Wonder and Matchless. The last named with him proves much less free flowering than White Wonder.

J. Seaver, of Framingham, grows a fine assortment of carnations, including Pink Delight, Alice, Matchless, Benora, Fenn, Beacon, White Wonder and White Enchantress.

Robert Montgomery and wife, of Natick, made the trip to St. Louis for the carnation convention and thoroughly enjoyed it. They are planning to spend a few days in Philadelphia during the run of the National Flower Show.

James Wheeler, of Natick, has a salmon sport of Pink Delight which he considers desirable. His Pink Delight and Matchless are unusually fine. He is having a good call for rooted cuttings. Yellow marguerites here are more largely and better grown than elsewhere in this section.

E. J. Ahern, of Wellesley, the yellow marguerite specialist, is mourning the loss of his mother, who died last week.

Specially fine with the Budlong Rose Co. are Milady, Stanley, Francis Scott Key and Ophelia. A shipment of 500 of the latter in various grades February 12 sold for $75. They have a strong call for Mlle. Cecile Brunner.

Wax Bros. did a heavy business for Valentine's day, beating all previous records. Their window arrangements are always so attractive that they compel attention. They sell many thousands monthly of the pretty little Mlle. Cecile Brunner rose.

Visitors last week included Geo. E. Baldwin, Mamaroneck, N. Y., who reports his local orchid orders as the best ever; J. S. Hay, representing H. A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia; R. T. Beers, representing A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.; Geo. F. Struck, of Knight & Struck Co., New York; L. J. Reuter, Westerly, R. I., and C. Young, representing C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.

The firm of Cahill & Beasley, East Milton, has been dissolved by mutual consent. Mr. Beasley, having bought out his partner's interest, will operate the business alone. Pansies will continue to be a leading specialty.

Penn's Valentine's day windows were unusually attractive and the business transacted in violets and other flowers February 14 was enormous, far surpassing all previous records.

Andrew Christensen will plant Carnation Belle Washburn next season, being favorably impressed by its appearance. Ward, Pink Delight, Matchless, Benora and Beacon are his leaders at present.

The Sutermeister Estate, of Readville, is having a heavy call for bulbs in pans. In addition to tulips, hyacinths and narcissi, they sell many pans of grape hyacinths and crocus.

The Breck-Robinson Co. has purchased the noted gladiolus collection of C. H. Chamberlain, of Wellesley, and will specialize in this flower, with Mr. Chamberlain in charge of the department.

February has proved its title of snow month. The fall of snow February 12 and 13 was the deepest we have had for several years. Fortunately, it came without wind and, owing to the low temperature, was light. We have not yet heard of any injury to greenhouse establishments, but delays in flower shipments have been considerable.

W. N. C.

West Newbury, Mass.—Charles Morse and Herbert Smith have formed a partnership and started a plant and seed business.

Natick, Mass.—A large number of lights were blown in by the recent gale at the Charles Fullick greenhouses. Repairs had to be rushed to save the stock from exposure to the weather.

Bangor, Me.—Harold L. Cushman and Miss Mabel Worth, who for some time have been partners in a successful florists' business here, under the name of Cushman & Worth, recently decided to make their partnership perpetual and made a journey to Portland, where they were tied in wedlock at the Central Baptist church. The flower store will be continued under the same name.

Hartford, Conn.—A 20-ton brick chimney at the range of Eugene S. Drake was blown over during a recent wind storm and fell on three of the houses, shattering all the glass and damaging the heating apparatus. Mr. Drake had to use oil stoves and even bonfires to keep the stock from freezing until it could be transferred to other houses. The same storm smashed 480 feet of glass at the range of John Coombs.

Simsbury, Conn.—One of the S. T. Welden greenhouses a short time ago partly collapsed under the weight of snow.

Orono, Me.—Alex. Laurie has resigned his position at the head of the division of floriculture of the University of Maine, having been appointed horticulturist at the Missouri Botanical Garden, St. Louis. He will assume his new duties March 10.

Wakefield, Mass.—Edward Winkler has decided not to disseminate his new carnation, Morning Glow, although orders thus far taken will be filled. Mr. Winkler intends growing the variety heavily next year, as it has been and still is the most profitable sort for him.

New Bedford, Mass.—William Brown, of 191 Cedar street, recently appeared before the city council to press his claim for damages done to his greenhouse stock by fumes and gases from the city asphalt mixer, which is in close proximity to his range. Mr. Brown stated that the smoke entered his houses through the ventilators and ruined 5,000 geraniums and many asparagus plants. The council appointed a committee to visit the greenhouses and report at the next meeting.

OBITUARY

Charles L. Watrous.

Captain Charles L. Watrous, president of the Watrous Nursery Co., of Des Moines, Ia., died at his home in Des Moines on the morning of February 9. He was 77 years of age and until a short time previous to his death he enjoyed his usual good health. Death was caused by bronchial pneumonia, which the deceased had contracted four days previously.

Captain Watrous was born January 13, 1837, at Freetown, N. Y. He spent his childhood there and later attended the Homer Academy, at Homer, N. Y. He took up his college course at the University of Michigan, but at the outbreak of the Civil war he returned to his home and organized a company of infantry. He saw much service during the early stages of the war and at the second battle of Bull Run he was wounded and suffered internal injuries when a rifle ball struck and exploded his cartridge box. He was mustered out of service and was never physically able to reënter the war.

At the close of the war Captain Watrous went to Michigan and finished a course in law. He began practice at Winchester, Va., and in 1867 married Miss Sophia Glover, of Homer, N. Y. Failing health, however, due to his wounds, compelled him to seek an outdoor life. He embarked for Iowa and arrived at Des Moines in 1869. At Des Moines he started the nursery business which he headed at the time of his death. As a nurseryman Captain Watrous was widely known. For years he was president of the American Pomological Society, and until a few years ago he was one of the leaders in the American Association of Nurserymen. He was its president in 1886 and 1887.

Captain Watrous was a past commander of the Iowa Loyal Legion, a member of the G. A. R., Sons and Daughters of the Revolution, Society of the Colonial Wars and Mayflower Descendants. He is survived by four children, Mrs. James R. Angell and Philip B. Watrous, of Chicago; Edward L. Watrous, of El Paso, Tex.; Charles A. Watrous, of Des Moines. The mother died in 1914.

James M. Wickizer.

James M. Wickizer, formerly of Plymouth, Ind., died at his home in Hillsboro, Ore., February 2. The deceased moved to Oregon in 1911 and started a nursery and florists' business at Hillsboro. His death followed a stroke of heart failure January 10.

John Brown Weeks.

J. B. Weeks, a veteran grower of Chicago, died February 9 at his home, 4041 Patterson avenue, Irving Park, Chicago. Mr. Weeks was born July 23, 1832, in Chertsey, Surrey county, England, and immigrated to America when 17 years of age. He remained in the east for several years, but in 1852 he moved to Chicago, where for many years he was employed by A. Williams, George Wittbold and Edgar Sanders. A short time after the Chicago fire, in 1871, Mr. Weeks made his home in St. Louis, but returned to Chicago shortly afterwards. Subsequently he was employed by E. H. Hunt, James King and others. In 1869 he married Miss Flora M. Holton, who survives him, as well as three children, one grandchild and three brothers. The funeral took place from his late residence to Park Ridge, February 12.

The alarm clock went off at four o'clock in the morning.

"I fooled you that toime," said Mike with a grin, "for I wasn't aslape at all."

The florist fools himself who thinks there is any way of selling goods in the trade more effective than advertising in The Review. Also, it's the most inexpensive way in proportion to results.

"We are completely sold out and have had to send money back. The Review is, without doubt, the best advertising medium in the trade."—J. C. RENNISON CO., Sioux City, Ia.

Review readers are not asleep. Note this:

"Please tell us confidentially what you think of — —. Why doesn't he advertise in The Review if he is O. K.?"—MILLER FLORAL CO., Farmington, Utah.

The alarm clock rings in The Review office at 4 o'clock (p. m., not a. m.) every Tuesday. It is to let everybody know advertising forms close for that week's issue in just sixty minutes.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

San Francisco, Cal.—Federal Judge Van Fleet February 7 adjudged the Luther Burbank Co. bankrupt. A voluntary petition filed by the directors gives the liabilities as $73,372, and assets as $108,556.

Boston, Mass.—Stephen J. Quinn, of Brookline, filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States District court February 11. Liabilities are given as $43,324 and assets $4,447. The latter is made up of stock in trade, $2,000; book accounts, $1,980; real estate, $200. There are four secured and over 100 unsecured creditors. The secured creditors are Brookline Savings Bank, $12,000; Brookline Trust Co., $2,000; Louise R. White, $2,000, and F. J. Quinn, $4,000. Among the unsecured creditors are J. Hertz, New York, $2,000; N. F. McCarthy & Co., $1,297; Brookline Trust Co., $400; Brookline Savings Bank, $300, and F. T. Reuter, Brighton, $1,000.

ORPETS IN TROUBLE.

Will Orpet, 21 years of age, son of E. O. Orpet, of Lake Forest, Ill., is in jail during the investigation of the death of Marion Lambert, 18 years of age, daughter of Frank Lambert, gardener on the W. J. Kuppenheimer estate. Orpet, Sr., is superintendent on the estate of C. H. McCormick and is widely known in the gardening profession.

The Lambert girl was found dead in a woods at Lake Forest on the morning of February 10. The authorities claim to have established the fact that she died of poisoning with cyanide of potassium. The relations between the girl and young Orpet, a student at the University of Wisconsin, were such as to turn inquiry his way. The developments in the case have been a leading news feature in the Chicago dailies for a week.

For twenty years E. O. Orpet was in charge of the E. V. R. Thayer estate at South Lancaster, Mass., where he established so good a reputation that when Cyrus H. McCormick was looking for a man to develop a new estate at Lake Forest he could find no one with better qualifications. He made Mr. Orpet offers which resulted in his moving west with his family July 1, 1910. The McCormick property adjoins that of Kuppenheimer, where Frank Lambert has been employed for many years.

Richmond, Ind.—William H. Gardener, formerly manager of the P. J. Olinger greenhouses at Newcastle, now is proprietor of the Knopf Floral Co. here, making a specialty of carnations. In addition to growing cut flowers for wholesale markets, he plans to develop a business in rooted cuttings.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1916: President, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; vice-president, R. C. Kerr, Houston, Tex.; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Thirty-second annual convention, Houston, Texas, August 15 to 18, 1916.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

MANY a wholesaler has noted that the man who buys with a nod greets the collector with a shake of the head.

GREEN dye is reported scarce. We should worry! If it proves non est comeatable there still will be enough to supply our personal requirements in the way of disfigured carnations. How about you?

"IT'S in the funeral work we make our money." How often have you heard it said? There are a good many retailers who, if they would list the material they use in each design, might modify their ideas a bit.

THE annual report of the S. A. F. becomes more voluminous each year. The book for 1915, being sent out this week by Secretary Young, contains 364 pages. It carries an immense amount of matter for record and reference.

IF your collections are not satisfactory, question yourself about your system. Every florist always will have a few tough nuts to crack, no matter how carefully he gives credit, but in general payments now are more prompt than normal. It simply needs a system for the purpose to get the money.

CONDITIONS in the wholesale cut flower markets the last two months have operated to the special advantage of the grower whose stock is of indifferent quality. Short roses, split carnations and low grade flowers in general have brought prices that were, quality considered, better than what has been obtained for the best stock.

THE S. A. F. board of directors will hold its annual meeting at Philadelphia during the last week in March.

FREESIA, in the days of refracta alba one of the least considered flowers, has come to be classed among the aristocrats, principally used for corsage bouquets, table work and fine baskets.

THE Worcester County Horticultural Society has issued a schedule of the premiums for its exhibitions during 1916. Copies may be obtained by addressing Herbert R. Kenney, secretary, Horticultural hall, Worcester, Mass.

THE Philadelphia newspapers certainly are giving the National Flower Show publicity wholly without precedent. Other flower shows have had good local advertising, but never anything like what the Philadelphia show is getting.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

THREE YEARS.

Davis, Guy E., Ypsilanti, Mich.

TWO YEARS.

Schrader, W., Johnstown, Pa.
Casey Florist Co., Melrose, Mass.
Thalmann, M. F., Wheeling, W. Va.
Keller, John A., Lexington, Ky.
Shaw, David W., Westerly, R. I.
Potomkin, H. J., Muncie, Ind.
Nielson, V. A., Davenport, Ia.
Lewis, A. H., Richardson Park, Del.
Juenemann, H. E., Bellingham, Wash.
Romstedt, B., Ottawa, Kan.
Mierisch, Max, Glenview, Ill.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns are sent.

AGAIN, CAN YOU BEAT IT?

The ease with which surplus plant stock is converted into cash is one of the remarkable features of the business as it stands today. Whatever may be the case with cut flower markets, production of plants, and particularly of plants for growing on, has by no means overtaken the demand. The evidence:

Please cut out the dracæna ad, as I am completely sold out. The result from the ad in The Review far exceeded my expectations.—James Frost, Greenville, O., January 31, 1916.

Please discontinue my ads, as I am sold out. Very good work by The Review, thank you.—Peter Morgen, Huntingburg, Ind., February 2, 1916.

Any man who has anything to sell and does not put an ad in The Review misses the best business in the business. The little geranium ad we put in for one issue kept us up nights sending money back after the stock was all sold.—Harry W. Blake, Mgr. Pinehurst Garden Co., Pleasant Hill, Mo., February 4, 1916.

When you hear a man complaining of the cost of advertising you can be pretty sure he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

ADVERTISING THE GREENHOUSE.

One of the natural tendencies of the times is for the greenhouse man who retails to resort to the use of printers' ink to increase his sales. The old custom of waiting for the people to come no longer suffices; there are too many selling flowers. Not only is much newspaper space now being used to call attention to greenhouses, but the greenhouse owner prints a catalogue that he scatters through the town. It shows many cuts and quotes prices. The only trouble with such a catalogue is that it is a bit expensive to get out a good job, that it is more or less short-lived and that it cannot be repeated except at infrequent intervals.

SPRING IS NEAR.

The season of short supplies in cut flower markets has been of unusually great duration this year, but the sun has become perceptibly stronger and no further scarcity, even of roses, is to be anticipated. Spring is near. As a rimer, not fond of February, put it:

Thirteen more days, ice-incrusted;
Then old Winter's backbone's busted.

FLOWER SHOW LECTURES.

Although one frequently finds florists in the audiences at flower show lectures, these lectures are designed to foster public interest in gardening; they should not be, and usually are not, technical or commercial. That the public is eager for gardening talks is shown by the large audiences that nearly always greet the lectures.

At the National Flower Show in Philadelphia it is planned to take full advantage of the public interest in gardening instruction, and the following unusually elaborate program has been arranged:

Saturday evening, March 25, Willis N. Rudd, of Chicago, will lecture on "Home Grounds."

Monday evening, March 27, Prof. E. A. White, of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., will lecture on "What Science Has Done for Floriculture."

Tuesday evening, March 28, Robert Pyle, of West Grove, Pa., will lecture on "Roses," illustrated with slides from Mr. Pyle's own photographs.

Wednesday evening, March 29, J. Horace McFarland, president of the American Civic Association, will lecture on "Civics for Home and Municipality."

Thursday evening, March 30, J. Otto Thilow, of Philadelphia, who is chairman of the lecture committee, will give a lecture under the auspices of the Garden Clubs of America, on "Flowers From Snow to Snow."

Friday evening, March 31, Frank N. Meyer, of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, will lecture on "Agricultural Exploration in China."

Saturday evening, April 1, Arthur Cowee, of Berlin, N. Y., will lecture on "Gladioli."

The afternoon lectures, for which the dates have not yet been fixed, will embrace a lecture on "Rock Gardens," by Richard Rothe; Miss Caro Miller will give a lecture on "Philadelphia School Gardens"; E. I. Wilde, of State College, Pa., will lecture on "Bulbs for Summer Bloom." There will be a lecture on "Dahlias," lecturer not yet announced. Max Schling, of New York, will demonstrate the proper use of cut flowers, their arrangement and color combination.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

There has been no radical change in Chicago market conditions during the last week in respect of supply. Demand, however, has been puzzling. To begin with, the shipping demand for St. Valentine's day was satisfactorily heavy and quite continuous. Local demand, on the other hand, was fairly good up to February 13. Then it took a slump from which it failed utterly to recover. Some of the wholesalers attribute this to the heavy snow storm that persisted the entire day of February 13 and to the fact that St. Valentine's day fell on Monday, a day that has never been popular as a flower day in Chicago. Be that as it may, the day fell far short of the expectations of most of the local retailers.

Although a few Beauties still reach the market, the quality is disappointing, and as a consequence many wholesalers are recommending the use of Russell in their stead. The supply of other roses in slightly easier, but not enough

Here is a fine supply of Fancy Carnations

BEING a wide-awake buyer, you no doubt noted that at the St. Louis Carnation Convention our growers took most of the premiums that did not go east. There seem to be a lot of good growers "down east" (where middle-western retailers can't get at the stock), but NOTHING IN THIS SECTION TO COMPARE WITH THE STOCK WE HANDLE. Most buyers whose stock must make a journey to them have found by experience it never pays to buy poorly grown Carnations—that it pays to pay for quality. But Amling's prices never are higher than others ask if they have stock of equal grade.

A large cut of Carnations now on.

Roses

You can get of us as fine roses as are to be had anywhere in this country. Note list of varieties.

Bulb Stock

We handle more bulbous flowers than any other wholesale house in this part of the country. Of course the quality is good.

SPECIAL THIS WEEK:

Rainbow Freesia, ASSORTED COLORS $3.00 per 100

Beauties

As good as the market affords; a large supply.

Violets

so to make any marked difference in the market. The Valentine's day demand was unusually strong for Milady, Richmond, Ophelia and Cecile Brunner, but a large part of it was doomed to disappointment. Dark weather has continued through the greater part of the week, and this has, as a matter of course, held back the crops.

No difficulty is experienced in disposing of all fancy and good grade carnations. The large number of splits, however, that find no ready sale are well calculated to give the impression that there is a superabundance of carnations. The red varieties enjoyed a particularly strong demand for the holiday. There is no end of bulbous stock on the market, but it moves well considering its large volume. Tulips are selling well, especially the pinks. Jonquils are clearing, and this in spite of the fact that the heavy influx from the south is on. Daffodils are clearing, but not rapidly. So, too, are Paper Whites. Freesia is a free seller and does not tarry long on the tables. Sweet peas have lost none of their popularity. Valley continues to focus attention on itself by flirting with the extreme short side of the market. There has been no great effort to secure lilies, although the supply is none too large. Snapdragons, mignonette, pansies and calendulas are moving in a satisfactory manner. The holiday demand for violets was unusually large in some quarters, but low prices prevailed. Cattleyas are still scarce.

Sprengeri seems to have acquired the short habit, but plumosus is again easy. Greens in general are moving, but not with any disturbing rapidity. Boxwood is in larger supply than usual at this date and is not selling so fast as in former years.

Was It Lack of Advertising?

A few of the Chicago retailers had fine business for St. Valentine's day, but the rank and file report it by no means up to last year. What is the reason?

Last year, of course, February 14 was Sunday, which is a better day than Monday for selling gift flowers. But last year, there being plenty of low priced stock in the market, half a dozen downtown retailers used large spaces in the best daily February 12. Indeed, so strong was the combined showing that the most casual reader could not escape the impression that flowers are the proper valentine. It no doubt worked great good for those who did not adver-

The House of Quality Plus Service Has Stood the Test of Thirty Years

Stop! Consider this, the House of Kennicott, staunch as steel, has stood the wear and tear of over thirty years of vigorous service. There are many instances in which this sturdy servant is satisfying the demands of a third generation of buyers.

Why? Why do they stick?

There must be a reason for intelligent, tight-fisted Florists to continue to buy from the same House year after year, even generation after generation.

Just now is an exceptionally good time to put us to the test. Especially in Carnations and Freesia, we can furnish stock of the most satisfying quality in unlimited quantities.

Shoot in an order, we'll do the rest.

tise as well as for the progressive ones who bought and so well filled the space. Recently stock has been so high the retailers have done little advertising; only two or three used small spaces for St. Valentine's.

Was it for the lack of publicity that sales fell off?

Various Notes.

The E. C. Amling Co. kept its store open all day Sunday, February 13, and the management states it was 4 p. m. before there was a breathing spell. The sales of violets in the four days ending Sunday are said to have been 678,000. A novelty was to see acacia from the Pacific coast on one table and from the Atlantic coast on an adjoining table, the latter of course flowered under glass. Both grades are said to have sold well for Valentine's day.

Charles Erne went to Michael Reese hospital February 13 and was operated on next day for rupture of long standing. He is getting along splendidly. In the meantime Fred Klingel has two new assistants, Frank Konczal on the floor and Albert Hennig in the office. Mr. Konczal has been with C. W. McKellar.

It is announced that Peter Reinberg will be a delegate to the Democratic national convention at St. Louis in June, Word comes from Anton Then, who recently went to Magnolia Springs, Ala., for his health, that he has much improved since reaching the southland. Mr. Then is accompanied by his wife.

Health and strength have been so far recovered by John Poehlmann that he was able to enjoy an automobile ride in the heavy snow storm of February 13. He is now able tc take short walks in the neighborhood of his home and hopes to be in his office in a week or ten days. August and Adolph Poehlmann have recovered from their cases of grip.

During the recent visit of J. A. Evans, he took orders from Bassett & Washburn for twenty-four Challenge ventilating machines, from L. A. Budlong Co. for forty-eight machines, and from George Weiland for fifteen machines, with several smaller orders. Mr. Evans comments that it looks like a large building season in the Chicago market.

Wait until you see H. N. Bruns go by in his new car, a Packard twin six. It is said he ordered it the day after he got word the British government had given its permission for the shipment of his 3,000,000 Hamburg valley pips via Rotterdam.

William Graham, the new manager of the Fleischman Floral Co., has adopted the policy of doing his own buying on the market. He pins his faith on the willingness of the public to pay for quality, and the other retailers have given him a cordial welcome.

That the giganteum lily has only just begun to be a general purpose flower and that the next five years will see a wonderful increase in its use is the belief of W. G. Gaddis, of Deerfield. Mr. Gaddis has four houses and uses practically all his space for lilies. Where a few years ago the effort was to flower the lilies all for one day, Mr. Gaddis aims to cut every day in the year. He starts on the average 1,000 bulbs per week.

Two carloads of greenhouse building material have been unloaded at Greggs, Ill., by the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co. This is the first step toward the construction of ten new houses, each 28x300 feet, for Bassett & Washburn. Work will begin as soon as weather permits. According to C. L. Washburn, all the Beauty plants will be moved into the new houses when they are completed. There are now growing in the houses at Greggs some 54,000 Beauty plants. When the removal takes place the number will be reduced to about 35,000. A most interesting fact was brought out in connection with this reduction. O. P. Bassett was the first man to grow American Beauties on a large scale in the west. Since then, for twenty-seven years, Beauties have been growing on the benches in the Hinsdale greenhouses. Mr. Washburn says when they first started with this variety, 24 to 28-inch stems were considered long. Now 60-inch stems cause no comment. Since the advent of the newer varieties, however, he says the demand for Beauties has been slowly receding. His firm is acknowledging this waning of its popularity by reducing the space devoted to it by fully one-third.

The contract for four new greenhouses, 36x300 feet, has been let by Daut Bros., Decatur, Ill., to the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co. They will be all steel construction, equipped with a vacuum heating system, two standard return boilers of 150 horsepower each, a radial brick chimney 4½x100 feet, a fireproof packing and pump room and a manure watering system. The entire cost is $36,000. These houses will be devoted to the growing of carnations and roses.

Word comes from California that W. W. Barnard, of the W. W. Barnard Co., is enjoying long drives in the country and is breathing in health with the passing of each day. Arnold Ringier, after a brief sojourn in Kentucky, where he attended the convention of the National Canners' Association at Louisville, February 7 to 11, is again in his office.

Robert R. Brenton, publicity man for the flower show last fall and advertising manager for Kennicott Bros. Co., is now handling an advertising cam-

The Chicago market conditions are much more interesting to Otto Frese than law suits against the street car company for personal injuries. His only solace is that he can snatch a few minutes from jury service each day to spend at his desk.

There are few seasons at which W. H. Amling, at Maywood, is not cutting some crop of superlative quality. In the autumn it is mums; now it is Purity freesia; a little later it will be sweet peas planted from pots to follow the mums and only waiting for a little sun to give a splendid pick.

True to promise, Henry M. Hirsch opened his new store at 37 East Van Buren street, February 12, and was fully repaid for his diligence.

Excellent success has attended the efforts of A. Eriksson, manager of A. H. Schneider's greenhouses in Oak Park. His pot plants are of quality not easy to beat.

Stock is becoming more plentiful and prices are going down, although there has been no sudden decline as in some past instances.

Roses still are scarce, especially Ward and Ophelia. The shorter grades are scarce owing to the heavy demand and there is small chance of a surplus for some time to come. Carnations are plentiful and prices on this stock showed more decline than on any other

THE THIRD EDITION

OF THE

Album of Designs

(A Book Every Retailer Needs)

THE original Album of Designs was published in response to many requests from florists who felt the need for an up-to-date book that could be used in taking orders for Funeral Designs, Wedding Decorations and Bouquets, Table Decorations and all cut flower work where it was not practicable to show the customer the finished article as it would be when ready for use. With the publication of this album it became possible to show the finished work in beautifully printed pictures. The first edition sold like hot cakes, and a second edition went quickly. Now a third edition is off the press. Everything is in it—all the standard designs and many new and heretofore unpublished pieces.

class of stock. The stock is slowly improving and the cut is being moved with little difficulty at fair prices. Violets and sweet peas were in great demand for St. Valentine's day and brought good prices. Sweet peas were not equal to the demand and orders were turned down. There was a good percentage of singles in the violet cut and these naturally took precedence over the doubles. Orchids cleaned up at high prices and short roses were not to be had at the finish.

Valley remains scarce and the quality is poor. There is no trouble to dispose of the entire cut, regardless of quality, and the prices are fair. Bulbous stock is plentiful and is selling well. The shortage of roses is responsible for this to some extent and, besides, the quality of the stock is excellent.

Various Notes.

A. Schiller is reported on the road to recovery, but it will be some time before he will be able to resume his work. Walter Holton left the hospital recently and has made one or two visits to the store. He still is weak and it will be about three weeks before he will be able to resume his duties.

A committee of the Milwaukee Florists' Club, composed of William R. Schroeder, Nic Zweifel, A. Leidiger, H. V. Hunkel, C. C. Pollworth and E. Oestreicher, held a conference February 11 with Mr. Cranfield, representing the state fair board. The discussion was mainly on the advisability of increasing the space devoted to floricultural exhibits at the annual state fair. The Florists' Club has tentatively revised the premium list, and while it has not been favorably passed on as yet, strong hopes are entertained in this direction. Next year's display at the state fair undoubtedly will surpass all previous exhibits and will open a gate for banner showings in the years to come. H. J. S.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Zero weather had a chilling effect on St. Valentine's day business. There was a fairly good demand, but everybody agrees that it was not so strong as it would have been with favorable weather on Lincoln's birthday and the two days following. While the weather was unfavorable for production—rain, heavy clouds, snow and extreme cold are hardly just the thing—it was even more unfavorable for shopping. It requires genuine enthusiasm to select a suitable floral offering for the dearest girl in the world when you have wet, cold feet, come a cropper or get caught in a car tie-up; any one is deterring, all three are disheartening. So you see that it is not so remarkable that Valentine's day did not exceed last year's in activity; it was, in fact, a little disappointing. Still, business has been fair for the week ending February 16.

Roses and valley have been quite scarce. Daffodils and tulips have been overplentiful. There has been a curious color condition in the market; white roses have been scarce and in active demand, while white carnations have been plentiful with many wholesalers and extremely hard to sell. The explanation given is that there are many cases where white carnations are of no use to the buyer who wants white roses; so they drag badly. Sweet peas have been in active demand; bud-dropping has again interfered seriously with production, owing, of course, to the unfavorable weather and, perhaps, to undue pushing. Easter lilies have declined a little in the face of heavy receipts; on the lower level of prices they sell better.

There are no other special features to the market excepting that the violet was not the favorite of old as Cupid's messenger. A few retailers talked violets and bought them freely at lower prices than had been expected, but most of them preferred red roses or sweet peas or some novelty that spoke of individuality more strongly than our old friend the violet. Greens are becoming more plentiful. Heavy shipments of southern asparagus, added to the new growth in the local greenhouses, afford an ample supply.

For the Honor of the City.

It is generally conceded by those who are in a position to know that the great National Flower Show to be held here next month will surpass any of its kind ever seen in this country. There is just one possible exception that can be taken to the truth of this statement. It lies in the exhibits of the retail florists. Every branch of our profession is certain of worthy representation save that one. Yet without the earnest coöperation of the retail florists the show cannot be the success that it ought to be. It matters little whether a retail florist exhibits in the competitive or in the non-competitive classes; the point is that he should exhibit something worthy of his reputation. These exhibits of the retail florists are one of the most attractive, if not the most attractive, of all the varied displays that make a modern show. For the honor of our profession, for the honor of our fair city, Philadelphia asks her florists to display their skill in Convention hall, at Broad and Allegheny avenues, March 25 to April 2.

Six concerns and individuals have responded. They are J. J. Habermehl's Sons, the London Flower Shop, Harry S. Betz, John C. Gracey, Charles H. Grakelow and John Kuhn.

Philadelphia appeals to the brilliant H. H. B. to make an exception in her favor by displaying his rare skill.

Philadelphia appeals to Alfred Bartlett Cartledge and to Joseph Liddon Pennock to uphold the honor of Pennock Bros. as worthily as of old.

Philadelphia appeals to Charles Fox, Sr., to reënter the lists just to show the boys how charmingly flowers were arranged years ago, and to Charles Henry Fox to show how they are combined today.

Philadelphia appeals to George Craig to furnish an example of that simple elegance that gives pleasure to refined taste.

Philadelphia appeals to Ludwig P. Vollers to get up one of those stunning floral combinations that please the smart set.

Philadelphia appeals to M. J. Callahan to show why it is unnecessary for any West Philadelphia lover to cross the Schuylkill river.

Philadelphia appeals to William Berger's Sons to uphold the fame won by their father at the shows in the good old days.

Philadelphia appeals to J. Max Nitzschke to show what a floral artist can do with simple material.

Philadelphia appeals to Victor I. Ridenour to show why so many people of critical tastes are attracted to Thirty-third and Dauphin streets.

Philadelphia appeals to Charles B. Stahl to give an example of those tasteful decorations that are growing in popularity.

Philadelphia appeals to Frank M. Ross to show how flowers are made irresistible to the masses whether they will or no.

Philadelphia appeals to Frank M. Alter, to Arthur H. Lanser and to all her florists who boast a spark of civic pride, to make her show next month the crowning glory that it should be.

nished the following report of a more than usual coal situation:

The demand for anthracite coal is strong and full circular prices are in effect. Steam sizes of anthracite coal are scarce and premium prices are being paid for them. The premiums, however, at this time are not so large as those which prevailed about ten days to two weeks ago.

There is a serious shortage of cars, the distribution not being over sixty per cent, which is an unusual condition in the anthracite field. To many markets it is practically impossible to make deliveries, owing to embargoes placed by the railroads. Movement of cars to final destinations is slow, because of the congested conditions that prevail on all railroads. Many railroads will not permit their cars to go off their own or allied lines; in other words, will not permit them to go to foreign roads.

Bituminous coal is strong in price and slow in movement, the car supply being wretched, and the same conditions that exist in the anthracite field apply. Prices are not nearly so high as they were, but still strong.

Negotiations now are on between the operators' and miners' representatives relative to the situation after April 1, for at that time the present agreements with the mine workers in the anthracite and bituminous fields expire, and unless negotiations are brought to a satisfactory conclusion to both parties there is likely to be a suspension of mining April 1.

Various Notes.

A small fire occurred in one of the Market street boiler rooms at the Robert Craig Co. place on the morning of February 14. It was zero weather and the woodwork close to the smokestack started the fire about 6 o'clock, when the night firemen were being relieved by the day firemen. Fortunately, the blaze was extinguished and the loss trifling.

It is with deep regret that Philadelphians will learn of the death of Mrs. M. C. Dunn, wife of the well known florist of 614 Chestnut street, whose kindly greeting welcomed one and all.

conditions encountered on his recent trip.

The workers for the National Flower Show in this city saw an opportunity to do a kind deed and help the show when the Reverend William A. Sunday spoke in Convention hall February 14. Samuel S. Pennock selected some suitable material from the Pennock-Meehan stock. Ludwig P. Vollers made up a fine bouquet; also a basket for Mrs. Sunday. Charles H. Grakelow tastefully decorated the pulpit, and W. F. Therkildson had show posters put up in the lobby so that thousands and thousands of people knew that the National Flower Show committee had welcomed the evangelist and his wife, and that the show itself was coming right there to that spot six weeks later.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Valentine's day a few years ago was called "Little Christmas" by the flower growers in this section, but today it has outgrown that name and can take its place with the other big days of the year. Corsage flowers of all kinds, of course, were the leaders, including violets, sweet peas, valley, myosotis, orchids, Ward roses, etc. Plants, such as small and medium azaleas, primulas, pans of daffodils, hyacinths and tulips, sold better than ever before. Cut stock of roses, carnations, tulips, daffodils, etc., sold well, but not with the rush that corsages and small plants enjoyed.

Much was due to the advertising done by the Florists' Club. Valentine's day differs from the other big flower days in that the buying is done in one or two days, and that the weather must be favorable for the wearing of corsages. In the face of the zero weather of the last four days the amount of business done was remarkable. Some store men stocked up with a full line of plants, giving their stores the appearance of Easter week, and they cleaned up. A large quantity of bulbous stock was on the market.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, Wednesday, February 9, and was well attended. Thomas Lucas was elected to active membership. An offer was received from one of our honorary members of a silver cup for ten varieties of gladioli, six spikes to each, to be competed for at the dahlia show, which will be held in October. The competitive exhibits of the evening called for carnations, and James Gladstone, Harry Goodband and George Gilder were appointed judges. Their report showed that Robert Jones had made a clean sweep in all three classes, being awarded first for twelve white, with Matchless; first for twelve pink, with Philadelphia; first for twelve of any other color, with Princess Dagmar.

essay on "Botany, and Its Use to Gardeners in Their Work." The essay assigned to us for this month by the National Association of Gardeners was "Young Gardeners and Their Opportunities in America," by Henry Gibson, of New York, who, incidentally, is a member of this society. Both essays were most ably written. Robert Jones announced that he would give a prize of $5 for the best twelve carnations exhibited at our next meeting.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh recently has had all the different kinds of weather on the calendar, but the worst was the rain all day Saturday, February 12. Sunday morning there were six inches of snow and next morning the temperature was 6 degrees below zero. Stock is plentiful enough, except roses; there is not enough sunshine to bring them along. Bulbous stock, however, is becoming a drug. Still, the wholesale houses are cleaning up every day and they report trade as good.

Various Notes.

The retail storemen certainly "did themselves proud" for St. Valentine's day, in the way of window decorations. Mrs. E. A. Williams showed valentine boxes arranged in so striking a way that each box was a picture. They were not cheap, but were beautiful.

The A. W. Smith Co. displayed corsage bouquets in many styles, including the miniature colonial styles of corsages; also vases of orchids.

The Blind Floral Co. had valentine boxes and small baskets, arranged in a most attractive way.

R. J. Daschbach displayed strikingly beautiful basket arrangements.

Randolph & McClements have an effective way of using plant arrangements, as well as cut flowers, for valentines, and they certainly had a busy time.

G. P. Weaklen & Co. find the many styles of tumbler baskets, when properly arranged, to be greatly in demand for St. Valentine's day, as well as heart boxes, to carry the many ideas in corsages.

Miss E. B. Maxwell's force had to work to the limit to keep up with the demand for love tokens.

All of these people had handsome windows, and in each case the window trimmer exhibited real skill in featuring some one thing, rather than in attempting to show samples of the entire stock.

Wm. M. Turner had one of the handsomest windows in the city and he says trade was as good as the window.

think he wants to paint the town—with Greenhouse White. Clarke.

The Horticultural Society of Western Pennsylvania has decided to change its headquarters from the East Liberty branch of Carnegie library to the downtown Colonial hotel, owing to the latter being more convenient for the Sewickley and Sewickley Heights members. Carnation night was observed by the organization February 8, and the January session was devoted to roses. There was a fine exhibition of the flowers, which included a collection of about twenty-five varieties from Charles H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., and the same number from A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, Conn. In connection with the exhibition, there was a discussion among those present, who generally conceded that the cloudy winter days of Pittsburgh practically preclude successful greenhouse rose culture. However, the last year was decidedly less smoky than any season in the local history of the steel and iron industries, and several men are contemplating resuming this branch of the work with renewed energy. At the April meeting of the society there will be a lecture by Mr. McCollum, of the Pierson U-Bar Co., on "Small Greenhouses and What to Grow in Them."

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

Last week saw plenty of business and during the last three days orders to be delivered Valentine's day piled up almost like advance orders for Christmas. There had been good advertising emphasizing the appropriateness of flowers as valentines. Surely everyone should be pleased with the results. Everything of value was sold by noon except a few plants, in the stores I had the opportunity to visit. This is as it should be. There is no day when flowers and the sentiment of the occasion seem to harmonize so well as on the day dedicated to lovers. But, alas, the cut of roses was far too small to meet the requirements, and carnations do not appeal to many people as the proper flower at this time. They were sold out completely merely because there was little else left. Violets and valley were plentiful, and as they were is more in demand than anything else they sold out early.

There were a few daffodils from outdoors, but forced stock was in good supply. One of the largest growers assured me that all of his stock was forced from bulbs of his own growing, they having been lifted in time to force. Pot plants did not sell so well as heart-shaped boxes of cut flowers, but it was surprising how large the demand for them was.

Various Notes.

At the Joy Floral Co. store I saw two large files of advance Valentine's day orders, and Monday noon the extra force of clerks seemed as busy as at Christmas. Tom Joy paused long enough to say: "Tell them that we have sold everything fit to sell."

Geny Bros. had one of the largest and best azaleas in their window last week, with filled heart-shaped boxes flanking it on either side. They cut more than 30,000 violets for Valentine's day and were fortunate enough to have plenty of roses.

McIntyre Bros. had a large and good line of pot plants for the day and their cut of sweet peas was heavy. Of course, they had all of the roses and carnations they needed. They always see to that.

Haury & Sons had good offerings of primulas and cyclamens in variety, in addition to the regular line of cut flowers.

The Market.

The supply of stock is larger than at the last writing, but it is not sufficient for present needs. Roses are more plentiful but high in price; consequently there is little demand for them. American Beauties still are scarce, but are more plentiful than they have been. Although red flowers have not had a large demand, there was a heavy call for them Saturday for Valentine's day. The supply of carnations has not increased enough to make a decided difference. Good sweet peas now are being received and the supply is rounding into better shape, but the stems are only ordinary. Jonquils and daffodils are plentiful and of good quality. Some of the finest tulips and hyacinths that ever came to the city were seen last week. Bulbous stock of all kinds now is plentiful, but there is a shortage in other lines of cut flowers that is only relieved by blooming plants. Violets, snapdragon and Easter lilies are all in demand and do not remain on the market long. The market is well cleaned up each evening.

Various Notes.

W. J. Barnes has purchased a Studebaker delivery car. The car was on exhibition at the automobile show with his name on the side. If it was viewed by 100,000 persons, the estimated attendance, it surely was a good advertisement for Mr. Barnes.

Samuel Murray had an attractive Valentine's day window display last week, consisting of a large red immortelle heart surrounded and set off by cut flowers, plants, baskets, etc.

More Profit In Flowers

The sooner your cut flowers are marketed the larger your profits. The display which appeals will sell them. Every florist's experience confirms this statement.

If it were possible for you to compare the value of a refrigerator that really preserved with one that wasted stock and ice you would be astonished at the difference in dollars and cents during the year. The poor refrigerator which may have cost less at the start would show up mighty expensive in the end. Be sure—safe—get a

McCray Florists' Refrigerator

McCray construction is based on the most advanced scientific principles for proper refrigeration and perfect preservation.

Your delicate stock is kept at an even temperature of exactly the right degree where freshly chilled air is constantly circulating.

McCray Florist Refrigerators have beautiful plate glass doors and sides which permit an inviting and attractive display of the flowers. The compartments are of different dimensions to accommodate the various lengths of stems.

The outside woodwork may be had in any finish to conform with your store's interior decoration and arrangement. The linings may be secured in either bevel plate mirror or white enamel and are very easy to clean.

The florist business carries enough hazard without handicapping your success with an inadequate refrigerator. Why not investigate a McCray right now and get the whole McCray story.

The Market.

Another snow storm spoiled to some extent the anticipated strength of the week-end market and left the wholesalers well supplied with everything but roses for the Valentine's day demand. Many of the retailers featured this occasion with elaborately and appropriately decorated windows.

American Beauties are scarce and high, 75 cents each being the price of the comparatively few selects. The best Hadley roses are held at 50 cents each. The fancy stock of all the novelties holds firm, the low grades also being freely taken at the prevailing quotations. Carnations are abundant, but only the finest novelties sell above $25 per thousand. The general quotation on these February 12 was $20. A few of the new kinds sold at $3 per hundred. Large shipments are promised for this week.

Valley rose to $4 per hundred February 12—a temporary advance, it is generally conceded. Longiflorum lilies sold at 10 cents each for the selects, the tendency of price being downward. There was a slight advance in orchids, and a recession is not looked for. Orchids have had a sad time of it for many weeks, but "it's a long lane that has no turning." Gardenias hold wonderfully well and for first-class flowers high prices prevail. Violets are disappointing and are cheapened by the men of the streets. Some of the stock is superb, but little sold over 25 cents per hundred. Callas are far down for the low grades and daffodils and narcissi have dropped to 25 cents or less per bunch. There is a tremendous oversupply of tulips, only the finest selling at fair prices, ninety per cent of the arrivals being at the mercy of the large buyers. There is some fine freesia, a new, creamy white of rare beauty being especially conspicuous. Mignonette, sweet peas, lilac and daisies arrive daily in sufficient numbers for all demands. Acacia is beautiful and plentiful.

Club Meeting.

Notwithstanding the severe cold wave, the attendance at the club meeting February 14 was up to the average. President Weston was in the chair.

A. L. Miller reported great expectations as to New York day at the National Flower Show, March 28. Secretary Young announced the outlook rosy for the New York show. A. Herrington, the manager, announced a prospective shortage of space.

William D. Duphrese was elected to membership and H. W. Thomas, D. C. Arnold, Charles P. Dudley and William Thurston were proposed.

The secretary reported thirty-three new members elected during 1915, an average attendance of 105, and a total of 441 members in good standing.

The club decided to have the annual banquet and T. B. De Forest was appointed chairman of the committee. The discussion was participated in by Messrs. O'Mara, Schenck, Scott, Bunyard, Esler, Guttman, Manda, Holt and Sheridan. Oratory will be interned and dancing provided at the banquet.

The club decided to omit the annual outing this year.

J. H. Pepper's paper was in answer to the query, "Has the Carnation Reached Its Zenith?" It was followed by a practical discussion by Messrs. Stumpp, Esler, Irwin, Sheridan and Guttman.

The display of carnations was extremely fine. The exhibits, with the awards of the judges, were as follows:

Laddie, a seedling of Pink Delight, staged by R. J. Irwin, for F. Dorner & Sons Co., La Fayette, Ind. A pink variety of great size and beauty, to be disseminated in 1918; 86 points. The same firm also sent Rosalia, a bright cerise, scoring 85 points; Old Gold, yellow with a tinge of red, highly commended, and Nancy, a salmon pink, highly commended. The flowers were in fine condition, notwithstanding the long trip and severe cold.

Arawana, dark crimson, by A. N. Pierson, Inc., scored 85 points.

Alice Gluck, a salmon pink, shown by H. Weston, scored 85 points; Mrs. J. H. Pepper, variegated, scored 85 points.

A. N. Pierson showed Alice, receiving a vote of thanks.

Laura Weber, from Chas. Weber, staged by Guttman & Raynor, received a vote of thanks.

Red Wing, from W. A. Dawson, Willimantic, Conn., scored 85 points.

Crystal White, from Cottage Gardens, scored 85 points; Cottage Maid scored 86 points.

Improved Enchantress, from Peter Beuerlein, Elmhurst, L. I., received the thanks of the club.

A new dark red seedling from Fowler Marsden, of Far Rockaway, L. I., was highly commended.

A vase of fine Roman hyacinths from P. W. Popp, of Mamaroneck, received the thanks of the club.

The March meeting has been designated as rose night.

Permanent Exposition Show.

The second flower show held under the auspices of the Country Life Permanent Exposition at the Grand Central Terminal, New York, February 10 to 12, was an encouraging success, so much so that those in authority have decided to have another flower show in May, featuring tulips and bulbous stock. The awards were as follows:

Twenty-five roses—P. W. Popp, gardener for Mrs. H. Darlington, Seven Oaks, Mamaroneck, N. Y., first.

Twelve roses—J. W. Smith, gardener for F. E. Lewis, Ridgefield, Conn., first.

Various Notes.

Tuesday, March 28, will be New York day at the National Flower Show in Philadelphia. President Bowe says the American and Greek-American retail societies will attend 400 strong. The New York Florists' Club and other horticultural societies near New York will send 400 more. The entire cost of the trip, including dinner and admission to the show, is $3.25.

Wednesday, February 16, the Horticultural Society of New York held an exhibition at the Museum of National History.

Messrs. Goldstein and Futterman have entered the ranks of the wholesalers and have secured an excellent location at 102 West Twenty-eighth street. Goldstein & Futterman is the name of the new company. Mr. Goldstein was for nine years connected with the greater New York Wholesale Co., and has been with Guttman & Raynor, Inc., one and one-half years. Mr. Futterman has been foreman and salesman for Gunther Bros. for eighteen years.

A disastrous percentage of the stock arriving in the market February 14 was caught by the sudden fall to zero. The losses through freezing were heavy and the loss of business because of the cold wave also cut a big hole. .

R. J. Irwin was at Cromwell, Conn., last week and is enthusiastic over the new sweet pea, Pink Sensation, now flowering at the Pierson place.

John Donaldson, John Miesem and several others spent the week end, February 12, at C. W. Scott's place up the Hudson.

Miss Elizabeth Payne, who for ten years was employed as secretary for Alexander McConnell, was married to Frank Guest, at Philadelphia, February 10. They will reside at College Point, L. I.

Frank Deery, manager of the Thomas F. Galvin store at Forty-sixth street and Fifth avenue, is a tenor of wide reputation, and takes the principal part in an operetta to be given next week by the Columbia Club, at Whitestone, L. I.

The engagement of Miss Bella Taub, secretary of the Walter Siebrecht Co., to Samuel Frank, has been announced.

Alexander Kupperman, formerly with Thomas Young, Jr., now is in charge of the Fleischman store in the McAdoo Terminal building. Herman Warendorff also has a fine store in this wealthy section, where the cash-laden brokers abound. The Warendorff store in the Ansonia, on upper Broadway, had an appropriate window display for Lincoln's birthday.

The Malandre Bros. window display on Lincoln's birthday and on St. Valentine's day was one of the best this firm has had.

The McConnell windows were gay with tulips, azaleas and acacias. The store has been rearranged and enlarged, adding greatly to its conveniences. Business here has been satisfactory all season.

Mayor Badgley, of Chatham, of the firm of Badgley & Bishop, has been busy of late with municipal duties and honors.

P. J. Smith will devote considerable space in his new houses to the Hadley rose.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Much activity was displayed in the wholesale district last week. Stock of excellent quality was plentiful. The latter part of the week saw a great demand for violets, red roses and red carnations. Prices on these went up. St. Valentine's day caused this demand and kept the leading retailers quite busy. Violets, of course, were in greatest demand. Carnations were excellent; the best averaged $20 per thousand. Red carnations were sold at $40 per thousand. Roses are not in oversupply. The demand for fancies far exceeds the supply. Beauties are not of extra good quality. Sweet peas have been coming along better of late and a nice assortment was seen last week. The demand for bulbous stock has been unusually large and it is cleaning up daily. Valley, tulips, lilies, Von Sions, callas and Paper Whites are all of extra good quality. Common ferns are becoming scarce and asparagus is not overplentiful, though there is a heavy demand.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club, February 10, was interesting to the fifty members present. President Bourdet was in the chair and all the other officers were present. The usual preliminaries were soon disposed of.

A letter from John Young, secretary of the S. A. F., was read. In it he asked the members to make a special effort to attend the National Flower Show, at Philadelphia, next month. David Geddis was appointed a committee of one on transportation and he will have full charge of the trip.

Those elected to membership were Albert Senger, Richard Jaenicke, H. W. Enders, Carl Doerflinger, L. P. Jensen, Fred G. Grossart and Edwin Juengel. There was a recess of ten minutes for a general introduction of the new members. Five delinquent members were dropped from the list.

W. W. Ohlweiler, chairman of the trustees, reported that everything was in readiness for the entertainment and dance of the club, to be held February 18.

J. F. Ammann, chairman of the executive committee that had charge of the affairs of the recent convention of the American Carnation Society, reported that all bills had been paid and that a refund of fifty per cent would be made to all subscribers. In a short talk, he gave credit to his committeemen for the great success of the meeting and for having been elected president of the society. He asked the cooperation of the members at the next meeting of the society, at Indianapolis.

F. J. Fillmore, W. S. Wells and G. Windler were appointed a committee to draft resolutions on the death of Max Pelletier.

A request was made to appoint a committee of five to devise ways and means of organizing a Missouri State Florists' Association; this committee to be announced by the chair at the March meeting and to be allowed $50 for expenses.

At the next meeting of the club, March 9, a miscellaneous flower show will be held at one of the wholesale houses.

W. W. Ohlweiler gave a lecture, with blackboard illustrations, on "How New Varieties of Flowers Are Created," which proved interesting to all.

Various Notes.

used for the large catalogue trade this spring.

W. A. Rowe, a member of the County Growers' Association, informs me that at the last meeting of the club J. E. Pollworth, of Chicago, lectured on "Fertilizing." He said Mr. Pollworth went into many details of plant growing. The subject will be taken up again at the next meeting, March 1. President F. W. Ude, Jr., still is in Florida and Vice-president W. J. Edwards presides over the meetings like a veteran.

Miss Stolle, who, in behalf of Grimm & Gorly, presented to President Wilson a large bouquet on his recent visit here, received a pleasing letter from President and Mrs. Wilson. Miss Stolle is a niece of Vincent and Frank Gorly.

Mrs. Buechel, head of the Riessen Floral Co., says they have had a heavy run of business. Mr. Buechel has been on the sick list for some time, but is now fully recovered.

H. W. Enders, Charles W. Fullgraf and L. Baumann, landscape architects, say they have plenty of large contracts for this spring and that an extra force of men will be required to complete the work in time.

The five wholesale houses disposed of 250,000 California violets for St. Valentine's day.

Waldbart, Ayres, Windler, Schoenle, Eggeling and Bergstermann were among the Grand avenue florists who made pretty window displays for St. Valentine's day. These displays attracted many buyers and all report a splendid business.

damaged by recent wind storms, are now in fairly good shape to resume business.

The prompt opening of the club meeting, at 2 o'clock, had a good effect on the members, as a large number were present. This seems only fair to our suburban members, who come from a distance and want to get home early.

A visit to the various seed houses found all hands busy filling up seed bins and mailing catalogues, preparatory to an early spring business, which is expected to be heavy.

The Retail Florists' Association will hold its monthly meeting February 21, at the Mission Inn Garden. Secretary F. C. Weber, Jr., says some interesting subjects will be up for discussion.

The following suburban florists were seen in the wholesale district last week: W. A. Rowe, Phil Goebel, John Connon, Joseph Hauser, Charles Johann, J. F. Ammann, George Madsen, Ed. Denker, W. J. Edwards, W. E. Ogle, Charles Meyer, Hugo Gross, Joseph Deutschmann, W. J. Pilcher and R. A. Wolfsberger. J. J. B.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

The monthly meeting of the Holyoke and Northampton Florists' and Gardeners' Club was held February 8 at E. J. Canning's, the Prospect Heights Nursery, Northampton. There was a gratifying attendance and President Butler kept things moving in good style. By unanimous vote it was decided to change the meeting night from the second to the first Tuesday of each month, to take effect at the March meeting. On behalf of the members G. H. Sinclair presented a gold stickpin to our worthy secretary, James Whiting, as a slight token of appreciation of his good work in that office during the last four years.

Instead of a paper being read and discussed, each member brought a question on a slip of paper. These were shuffled and drawn, and members were allowed five minutes to answer. Facial expressions during the brain-racking process were a fine study. The plan was a great success; each member had to be heard from and the questions were such as to uncork much useful information.

Exhibits of good quality added greatly to the interest of the meeting. F. D. Keyes & Son staged a vase of Carnation Gorgeous and a large specimen cyclamen, which was exhibited a year ago and during the interval had matured a good crop of seed. G. H. Sinclair brought a fine spike of Clivia miniata and vases of Mrs. Sim and Christmas Pink sweet peas. D. J. Gallivan showed a fruiting plant of Ficus pandurata and H. E. Downer, of the Smith College Botanic Garden, staged a pan of Hyacinth La Grandesse and six plants of cyclamen. One new member was elected. H. E. D.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

A CENTRAL NEWS war special states that the Danish government has prohibited all exports of turnip, beet and similar kinds of seed.

THE Nebraska Seed Co., of Omaha, Neb., has purchased nineteen acres of land near Omaha, which will be used for growing onion seed.

GIGANTEUMS from cold storage today are worth fifty per cent more than the prices at which the principal forcers contracted for this season's supply.

A RECENT fire at the Ames Seed Co. storehouse, near Ames, Ia., destroyed seeds and other property valued at $6,000. An insurance of $4,000 was realized on.

AMONG those who visited the Chicago seed trade last week was Fred Hunter, of the Hunter Seed Co., San Francisco, Cal. Mr. Hunter was on his way east.

THE Lake Shore Seed Co., of Dunkirk, N. Y., has purchased a 130-acre farm near Dunkirk, which will be devoted to seed raising and testing. Greenhouses will be erected this year.

THAT there is an improved tone to business at large is the opinion of A. H. Smith, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, who says his house has been unusually busy during the last week.

SEEDSMEN are wondering what the spring flowering season will bring them from those who bought bulbs last autumn. If the stock planted outdoors gives no better account of itself than the forced bulbs are doing, explanations will be difficult.

CONDON BROS., of Rockford, Ill., were awarded by the State Board of Administration, Springfield, Ill., contracts for supplying seeds to the various state institutions for this year. They secured the awards on practically all of the competitive bids.

THE Farmer Seed & Nursery Co., of Faribault, Minn., has purchased the business of the Faribault Seed Co., of the same city. The business will be continued under the old name as the uptown retail store. The Faribault Seed Co. has been in existence about twenty years. The Farmer Seed & Nursery Co. reports a record-breaking mail order business up to this date; as compared with the previous season an increase of sixty per cent is shown. The item most sought for is

Rochester White Gladiolus

The ONLY PURE WHITE of COMMERCIAL VALUE

The value of this variety is its color. The purest white ever offered. Its general growth, vigor and erectness give it first place among the standard varieties.

There is no question about this variety being not only the best white, but the only white Gladiolus of commercial value today.

The facts that the petals are pure white clear into the throat, and that the anthers and pollen are white, place it in a class superior to any other so-called white variety. In usefulness this variety will answer perfectly in the place of any solid white flower, and can be used for every purpose heretofore exclusively supplied by Lilies.

The plant is strong and vigorous and grows very erect. The spikes are well supported and large, averaging three feet in height. The green foliage is broad and clean. Productive in both bulb and flower.

ROCHESTER WHITE has won all the premiums offered for the best white, wherever exhibited, for the past four successive years.

FIRST SIZE BULBS, Dozen, $1.00; 100, $7.00; 1000, $65.00

seed corn, according to A. H. Luck, secretary.

How much of the corn will be fit for seed purposes? And what should one do before the facts become known?

This is a trade of contradictions. Not many months ago the appearances were that German valley would be a famine in 1916, and Japanese lilies a surplus. Today almost the opposite is the case; giganteum bulbs are scarce and valley pips seek a market.

Reports from California seed-growing districts confirm the statement made in this column while communication was cut off by floods. There has been much rain where seeds are grown, delaying work, but the floods that received so much attention from the newspapers were not in the seed valleys.

Now that the important seed catalogues all have been distributed, it appears that few houses have made the attempt to cut costs save by some reduction in the edition made possible by dropping dead names from mailing lists. Quite the contrary, some of the books show marked improvement through skillful editing and typesetting.

Complaint is general regarding the unsatisfactory flowering qualities of bulbs this season. Paper Whites as well as jonquils, daffodils, hyacinths and tulips fail to flower; some come blind and some do not develop good flowers. Now and then a man is found who lays the trouble to haste on the part of the producer, but the general belief is that it is the result of delays and heating in transit.

The customs authorities are having continuous difficulty with the clause of the tariff law that provides for the free admission of mother flowering bulbs imported exclusively for propagating purposes. Gladioli and orchids, according to protests filed by customhouse brokers, are largely imported under this head. When fortified with the right evidence, the protests are sustained.

DREAMS THAT COME TRUE.

"Rich man, poor man, beggar man" —whatever his worldly station, probably every man in the flush of youth has dreamed that he dwelt in marble halls. If Frederick M. Clark, of Milford, Conn., ever dreamed thusly, the illustration on this page will attest the fact that his dreams certainly have come true, for it pictures the new home of the New England seedsman. Mr. Clark is associated with, or rather part of, the Everett B. Clark Seed Co., which has its headquarters at Milford. There are growing stations at East Jordan, Mich., Green Bay, Wis., and St. Anthony, Idaho. Recently the company acquired the Dennis Fenn farm at Milford, consisting of 110 acres of what is said to be the best seed growing land in Connecticut.

FERRY GETS IN BAD.

C. B. Coe and Theodore Cobb, of D. M. Ferry & Co., were present at the canners' convention at Louisville last week and are believed to have had a thoroughly enjoyable time until the February 12 issue of the Saturday Evening Post appeared on the newsstands. On page 49 was a Ferry ad that began:

STOP LIVING OUT OF CANS—
START A GARDEN

Which do you prefer—the fragrance of flowers, or bottled perfume? Which do you prefer—ripe fruits and vegetables, or the run of a canning factory? In winter, home-grown fruits cannot be available, but why unnecessarily prolong the "season of cans"?

How long since you tasted Peas that were picked the instant they were big enough to eat—too tender to stand transportation? Do you know that, as a rule, the very choicest varieties of fruits and vegetables can never be tinned, or even brought to market, because they do not possess fiber or rind or some such protection against early wilting. Start a garden.

Whereupon the corn section of the National Canners' Association adopted this resolution:

Resolved, that Secretary Gorrell be requested to notify D. M. Ferry & Co., of Detroit, Mich., that in the opinion of the canners present at this convention their advertisement which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, issue of February 12, is extremely harmful to the best interests of our industries.

Not content with that, the following telegram was wired by the Western Canners' Association through its secretary:

D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich.:

I note with deep regret your advertisement in this week's issue of the Saturday Evening Post, and cannot help but believe you were not cognizant of its real meaning before being published. As it is a gross injustice to the canning interests of America, I feel confident, however, to rely upon your deep sense of fairness to make such reparations as the best interests of our business demand.

G. W. DRAKE,
Secretary Western Canners' Association.

MR. BARNARD IN THE MOVIES.

The following letter is from John Bodger, of Bodger & Sons, Los Angeles, and refers to W. W. Barnard, of Chicago, who is on the coast convalescing after an illness:

"I took Mr. Barnard out this afternoon for a hundred-mile spin over Los Angeles county and he seemed to enjoy and stand the trip well.

"We took in Universal City, the home of the Universal Film Co., and initiated him into the movie game. They were pulling off a stunt where the citizens were fleeing from strikers and soldiers over a river. Visitors took the part of the citizens, so we joined the crowd. Mr. Barnard couldn't run very fast and we were the last to cross the bridge, and as the nurses and I pulled him off the bridge they blew it up with powder. He and I were carried up a little and then, in the splash of water as the temporary bridge fell, we got sprinkled some. So we were star actors in a reel which will be known as 'Graft,' series No. 14, political play. If you ever see it posted downtown, take it in and see what kind of actors we are.

"Mr. Barnard is leaving tomorrow morning (February 13) for his quiet home in Santa Barbara, but we expect to get him down here again a little later."

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

The W. T. Phillips Seed Co., of Toledo, O., reports a steady market in field seeds, one of its strongest lines. The market gardeners' trade is improving.

DREER'S Extra Selected SWEET PEAS

We aim to confine our list of Sweet Peas to the very best varieties and only those which can be used by florists for cutting. We have added a number of the choicest new varieties of the Spencer type to our list this season.

Orchid-flowered or Spencer Sweet Peas

This type is distinguished from the grandiflora sorts by the extraordinary size of their flowers and by the standard being crinkled and wavy. They usually bear four blossoms on a stem, and are as easy to grow as the commonest sorts. A fair crop the past season enables us to offer them at prices much lower than ever before.

They are the best lily bulbs in the world, barring none.

And you will find them in the most successful lily-growing establishments all over the world.

They are produced in a way to give the maximum flowering results at the minimum of expense.

You can depend upon them whether you buy a case or a hundred thousand — they run uniform.

There is nothing more profitable to grow and nothing more appropriate to use than pure white lilies.

Order now for fall delivery. Times are good now and they will soon be better still. You will need them next year and the price then will most likely be higher.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

Valentine's day was a busy one for the stores. Plants and cut flowers were popular valentines, and for the cut flowers appropriate boxes were much in demand. Hyacinths, jonquils, cinerarias, azaleas and primroses were the most in demand in the line of plants. Roses are scarce, while carnations are in good supply, the latter, however, being badly split.

Club Meeting.

The Evansville Florists' Club met February 9 at the Karl Zeidler range and had an enjoyable evening. N. O. Halbrooks spoke on the carnation and exhibited some fine long-stemmed sweet peas. Theodore Kuebler showed a bloom of the Dr. Enguehard mum. After the meeting lunch was served and then all visited the Zeidler greenhouses, which are lighted by electricity. The next meeting will be held at the residence of L. Fritsch, March 8. William Halbrooks will talk on Easter plants of a generation ago, while the younger members will talk of today.

E. L. F.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

Baur & Steinkamp, of Indianapolis, are in the limelight just now, principally because their Carnation Pocahontas has been recognized by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, she being a descendant of that illustrious personage. Mr. Baur finished taking some finely rooted cuttings from the sand to complete some orders; then we make the rounds of the houses, making the following notings: Good Cheer, as grown here, is predicted to surpass Mrs. C. W. Ward. Enchantress Supreme, with other members of this family, still will be grown by the florists. St. Nicholas, while a grand scarlet, has to give honors to Champion for productiveness. Merry Christmas, a new deep scarlet of much promise, is listed for 1917, while a seedling crimson, descended from Pocahontas for one parent, but with a bloom far superior to it, will be a 1918 debutante. Sensation, as seen here, is simply immense, both in growth and bloom. A lovely pink seedling is being carefully nurtured. White Wonder, Matchless and Shasta are leaders in whites. A most interesting experiment is being made to determine, if possible, the reason for the yellows, a disease prevalent with many. Mr. Baur attributes this disease to lack of nutrition, and has twelve plants of Enchantress under treatment, in each case using a different fertilizer, to determine if the nourishment lacking is phosphoric acid or potash. The result is awaited with interest. A grand lot of Pelargonium Easter Greeting in 7-inch azalea pots bids fair to be a valuable asset at Easter. Another profitable kind is the winter-flowering buddleia. Grown to one main shoot, the laterals of this bloom freely after the flowering period is over. Cuttings are taken and the plants thrown out. Geraniums also are a paying crop, not only as specimens, grown in azalea pots on brackets through the houses, together with French hydrangeas, but also for sale as rooted cuttings. A bed of Godfrey callas is a paying proposition.

A. Washburn & Sons, of Bloomington, Ill., are increasing the nursery branch of their business, having twenty-five acres under cultivation. George A. Washburn says he felt well repaid for his recent trip to St. Louis.

W. J. Vesey, Jr., Fort Wayne, Ind., who had not returned from the carnation convention at the time of my visit, in his report of the doings at St. Louis mentioned the 150,000 blooms on exhibition. Somebody remarked that a large proportion of the carnations could have been used in Fort Wayne, the demand at that time being large and the supply small.

Schmidt & Botley Co., of Springfield, O., reports mail orders coming in most auspiciously. Mr. Botley remarked that whereas most of their trade formerly was in the south, they now note an increase of fifty per cent in the north and an increasing local trade. Ferns were never in better shape than now.

Frank Good, of Springfield, said the outlook for his business was rosy—practically his whole range has little else than the queen of flowers, in 2-inch pots.

The American Rose & Plant Co., of Springfield, is unusually busy, and the men have missed the activities of Manager Henry Elwell, who has been a victim of the grip.

Gustav Schneider, of Springfield, says he does not recall so large a demand for funeral work as at this time. He was doing double duty, for his chauffeur was a grip victim.

The Leedle Floral Co., of Springfield, is growing a greater variety of roses each year. It caters largely to retailers.

Underwood Bros., of Columbus, O., say that French bulbous stock was never more acceptable than at this season. The heavy funeral work and the shortage of bench flowers have made these unusually valuable. Two carnation growers came in during my visit and exchanged views regarding two shipments of rooted cuttings. Each had a shipment from his grower and in both cases a large percentage of the cuttings were useless. While undoubtedly this loss will be made good, it was agreed that it does not give the small grower a decent show and discourages his investing in new varieties the first year of introduction.

S. F. Stephens & Son, of Columbus, predict a shortage of geraniums because the wet fall prevented the usual harvest of cuttings while the plants were outside. This happened in many localities.

George H. Mellen, of Springfield, pointed to a batch of mail orders as a good sign of an early spring.

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS DEPARTMENT

BORDEAUX FOR CUCUMBERS.

Will you kindly tell us the method to follow in spraying seedling cucumbers in the house with Bordeaux mixture? Are the stock solutions on the market reliable, and how should they be diluted for use on cucumbers?

H. B.—Ohio.

The stock solutions of Bordeaux mixture on the market are usually reliable, but it is a comparatively simple matter to make your own, of which you can be absolutely sure. Dissolve six pounds of copper sulphate, or blue vitriol, in five gallons of water, placing the copper in a bag. In another vessel, a wooden one, dissolve four pounds of quicklime or six pounds of air-slaked lime. Suspend the lime in a bag in five gallons of water. Pour the lime water, when cool, into a barrel with the copper solution and stir thoroughly. Add water to make the total mixture forty gallons. Always stir well before using. This is a normal mixture, but you would be well advised to use care in spraying cucumbers, especially when they are small.

GUY M. HUTTON, Conyngham, Pa.

Hamilton, Mich.—F. Keith has broken ground for a large greenhouse, which will be planted to cut flower stock and vegetables.

Columbus, O.—J. R. Clark is pushing the florists' department in the Green-Joyce department store. He has liberal advertising backing and ran a large St. Valentine's day ad in the local papers and as a double-page spread in the programs of two theaters. Of course such enterprise is resulting in a large increase in the business of the department.

Lawton, Okla.—Wallace H. Hornaday, who started business here in 1902, now has 5,000 square feet of glass and two acres in outdoor crops. Mrs. Ora G. Hornaday has had charge of the sales since 1909, and E. G. Biggard has been in charge of the growing since 1908. A retail catalogue recently has been issued, thirty-two pages and covers, showing cuts and pricing nearly everything a general florist has to offer.

AMERICAN BEAUTIES

We are receiving daily a large supply of CHOICE BLOOMS. Best in the market

Our usual large supply of CARNATIONS on sale every morning at 7:30—the entire cut of 200,000 plants.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Porterville, Cal.—A greenhouse 24x42 is being erected by Lucien E. Rohlick.

Bellingham, Wash.—R. K. Bellman, who has grown vegetables under glass for more than twenty-five years, intends to take up plants and flowers for the retail trade.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Business is settling down to a steadier pace and many social affairs have used a good quantity of stock. Funeral work is plentiful and an all-round busy week has to be recorded. Stock has improved wonderfully the last few days. Roses are coming in more freely and carnations are of better quality. Bulbous stock is improving, the daffodils being longer of stem and showing better color. Freesias are excellent, Purity, as usual, taking precedence over all others. There are a few colored varieties shown, but as yet there have not been enough of them to make a feature. Sweet peas are again absent from the market, apparently none of the growers recognizing the importance of these exquisite flowers for winter use. Forget-me-nots and the small boxes of waxed orange blossoms sell freely and there are one or two other small flowers, but the market is none too well supplied with these little novelties, as they are termed. Flowering plants are not too plentiful, but the demand for them is not great. Azalea mollis is beautiful, but, being rather fragile, does not ship well, though it is fine for window displays and decorations. Since the rain there has been a big demand for small bedding and vegetable plants. Greens are not any too plentiful, especially good Asparagus plumosus.

Various Notes.

The Pasadena Horticultural Society having decided to incorporate, an election of the new board of directors was held at the regular meeting of the society February 4. After much indecision and argument as to the legality of certain processes of nomination and election, it finally was decided to retain the old officers on the board of directors and to elect two more, making seven in all. G. Nelson and W. W. Felgate were elected to fill the bill. N. Forsythe read an able paper on chrysanthemum culture, which was listened to with great interest, and it was quite late when President Shields called for a motion to adjourn.

Hal Kruckeberg is receiving congratulations on the arrival of a 10-pound boy at his home February 2. The genial secretary of the Los Angeles Horticultural Society always carries a smile, but the brand he now is showing is like the California sun shining after the recent rains.

F. R. Hills, of Hills' Nursery, is lifting fine stock from the new nursery grounds south of the greenhouses, showing the wonderful fertility of the foothill soil when water is applied. Mr. Hills speaks highly of the new Adiantum California, which he is growing as plants and for cutting. A batch of 60,000 shamrocks, grown for St. Patrick's day, looks like a beautiful green lawn under the large lath house. While on the Irish question, I heard him singing "Off Again, On Again, Come Again, Finnegan." I did not ask for particulars, but think he was referring to the hirsute appendage again appearing on his upper lip.

The California Evergreen & Cut Flower Co. reports business rushing. This concern is shipping large quantities of Asparagus plumosus, taking about 2,500 per day from J. Dieterich, as well as purchasing his entire output of freesias.

A striking and unique flower piece was put up by Wolfskills' & Morris Goldenson for the opening of the picture play, "Ramona," at Clune's Auditorium, February 7. It was in the form of a belfry containing three old mission bells of red carnations hung to a rod of white carnations. The sides were of bronze galax and the base of boxwood, the word "Ramona" appearing just above the latter. The piece stood about eight feet in height.

Albert Knopf, of the Redondo Floral Co., says they are delighted with the large quantity of extra business coming to the company since its removal to Seventh street. Mr. Knopf is not given to exaggeration or "blowing," and this is another proof of the trend of business southward.

H. W. Turner is completely remodeling his dwelling and making other improvements on the place. He reports a much larger cut on roses since the rains let up and says the demand for young stock from the east is larger than ever this year.

O. C. Saakes is making a showy display with Azalea mollis and other flowering stock. He says business is well up to the average for the season.

Howard & Smith report being considerably tied up with orders during the rain, but Fred Howard says they are catching up well and are looking forward to a season of excellent business.

The L. A. Floral Co. says that stock now is arriving nicely. Carnations, daffodils and freesias were the leaders last week. Up to the time of writing Fred Sperry had not been arrested for speeding in his new auto.

J. Dieterich is growing and selling large quantities of Asparagus elongatus.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Prices in the flower market have seldom taken such a tumble as they did last week; daffodils dropped almost over night from $4 to $1, or even 75 cents per hundred, and several other lines showed a sharp decline. Even carnations, which are not yet overplentiful, have gone down almost thirty per cent. The week was dark and drizzly, but much warmer, so that, though roses still are scarce, the bulbous stock is coming out in fine shape. This stock is surely welcome after the long shortage, and it sells in large quantities. There is some fear that the crop, especially of daffodils, is coming all at once, and that after a few days the cut will be light. There is almost a glut of freesias and Paper Whites, an abundance of Chinese lilies, many snowdrops and a few anemones and ranunculus. Few tulips and hyacinths are being cut as yet, but much first-class stock is offered in pots and finds a ready sale. More valley is appearing and there are enough Easter lilies to take care of funeral requirements, which are comparatively heavy.

Violets are much better and quite plentiful. Stocks are appearing again, but nothing extra in quality, and some small lots of mignonette and marigolds are seen.

Short and poorly colored roses, which have been cleaning up, now get little attention, but good stock of all kinds is much sought for, and the prices are maintained. Baby roses are in especially strong demand. Gardenias still are off crop. Cattleyas are in liberal supply and seem to be growing rapidly in popularity. There is a good supply of Phalænopsis amabilis and Schilleriana. The shortage of Asparagus plumosus is turning the demand for greens in other directions, and ferns and palms are moving well. Acacia continues quite popular and more fruit blossoms are appearing. Rhododendrons still hold back, but there are plenty of good azaleas, which sell well. Cinerarias and Primula obconica are popular, and there are a few cyclamens, but they are no onger much of a feature.

Horticultural Society Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society was held on the evening of February 5, with Vice-president Thomas Fenton in the chair, E. James, the new president, being absent on account of illness in his family. A motion by H. Plath was carried on the subject of life membership, Messrs. Plath and MacRorie being appointed on a committee to revise the by-laws to permit the admission of persons interested in ornamental horticulture but not connected with the business. The question of a sinking or reserve fund again was the subject of some debate, several plans of procedure being proposed, and a motion was finally carried to establish such a fund. A letter was read from Secretary Young of the S. A. F., asking that credentials be sent for the admission of the president of the local society to the directorate, and the secretary was instructed to prepare the credentials.

On report of the smoker committee, the proposition to hold a smoker every quarter at a limited expense was approved. The dance committee reported that a hall had been secured for the evening of March 25, and preparations will be made for a pleasant evening for members and their friends. A letter was read asking the coöperation of the society in the flower show to be held during the Marin county floral pageant at San Rafael, May 19 to 21, in honor of the landing of Sir Francis Drake on the shore of that county, and the society voted to give its coöperation.

Prof. Stephens, of the University of California, gave an interesting illustrated lecture on "Landscape Gardening in California." The evening's exhibits attracted considerable attention, consisting of odontoglossums, by J. A. Carbone, 95 points; four sprays of Phalænopsis Schilleriana, by the MacRorie-McLaren Co., 90 points; two vases of heather, four sprays each, by Frank Pelicano, 90 points.

Various Notes.

The Richard Diener Co. is getting to work on its new greenhouse at Kentfield. The proposed planting has been delayed by wet weather, but will soon be started.

Mr. Appleby, formerly with the Western Orchid Co., of Alameda, and Mr. Letts, who has been engaged in landscape work for the Southern Pacific railroad, have gone into partnership and are starting a plant establishment. They have bought a tract of land near San Leandro and are working on a greenhouse range.

L. M. Barrett, a well-known veteran fern grower of Berkeley, died January 24.

President Daniel MacRorie, of the S. A. F., plans to leave for the east on organization business early in March.

The florists of Marin county have formed a temporary association to look after the professional end of the flower show, Paul Eckelmann being manager and F. C. Burns secretary. A prize fund of nearly $1,000 has been secured for the show, which will be divided into classes for professional growers, amateurs, florists and school children. The full schedule of prizes will be out soon.

Among the visiting florists this week are Mark Ebel, of Sacramento, who made a run down the line of growers in San Mateo county, and D. A. Maderia, of Salinas.

E. W. McLellan, of the E. W. McLellan Co., has returned from a trip to Seattle and other northern points, where he found it difficult to get about owing to cold weather and heavy snow.

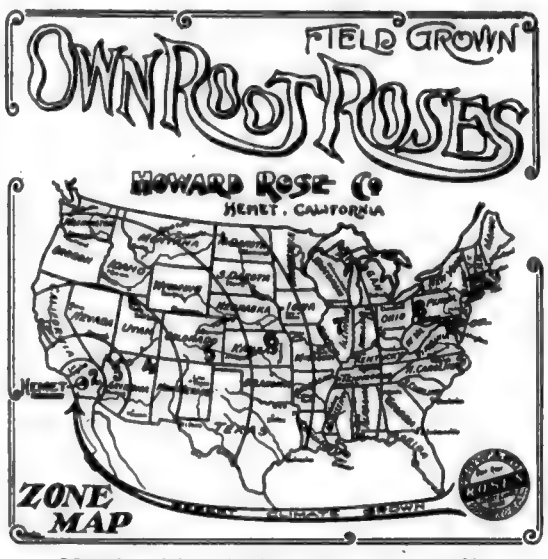
PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.



Another spell of low temperatures, snow and high winds, followed by sleet and what is called a "silver thaw," encased every twig, leaf, wire, etc., with a coating of ice about one and one-half inches in diameter. For several days traffic in the city and on the main railroad lines was practically put out of business. So far as heard from, the "oldest inhabitant" has recalled no winters that surpassed this one in severity. The sleet stuck to the glass on the greenhouses and could not be kept off by the inside heat. Some damage was done at several ranges, but nothing serious has been reported. Those who were short of fuel had to do some sharp hustling. The greatest damage resulted to shade trees and shrubbery, which broke down under the weight of the ice. A chinook, or warm wind with rain, caused a sudden melting of the snow and ice, which resulted in flood conditions on all the streams and sloppy, disagreeable streets. The florists did but little business the first week in February, and stock accumulated at the stores and greenhouses.

When weather conditions became more moderate there was a rush of funeral work and more than the usual call for flowers for social events, with plenty of stock to meet all demands. Bulbous blooms are coming in freely and the carnations have increased, though their quality is not prime. Daffodils are almost in oversupply, with a tendency to depress prices. The first genistas are in and tulips and Dutch hyacinths of all shades are shown. Some splendid cyclamens are displayed, but they are not so popular as they were a month ago.

ing in some good violets, both single and double.

Niklas & Son and Clarke Bros. displayed the first genistas last week.

R. C. Cook says the violets from California still show the effect of frosts.

The Tonseth Floral Co. and O. E. Panzer both ran out of fuel during the traffic tie-up. The former got relief with improvised sleds, hauled by teams, and the latter chopped down some trees standing nearby and packed in the green wood on his own and his helpers' backs.

James M. Wickizer, formerly of Plymouth, Ind., died at his home in Hillsboro, Ore., February 2. He came to Oregon in 1911 and continued in the nursery and florists' business, which he had followed in Indiana. His death followed a stroke of heart failure January 10.

The Wilson & Crout Co. and Clarke Bros. suffered losses from a collapse of part of their palm houses under the weight of snow and ice. Most of the stock was saved.

W. Thompson made the rounds of the greenhouses last week, taking orders for glass and repair materials.

C. C. Ruenitz reports a fair run of business in funeral work. He was called out one of the stormiest days to act as pallbearer at the funeral of a lodge brother.

Martin & Forbes displayed some unusually good cyclamens and their showing of orchids was especially fine.

The ice storm killed all the outdoor Dracæna indivisa not wrapped.

The pines, firs, maples and beeches appeared to suffer the greatest amount of damage. S. W. W.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

The inclement weather last week retarded business of all kinds and the florists suffered more than others. The heavy snowfall practically tied up the car service, so that it was a difficult matter for people to get to the business sections. A scarcity of customers was met by a corresponding scarcity in the supply of flowers, and little was done except in funeral work. Now, however, there is something doing in the flower stores. Preparations were made for Valentine's day, but none of the concerns seemed to think it worth their while to advertise in the local papers, as is done in the east, a method of securing business that should not have to be brought to the notice of readers in this locality.

Various Notes.

The Orpheum Floral Co. has completely remodeled the front of its store on Third avenue. The two entrance doors have been removed and larger windows installed on each side of the entrance, making the display more attractive and improving the appearance of the store.

The Burdett Co., for years at First avenue and Denny Way, has discontinued business. A meeting of creditors will be held and the disposition of the property and effects decided on.

The snowfall of last week did much damage to local greenhouses. Greenhousemen have the habit of expecting little snow and do not build houses with the stability that sometimes is evidently necessary. Consequently, many now are mourning houses level with the ground, destroyed crops and vanished hopes. Some of them, by dint of increased firing and use of shovels and rakes, managed to keep their houses almost intact, but I have heard of no place that came off immune, except that of a youth who is said to have installed steam pipes close to the glass and thus kept the snow melting. The Broadway Floral Co., at Everett, appears to be the heaviest loser. Some of the Brighton growers lost part of their ranges, the Carl Melby place went down entirely and Mr. Melby also lost a house on the other side of Lake Washington. At M. G. Buckley's, at Ballard, of which Gustave Bjorkman is tenant, one house 30x150 was destroyed and an adjoining one damaged. This winter will long be remembered by greenhousemen, and if anyone should express any desire to see "the beautiful snow" there is likely to be some beautiful language.

A meeting of the retail florists was held last week and a unanimous decision was arrived at to close all flower stores earlier in the evening and Sundays. In the future the stores will close at 8:30 p. m. every evening, at 10 p. m. Saturdays and at 1 o'clock Sundays.

Arthur Zirkman, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, was here last week.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. J.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.
Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 28 to 30, 1916.

THE day will come when nurserymen will recognize that florists are one of their best means for reaching the public.

THE death of Charles L. Watrous, president of the Watrous Nursery Co., of Des Moines, Ia., which occurred February 9, is recorded in this week's obituary column.

WILLIAM P. STARK, Stark City, Mo., has issued a nicely printed pamphlet of eighty-eight pages and cover, entitled "Inside Facts of Profitable Fruit Growing." There is an immense amount of information packed into the closely printed pages, with not a word of selling talk nor a price from the Stark nursery.

THERE are few more active men in the Chicago Association of Commerce than B. S. Gage, of Peterson Nursery, while W. A. Peterson is treasurer of the committee of 100 that will run the Billy Sunday meetings in Chicago. These, with Mr. Peterson's real estate activities, keep Peterson Nursery before the public without being in the least intended for that purpose.

NEW AND RARE ORNAMENTALS.

[A paper by J. B. Baker, of Fort Worth, Tex., on "New or Little-Known Ornamentals," presented at the fifteenth annual session of the Texas Nurserymen's Association.]

The demand for ornamentals is increasing rapidly. Some shrubs and evergreens seem to thrive almost everywhere. If crape myrtles, Japan quince, bridal wreath, althæas, salt cedars, arborvitæs, magnolias and euonymus can be grown under almost any condition and in any soil, it stands to reason there must be many others that will do as well. Fortunately, the demand for a greater variety has stimulated nurserymen and amateurs to extensive experiments, with the result that dozens of shrubs, evergreens and trees, many of them exceedingly beautiful, have been found to do well in the southwest. These, until the last year or two, were unknown, or known only by name. Below is a list of a few ornamentals especially good, that are not yet being extensively planted.

Nepal Privet

Ligustrum Nepalense, or Nepal privet, is a hardy evergreen flowering shrub. The foliage is as dark and as rich and heavy as the English laurel, and in early spring it is covered with immense trusses of pure white flowers as handsome as white lilacs. As a specimen broad-leaved evergreen, I know of nothing better than the Nepal privet. As a flowering shrub it will command attention and admiration everywhere. There are other splendid privets, such as Ibota and Regelianum, useful for their fine blooming qualities, and the Japan, or Ligustrum Japonicum, used largely in northern Texas as an evergreen shrub and in southern Texas as a shrub and a shade tree.

The New Rose, MRS. BAYARD THAYER,

that we are offering this season, will make a fine addition to a class of large-flowered roses which is rapidly coming to the front, since we introduced Mrs. Charles Russell, of which the new claimant is a sport. The color is a most beautiful clear rose pink, inside of petals a shade lighter. The foliage heavy and smooth and carried on strong stems. It won the American Rose Society medal, over a strong class of competitors, at the Cleveland Show, scoring 90 points being an everbloomer than any other shrub I have ever seen. It is a neat, compact, rather slow-growing shrub, does not seem particular as to soil or location, and is covered during the entire growing season with beautiful pinkish-white flowers. There has not been a day during all of last spring, summer and up to the present time that our plants have not been a mass of blossoms, and I understand that when Abelia grandiflora is treated as a pot plant it will flower all winter. It is not new. I knew this plant twenty-five years ago in southern Texas, but only during the last year or two has it been grown in northern Texas. I suppose that on account of its being difficult to propagate and of slow growth, nurserymen have not taken hold of it. Naturally it would have to bring a higher price than other shrubs, but when the trade once knows its value, there will be no trouble in getting the price.

Two Good Buddleias.

Buddleia variabilis Veitchiana and B. magnifica have created almost a sensation wherever grown. The old variety, Lindleyana, has been known for many years, but is not especially attractive, as neither foliage nor flower is particularly pretty. Lindleyana has to its credit, however, hardiness, vigor of growth, adaptability to almost all conditions, and a free-flowering habit. The new varieties have all these good qualities and, in addition, have heavy, handsome foliage. During the summer and fall they produce an abundance of flowers in panicles four inches wide and ten or twelve inches long. The plants are full and graceful in their habit. Not the least of their attractions is their fascination for butterflies, the plants sometimes being covered with swarms of these beautiful insects of all colors and sizes. It has appropriately been named the Butterfly Bush. B. Veitchiana has flowers almost white, slightly tinted with lavender, and B. magnifica has rich, purplish-violet flowers. There are several other new varieties of buddleias; they promise to be a useful family of shrubs.

Berberis Trifoliata.

Berberis trifoliata, an evergreen shrub, is a native of southwest Texas. The leaves are three to five-lobed, of a dark glaucous green, with a beautiful metallic luster. It is four to six feet high, bushy, and as a single specimen assumes a compact and handsome form. It can be planted to advantage in masses or used as a hedge. In spring it is covered with bright red berries. Being a native of west Texas, it is, of course, extremely hardy.

Spring List ROSES

THE LEEDLE FLORAL COMPANY SPRINGFIELD-OHIO

Salvia Greggii.

Salvia Greggii is another native shrub of southwest Texas. This was introduced three years ago, but we can hardly class it as little known. It is being planted by the thousands, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and even in Europe, and has already become a standard shrub. Its bright, pleasing color, its freedom of bloom, its hardiness, the ease with which it is propagated and grown, make it a general favorite wherever known.

Double-Flowering Almond.

Double-flowering almond was the favorite of our grandmothers' gardens. It is so old that it is almost forgotten. This almond is becoming popular again and many are glad to know that it is being offered by nurserymen. The old, slow way of propagating it by suckers made it unprofitable to handle, but now that it is being budded on strong-growing roots, a large stock of it can be quickly obtained.

The Gold Flower.

Hypericum Moserianum, or Gold Flower, is a low and leafy shrub with graceful drooping branches. Flowers of shining yellow, two inches across, glisten in the sunlight like lustrous golden wax, their centers plumed with almost countless thread-like stamens. It is unusually showy, especially in groups, masses or borders There are several other species of hypericum; all that I have tried at Fort Worth are hardy and attractive.

Others Worth While.

Space will not permit me to describe at length other shrubs, but I must briefly recommend caryopteris, the pretty, bushy shrub that is covered with thousands of blue flowers during fall; the Exochorda grandiflora, with its large clusters of snow-white flowers early in the spring; the Genista tinctoria, or Scotch Broom, with its gorgeous profusion of golden-yellow blossoms in the spring; the Poinciana Gilliesii, or Bird of Paradise, that grows anywhere and bears such a profusion of bloom all summer and fall; the improved varieties of tamarix, such as Tamarix hispida æstivalis and T. Japonica plumosa. These show nearly as much improvement over the old salt cedar as the new buddleias do over Lindleyana. I feel that I must not close this list without mentioning Vitex Agnus-castus. This is neither new nor little known, for at Fort Worth it is planted more than any other shrub, but in some cities it seems to be entirely unknown. It is the landscape gardener's friend—always ready to serve anywhere, always satisfactory in growth, foliage and flower.

LANCASTER, PA.

The Market.

Last week was cloudy and, consequently, there was not so large a cut of flowers for Valentine's day as many had wished. Stock has been improving wonderfully, though, and with the advent of sunny days there will be an abundance of blooms. The stores had a fine trade for Valentine's day, especially in spring flowers. The Spencer sweet peas were in exceptional demand. Valley, myosotis, freesias and double violets were good sellers. Of other spring flowers there were calendulas, primulas, yellow daisies, ageratums, daffodils, buddleias, lilacs, etc.

Various Notes.

In plants H. A. Schroyer had a fine line of tulips in pans, which were strictly first-class stock.

Jacob H. Weaver & Son, of Witmer, had some cinerarias that reflected the work of a skillful grower.

Lancaster will have another flower store in the near future. R. P. Antes, Jr., will open an up-to-date shop in the southwest angle of Penn square. Mr. Antes has had considerable experience with B. F. Barr & Co.

H. Rohrer has secured the services of Charles F. Edgar, formerly with B. F. Barr & Co., but more recently with Fleischman's, Chicago.

At the next meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Club, a member of Lord & Burnham Co. will give an address on "Modern Greenhouse Building," illustrated with slides.

A daily paper last week devoted considerable space to an article on B. F. Barr and his establishment.

THE BEST RED CARNATION

WASHBURN QUALITY

RESULTS ARE WHAT COUNT!

WINNER of the Silver Medal of the American Carnation Society, at Buffalo, 1915; also WINNER of the SAME MEDAL in the same class at ST. LOUIS, 1916; First prize at the Illinois State Fair, at Springfield, Ill., September 22 and 23. It has never been beaten at any exhibition. The color is a most brilliant red. The size of the flower is 3½ inches. Stems 24 to 36 inches long, strong and stiff. We have never had a burst calyx, all flowers grading firsts; and, best of all, it is a constant bloomer, giving a steady run of flowers equal in number to the Enchantress family. It has a spicy odor, much greater than the average Carnation. It comes in full flower by the 1st of December and then continues steadily through the balance of the season.

The color is the most brilliant red of any Carnation now in the market. We have grown this variety for five years, it being one of our own seedlings, and we now have 30,000 plants benched in our greenhouses at Greggs, of which 12,000 are for the cut flowers and 18,000 devoted to rooted cuttings. Rooted cuttings now ready for delivery.

Price of the rooted cuttings is $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000. We will bill 500 at the 1000 rate price.

Every cutting guaranteed strong and well rooted.

We have 1500 plants growing in our greenhouses at Hollywood, Cal., devoted exclusively to rooted cuttings.

Orders for Pacific Coast States will please be sent to our Western Branch, care of E. B. Washburn, 252 South Orange Grove Avenue, Pasadena, Cal.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

There is an increase in the supply of some items, but a decrease in others. There is little change in the market compared with that of a week ago. Beauties are scarce and those to be had are not of good quality. As for other roses, the supply is exceedingly short, but growers assure us that with a little fair weather there will be a larger supply of roses. Carnations are increasing in quantity, but most of them are of inferior grade, either split or with weak stems. First-class carnations are none too plentiful. Bulbous stock is becoming more abundant. Red, white and yellow tulips, daffodils and jonquils are all plentiful. With a good supply, these seem to have a tendency to drag. Paper Whites meet with a fair demand. Sweet peas, freesias and hyacinths continue to sell well. Violets, especially singles, meet with an increasing demand. Orchids and valley are decidedly scarce. Asparagus Sprengeri has been on the short side and Asparagus plumosus has been more plentiful, but there is not enough of either to supply all wants.

Various Notes.

Recent visitors in Buffalo were A. B. Ruppert, of Philip L. Carbone's, Boston; W. A. Manda, of South Orange, N. J.

Edward Walthers, who has been on the sick list for several weeks, has fully recovered.

William Adams, Emil Brucker and Mark Palmer attended the meeting of the New York Federation of Floral Clubs at Cornell last week.

Mrs. Katherine A. Raeker, 485 West Utica street, died suddenly last week. She had charge of a flower shop on Elmwood avenue.

The Buffalo Cut Flower Co. has discontinued business and the Wm. F. Kasting Co. has bought its remaining stock and supplies.

Charles H. Netsch, who has a flower store on Genesee street, will open a wholesale house March 1. He formerly conducted a wholesale house at 355 Ellicott street. The trade wishes him success.

S. A. Anderson had a unique St. Valentine's window. In the center there was a large kewpie doll with ribbons reaching to different articles in the window, among which were some pretty valentine boxes.

The carnations in western New York are at present not of the best quality, being weak of stem, split and faded. The wholesalers are getting some nice carnations from Boston and New York.

ANEMONE MUMS

Japanese Anemone C. L. HUTCHINSON

In this variety we have the ideal Anemone. The color of the petals is a pure white and the center a bright yellow, making a beautiful contrast. It is a good grower, splendid dark foliage, and, the best of all for pot work, needs no support.

Japanese Anemone MARIE POOLE

Very distinct and beautiful flower, which is very large, and the color is a combination of bronzy salmon, flushed with pink; the high center is bright orange yellow. One of the oddest and most novel flowers ever introduced. Good pot plant.

Single Anemone MRS. CARRIE RYERSON

Creamy white; very good habit; needs no support. An excellent variety for Thanksgiving. Makes good pot plant.

Single Anemone THOMAS DUNN

A very free bloomer, good foliage; ten to twelve flowers on spray, open at once. Color yellow, under petals bronzy yellow. Splendid keeper. Blooms for Thanksgiving and is good two weeks or more afterwards. Needs no support.

An artistic window display for St. Valentine's day was that of W. J. Palmer, 304 Main street. In the central background was a heart four feet in diameter, with an arrow of Harrisii lilies piercing it. In the front part of the window were many prettily trimmed baskets and boxes of valentine flowers. A. E.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

The St. Valentine's day business was satisfactory. Sweetheart, Sweet Marie and Cameo roses, sweet peas and violets were in good demand for this purpose. Freesia sold better. The market is almost bare of red flowers. American Beauty roses were in heavy demand, with not enough to go around; Hadley is practically off the market and there are but few Hoosier Beauty and Richmond roses to be had. Red carnations are quite scarce and the general run of carnations has diminished by fully fifty per cent. The cloudy days last week caused a great curtailment in the cut of all roses. Valley is quite plentiful and is bringing $5, with a fair demand. Southern daffodils have made their appearance and are being offered at $1 per hundred. Easter lilies are coming in more freely. Orchids still are plentiful, with but little demand, except for the Valentine's day trade, while gardenias are hard to get.

Various Notes.

The Gude Bros. Co. had two fine window displays last week; one in honor of Lincoln's birthday, the other a Valentine's day display. The feature of the latter was a huge heart of red immortelles, outlined with chiffon of matched color. The Lincoln window represented a woodland scene decorated with ferns and cattleyas and portraits of Lincoln.

The fourth annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States brought a large number of visitors to Washington, and among these were many florists. Those registering were George Burgevin, Daniel Burgevin and Cornelius Hime, of Kingston, N. Y.; Charles A. Keffer, of Knoxville, Tenn.; J. Hampton Rich, of Winston Salem, N. C. Julius Dilloff, of New York, and E. H. Flood, of Philadelphia, called on the trade last week.

Twenty-five Washington retailers, wholesalers and growers contributed to a fund which was used in securing an advertisement in the Washington Post headed "For St. Valentine's Day Give Flowers." Cupids and hearts illustrated the advertisement, which advised the public that the florists of Washington make special preparations for this day. The advertisement was signed with the names of the contributors. Z. D. Blackistone was the originator of the plan for this advertising.

William F. Gude and a number of local bowlers went to New York last week to attend the banquet of the Atlantic Coast Bowling League, of which Mr. Gude is president. C. L. L.

South Bend, Ind.—August Meyer, formerly of Lansing, Mich., has been engaged by Adam Beehler as grower.

ROSES

RED RADIANCE—A sport of Radiance that will be welcomed as a valuable addition to the list of greenhouse Roses and will be of greatest value for the garden. Grafted or Own Root, 2¼-in., $2.50 per doz., $17.50 per 100, $150.00 per 1000.

MRS. WM. R. HEARST—A clear, dark pink sport of My Maryland. The equal of Maryland in habit and growth, and far superior to it in color. Grafted or Own Root, 2¼-in., $2.50 per doz., $17.50 per 100, $150.00 per 1000.

HOOSIER BEAUTY—Deep, rich crimson in color. We have a large stock of this new Rose and can fill your order to your satisfaction. Grafted, 2¼-in., $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100, $140.00 per 1000; OwnRoot, 2¼-in., $1.50 per doz., $10.00 per 100, $90.00 per 1000.

HADLEY—With both Hadley and the above-named variety we have to offer the two best red Roses in commerce. Grafted, 2¼-in., $1.50 per doz., $12.50 per 100, $120.00 per 1000; Own Root, 2¼-in., $1.00 per doz., $7.50 per 100, $60.00 per 1000.

CARNATION NOVELTIES

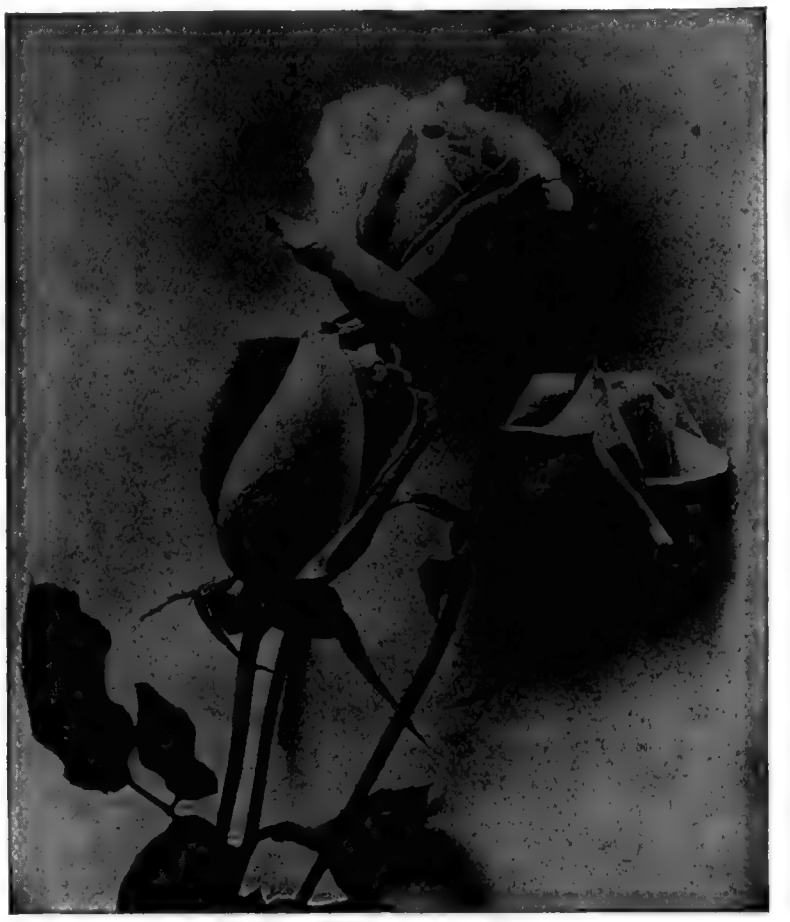
MISS THEO—(Littlefield & Wyman.) We have 4000 plants of Miss Theo growing here at Cromwell. We can verify the assertion that it is the most prolific Carnation on the market today. The color is true rose pink. The flower is well formed, but not large. It will be a profitable variety. Rooted Cuttings, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

NEBRASKA—We can fill your order for this new scarlet. It appears to us to be one of the finest of the novelties of the year. Rooted Cuttings, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

RED WING—From observation of this variety growing, we believe it is well worth a thorough trial. It looks prolific and the flowers are of fine quality. Rooted Cuttings, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

ALICE—By far the finest light pink Carnation from the standpoint of freedom and profitableness. We have excellent stock for February delivery. Rooted Cuttings, $6.00 per 100, $50,00 per 1000. We cannot accept orders for Good Cheer for earlier than March 15th delivery.

THE BIG FOUR



OPHELIA, DOUBLE WHITE KILLARNEY, KILLARNEY BRILLIANT and MRS. AARON WARD—The four best greenhouse Roses for general growing, $12.50 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

These varieties are better grafted than own root. If wanted on own roots, the price is $7.50 per 100, $60.00 per 1000.

MRS. GEORGE SHAWYER and LADY ALICE STANLEY—On their own roots, $7.50 per 100, $60.00 per 1000.

BEDDING PLANTS

COLEUS, HELIOTROPE, SALVIA, PETUNIAS, FUCHSIAS and other stock. VINCA VARIEGATA cuttings. Write us your wants. Refer to the classified ads.

GOLDEN GLEAM OUR NOVELTY FOR 1916

As a novelty of the year we are offering a seedling of our own raising. It is a bright, glistening yellow in color; medium dwarf in growth. Fully as good two to a plant as single. Matures Oct. 20th to Nov. 1st. Second crown buds were the best. 2¼-in., $1.50 per doz., $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

LAST SEASON'S NOVELTIES

Rooted Cuttings, $7.00 per 100, $60.00 per 1000.

CRYSTAL GEM—A fine, pure white. Midseason.

EARLY FROST—The best early white variety. We have a big lot ready for delivery.

GOLDEN QUEEN—The best yellow since Chrysolora. This is the general opinion.

MARIGOLD—A fancy 'Mum for the careful grower. When well done, it is the best yellow variety in commerce.

MODELLO—Bronze, maturing in early November. Handsome as a Cactus Dahlia.

WHITE CHIEFTAIN—For early delivery we offer fine stock of this high-class variety at $4.00 per 100, $35.00 per 1000. This means January and February delivery, and we have ample stock for your requirements.

GOLDEN EATON—Better in color than Yellow Eaton. One of the finest of the new 'Mums. Early delivery, $4.00 per 100, $35.00 per 1000.

A NEW POMPON

PEACE—A beautiful shell pink; one of the finest varieties ever offered. 2¼-in., $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100.

SINGLES

RAMONA—Deep, rich bronze in color. One of the finest varieties ever offered. Exhibited in the winning five vases at Cleveland. 2¼-in., $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100.

DUSKY MAID—Orange-bronze in color. Well-built, semi-double flowers carried well apart on spray. The finest variety for Thanksgiving. 2¼-in., $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100.

The Cromwell Gardens Set and the Mount Greenwood Set are offered in our catalog. Look them over. They are improvements on existing varieties and worthy of general growing.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus

We make a specialty of seedlings. We offer now 50,000 seedlings ready for potting. Big, strong seedlings. Big value at $8.00 per 1000; 2500 at $7.50 per 1000; 5000 at $7.00 per 1000.

We deliver anywhere, all charges paid, for 50c. per 1000 in addition to price quoted.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Roses continue scarce, but there is an abundance of carnations, lilies and all kinds of bulbous stock. During the latter part of the week the windows of all the downtown stores were trimmed with novelties for St. Valentine's day.

Various Notes.

Henry J. Doll, of 969 Douglas avenue, is preparing to make extensive improvements and additions to his range.

Lawrence Hay, of East Providence, is cutting some fine acacia, for which he finds a ready sale.

The Lapham Floral Co. has given a chattel mortgage of $1,800 to Matilda F. Lapham on the contents of the greenhouses, 6 Fales street, Central Falls, and on the store at 72 Broad street, Pawtucket.

John Macrae has a fine bench of acacia, from which he is cutting a good supply.

E. L. Lemery, of Woonsocket, left last week for a several weeks' stay at Jacksonville, Fla. W. H. M.

NEWPORT, R. I.

A paper on "The Propagation of Roses," by E. Kempenaar, was the feature of the regular meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society. A comparison of the value of various budding stocks used—canina, Manetti, multiflora and rugosa—was made, and Mr. Kempenaar showed specimens of June and August buddings. Many members were present and a general discussion of the subject followed the reading of the paper. At the next meeting papers will be read by William Mackay and Arthur W. Potter, Jr., the former on "Grapes Under Glass" and the latter on "Rock Gardens and Rock Plants." A committee was appointed to secure a lecturer for an early date, possibly a member of the faculty of the Rhode Island State College or E. H. Wilson, of the Arnold Arboretum, Jamaica Plain, Mass.

An agreement has been reached in the controversy of Margaret J. Gibson, wife of Thomas J. Gibson, against Joseph Gibson and others, whereby an early settlement can be made. On motion one day last week in the Superior court before Judge Barrows a decree was entered by which the greenhouse property on Malbone road is to be sold. W. H. M.

The Sensational Yellow Mum of the Year MRS. M. R. MORGAN

A PURE GOLDEN YELLOW EATON

We guarantee this to be the best-selling late-midseason Yellow Mum on the market

Took Third Prize at big Cleveland Flower Show in Big Yellows. Packs and travels perfectly. It is such a profitable variety to grow that we grew no other variety at our greenhouses last season. It is an intensely brilliant yellow sport of Yellow Eaton and finishes the season at Thanksgiving. We find no equal as a keeper.

NEPHROLEPIS JOHN WANAMAKER

Introduced August, 1915

The Wanamaker Boston has more than made good. Everyone who has received early shipments from us has been greatly pleased with the variety and repeat orders have been coming in daily. We have a very large stock. A "sport" from Nephrolepis Scholzeli, with longer, narrower, gracefully drooping fronds. It is not so compact in growth as Scholzeli and therefore does not decay in the center, and is a durable house fern. It is a rapid grower, making an abundance of fronds, and is quite distinct from any other Nephrolepis. The following prices are for immediate and spring delivery:

2¼-inch pots, strong plants, $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.
4-inch pots, strong plants, $25.00 per 100; $225.00 per 1000.
6-inch pots, strong plants, $50.00 per 100.
8-inch pots, strong plants, $12.00 and $15.00 per doz.
Large specimens, $2.50, $3.00 and $4.00 each.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

Last week was one of pleasure to the florists, for all had the carnival spirit, which was not dampened until the rush for Valentine's day started. Stock of all kinds was plentiful and there was a large demand, perhaps the largest on record, for St. Valentine's. All flowers sold well, violets, lilac, roses and bulbous stock predominating. The quality of stock was of the best and no trouble was experienced in disposing of the appropriate heart-shaped boxes and fancy hampers that have made a success of Valentine's day for the retailers. Some exceedingly pretty creations were to be had. As to price, they ranged from $2 to $10 each. A notable fact established itself, that the trade this year purchased a better class of stock than in former years.

Various Notes.

Holm & Olson had a pleasing window display, valentines of all kinds being featured. This firm had for the day a large quantity of cattleyas and lilacs, and no difficulty was experienced in disposing of them.

William Swanson had a banner cut of violets and he states that he could have disposed of twice as many. He is bringing in some exceptionally fine stock.

H. Nielsen, of Hazel Park, is bringing into the market as fine a lot of sweet peas as have been seen. They surely are well grown and Mr. Nielsen has no trouble in finding a sale for them.

The O. R. Eckhardt Co. reports out-of-town business as being heavy and a large batch of good stock coming into the market.

The St. Paul florists attended in a body the Minnesota State Florists' Association's dance held at Minneapolis. A special car was chartered and the Holm & Olson carnival club was on hand in costume, accompanied by its fife and drum corps, which furnished the entertainment going over.

O. J. Olson has been confined to his home for the last few days.

George Bates, of Holm & Olson, is at the hospital and will no doubt have to undergo an operation before his condition can improve.

Carl Clarine, of Faribault, attended the International Bowling Tournament last week and incidentally called on his friends. C. R. F.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Colder weather has put a slight check upon the supply of stock and now the receipts are not much larger than the demand. Shipping business is good and retail business generally is excellent.

St. Valentine's day, on the whole, proved fairly satisfactory, but at the close of the day's business there was a large quantity of stock, peculiarly in demand on that day, that was left over. The extremely cold weather probably was the reason, for the people hesitated to buy and wear flowers when the temperature was so low that any kind of bloom was likely to freeze in a few minutes. Roses, with the exception of Beauties, are still scarce, but should be more plentiful before long. All other seasonable stock is in good supply. Dutch hyacinths have been added to the list of bulbous stock.

Club Meeting.

The Cincinnati Florists' Society, at its regular meeting, at Labold & Newburgh's, passed a resolution instructing the secretary to advise our mayor and the governor of the state of Ohio that in their Mothers' day proclamations they should call the attention of the public to the propriety of using a bright flower for mothers living and a white flower for mothers dead, instead of the usual white carnation. The secretary was also instructed to ask all florists' clubs in Ohio to take the same action in their respective localities.

After the meeting the members sat down to a Dutch lunch and refreshments, while three dusky entertainers provided the merriment for the evening.

Various Notes.

William H. Gardener, who recently purchased the Knopf establishment at Richmond, Ind., has been sending some excellent carnations to C. E. Critchell.

Fred Brueggemann recently went to Newcastle to take charge of the P. J. Olinger place there, as manager. His friends wish him success in his new venture.

E. G. Gillett disposed of over 20,000 single violets for St. Valentine's day, as well as a good lot of other seasonable stock.

Ed. Buschle is recovering rapidly from his recent operation.

Among recent visitors were A. M. Hanson and A. M. Anderson, representing the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago; Geo. Hampton, representing Jos. G. Neidinger Co., Philadelphia; A. Ringier, representing the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago; S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia, and H. J. Vanderhorst, St. Marys, O.

DIRT BANDS

Very soon every grower will be making free use of dirt bands for the growing of all plants. Certainly, no florist can afford to pass them by. They are time and money savers, producing better plants at less cost and with less labor. It simply is a question of getting the best band.

Our new READY-USE dirt band tells its own story. Send a postal for free samples and see how it does it. It comes to you ready to set the plant in, which means saving of very valuable time required to fold the ordinary strips of paper commonly offered for bands.

We make plain bands, too, from high-grade, hard finish stock. Samples will be sent. Compare them with others and put them to any test. It is not how cheap, but how good, is our motto.

PRICES OF PLAIN SQUARE DIRT BANDS.

	1000	5000	10,000	20,000	50,000	100,000

4-in.....	1.10	5.40	10.20	21.00	48.00	92.00

Plain bands require folding, but our simplified instructions make it easy.

PRICE OF READY-USE SQUARE DIRT BANDS.

	1,000	5,000	10,000	50,000	100,000
2x2x2-in....	$1.00	$4.00	$ 7.50	$35.00	$60.00
2½x2½x2-in.	1.10	5.00	9.00	42.50	85.00
3x3x2-in.	1.25	6.00	10.00	47.50	92.00

Our ready-use bands are complete and ready to set up. The lap is glued down and each band opens up square. No folding required, nor time lost in setting them up.

Send a postal for free samples of our bands and decide for yourself. All orders positively cash. State whether express or freight shipment. We guarantee satisfaction.

NOT CAST IRON

CAST IRON BOILERS WASTE FUEL

I had a cast iron 8-section boiler before, but was afraid it would crack to pieces. The Kroeschell Boiler is certainly a fuel-saver. My coal bill to heat 5000 sq. ft. of glass surface with your boiler is less than last winter's coal bill, when I only had 2050 sq. ft. of glass, heated with the 8-section cast iron boiler.

Your boiler burns any kind of fuel. I would not have another boiler than a Kroeschell, and will recommend whenever I get a chance.

Greenhouse Heating.

Subscribers are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

STEAM BOILER—WATER HEAT.

I asked you a short time ago about a small steam boiler which I wish to use for heating my greenhouse, and your reply appeared in The Review of February 10, under the title of "Boiler Has Ample Capacity." In my inquiry I stated that the boiler is three feet in diameter, that it contains twenty-five 3-inch tubes, six feet long, and that its grate surface is two feet ten inches by three feet four inches. I also asked whether this boiler would be large enough to heat a greenhouse 20x75 to 60 degrees, but I neglected to state that I wanted to heat with hot water, using this steam boiler. What would its rating be, and how would you pipe the house for hot water? Would not the hot water system make night firing easier and also allow the boiler to be set higher?

The house will be built in the spring, and I wish to use this boiler till I build a second house, or until I build a third house if the boiler is large enough for two such houses. When the present boiler will no longer suffice, I shall purchase a modern, hot water, steel boiler.

D. A. M.—Pa.

The previous reply referred to was given with the understanding that the steam boiler was to be used for steam heating. As was implied, the use of steam is not advisable in small greenhouses, owing to the frequent attention necessary. Provided its construction adapts it for use as a hot water heater, the amount of glass surface which can be heated with the boiler will be about the same whether a steam or a hot water heating system is used. The boiler in question will probably handle 1,500 to 1,600 square feet of radiation without difficulty.

To heat the house described to 60 degrees in zero weather, provided there is no glass in the side walls and the roof is reasonably tight, we would use three 2½-inch flow pipes, placing one on each plate and the other two or three feet below the ridge. Connect each of the flows on the plates with three 2-inch returns, which may either be on the walls or under outside benches. For the other flow pipe use four 2-inch returns, which may be placed underneath the middle bench or benches, or on posts or in the walks

Judging strictly according to mechanical merits, it's the METROPOLITAN PATENTED BOILER you want.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel and less attention than any other boiler on the market.

The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface.

Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit:—Smooth, perfect finished castings. Push nipple connections. Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals. Deep ash pit, making the removal of ashes a slight task. Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean. Grates that are made for hard usage and long service. And above all, they are Fuel Saving, not Fuel Wasting.

We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50 per cent in coal.

Put Your Heating Problems Up to Us. We've Been at it for 44 Years.

if solid beds are used. This would make, including all connections, little if any more than 700 square feet of radiation, thus leaving a good margin of efficiency in the boiler.

It is of less importance to have the boiler several feet below the level of the returns with hot water than with steam. Yet, if the top of the boiler is at least as low as the returns, there will be less trouble about securing a good circulation, and if it can be even lower, all the better.

EXPANSION TANK OVERFLOWS.

Enclosed you will find a sketch of my greenhouses. Can you tell me why the expansion tank boils over, even when the returns are not particularly hot? The expansion tank is connected to the lowest point, and steam forms at the high point when the tank overflows. The return pipes in the large house, house No. 1, are on the walls and have an 8-inch or 10-inch drop toward the boiler. In this house there are two 2-inch flows, each connected to six 2-inch returns, but the two lower returns on both sides do not heat.

The 2-inch return pipe from the residence is connected to the 4-inch greenhouse return about four feet from where it enters the boiler. The expansion tank is connected at the same place. Do I need more pipe in house No. 1, or would a circulator heat the pipes? I am able to maintain a temperature of 48 to 60 degrees in zero weather. Would a mercury generator overcome the trouble at the expansion tank, or should the expansion tank be connected to the highest point? The boiler is below the return pipes.

C. W. S.—Ohio.

The drawing shows house No. 1 to be 30x95 feet and the radiation is provided by two 2-inch flow pipes, each of which supplies six 2-inch returns. It is stated that the present radiation provides from 48 to 60 degrees, presumably varying with the outside temperature, but the temperature desired in the houses is not stated. As now arranged, each of the 2-inch flow pipes in house No. 1 supplies, including its own surface, something over 400 square feet of radiation, which is twice as much as can be handled to advantage by a 2-inch flow pipe. We would consider the radiation about right for 50 degrees in zero weather, but would use in the house three 2½-inch flow pipes and eleven 2-inch returns for 50 degrees. If a temperature of 60 degrees is desired, three 2½-inch flows and fifteen 2-inch returns will be needed.

In house No. 2, which is a lean-to 15x50 feet, there are one 2-inch flow and five 2-inch returns, in addition to the main flow and return pipes leading to house No. 1. For this house we would use one 2½-inch flow and four 2-inch returns for 50 degrees and six returns for 60 degrees, provided the flow and return pipes to house No. 1 are as large as 2½-inch. We would use either one 4-inch or three 2½-inch main flows and returns for house No. 1, for 60 degrees.

The principal trouble appears to be from attempting to carry 400 square feet of radiation in house No. 1 with 2-inch flow pipes. This, of course, checks the circulation of the water, causing it to boil, and, since the expansion tank is connected with the returns, it is not strange that the trouble reported occurs. We would arrange the flow pipes to run downhill and connect the expansion tank with the highest part of the system. Then, if a temperature of 50 degrees is all that is required, we would substitute 2½-inch for the 2-inch flows in the large house. If 60 degrees must be provided, we would use the radiation suggested above or attach a generator.

OIL FOR FUEL.

We should like to know whether it is practical to use fuel oil in greenhouse heating. If so, at what price would oil be as cheap as steam coal at $6 per ton? Is there an oil burner which would be reliable if used in a hot water boiler manufactured by the American Radiator Co., and which would not require the services of a fireman for eight to ten hours? Do you know of any concern that manufactures a trustworthy oil burner?

C. F. B.—Wash.

While there may be some improved form of oil burners on the market, I do not know of any that are adapted for use in small boilers and that do not require a regular attendant. I have no personal knowledge of the use of fuel oil with the boilers mentioned, but do not see why the result would not be the same as with other boilers.

The Market.

From a general standpoint business was good last week and there was every indication of a good St. Valentine's day trade. More seasonable weather is with us and there is a certain briskness to business. Cut flowers do not appear to be more plentiful. A marked shortage of short-grade stock is noticed, especially in roses, which is needed for funeral work. Consignments arrive in good condition and the quality of stock is satisfactory. Roses are leading, and such varieties as Ophelia, Sunburst, Ward, Russell, Hoosier Beauty and Maryland sell splendidly. Double White Killarney is good at this time. Carnations are in fine condition, but not at all overplentiful. The large White Wonder and Pink Delight carnations sell nicely. Violets are selling better. Orchids and gardenias are fine and move fairly well. Sweet peas are more plentiful now and some fine orchid-flowering varieties are seen. A few good calendulas are on the market. Jonquils and daffodils are becoming plentiful and sell well. Paper Whites are abundant and sell well, being used considerably in funeral work. Yellow narcissi move easily. Valley is good and moves well, and calla lilies are unusually welcome. Daisies, Romans and primulas are used extensively in basket work. Yellow and white tulips sell well. Green goods have received quite a call. Potted plants, such as cyclamens, primulas, bulbous stock of all kinds, azaleas and rhododendrons, sell freely. Ferns and palms meet with a ready sale.

Various Notes.

Salter Bros. last week had a conspicuous window display consisting of a mammoth red heart surrounded by corsage boxes of that shape. Other store windows were prettily arranged over Sunday for the old-fashioned lovers' day.

The Rochester Floral Co. last week had decorations for one of the largest weddings of the season. The decorations at the house were fine and the bouquets were exceptional.

An unusual attraction is promised at the next monthly meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association. Miss Amy L. La Vigne, a daughter of one of our florists and a graduate of the Emerson College of Oratory, of Boston, Mass., will entertain the members and friends. Miss Anna Cleary will give vocal selections, as well as George T. Boucher.

James Vick's Sons report business as unusually active. Store trade is picking up wonderfully and the mail-order department is loaded with orders. This concern is most optimistic over the prospects of spring business.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Now that the bulbous stock is coming into the market more freely, the prices of other flowers are dropping and most of them have reached the average for this time of the year. There is a slight scarcity of roses, however, and the price of these is high, though considerably lower than a few weeks ago. Calla lilies are more plentiful than a month ago and bring a good price. Easter lilies also are more abundant and of good quality. Stocks are becoming more plentiful. Blooming plants have sold well during the last two weeks and there continues to be a good demand for ferns. The Valentine business was satisfactory, as a rule, but business is a trifle quiet outside of funeral work. There is less social work than usual this year.

Various Notes.

Jacob H. Harvey, who has been ill with the grip for the last five or six weeks, has gone to Atlantic City for a couple of weeks, accompanied by Mrs. Harvey.

Philips Bros. had a good week of funeral work and orders for wedding decorations. Special Valentine's day boxes and baskets sold well.

Henry A. Strobell made a specialty of flower valentines and reports a good business.

George Penek had a unique F. T. D. window display last week. In one corner of the window, near the front, was a small table upon which was a telegraph key. Seated in a chair was a doll, representing an operator. Wires ran from this key to a telegraph pole about three and one-half feet high. Several other poles carried the wires to the opposite corner of the window, where there was another table, telegraph apparatus and operator. Near the apparatus at the front of the window was a sign with these words: "Flowers delivered anywhere in the United States and Canada on two hours' notice." R. B. M.

Hancock, Mich.—Mrs. Oscar Ongie has sold her florists' business to the A. M. York estate, which does a large business in seeds, nursery stock and cut flowers.

The Market.

Bright weather last week brought out quality blooms for St. Valentine's day business in great numbers. The stock is in better condition at this writing than it has been since December. Carnations, lilies, sweet peas and all bulbous stock are plentiful. Roses are more plentiful, but they are not in oversupply. Sweet peas are arriving in good order, the Spencer varieties taking the lead in production and price. Freesias are in good supply and orchids are plentiful and bring good prices. Gardenias and valley have a good demand. The advance orders for St. Valentine's day were numerous and at this writing the local florists are beginning to feel the effects of systematic advertising. All hands have been extremely busy filling valentine orders, but it is too early to determine the volume of business done for this day. Novelties, such as heart-shaped baskets filled with violets, valley, pansies and spring flowers, and corsages in heart-shaped boxes, have taken the lead in the day's demand, while red roses have sold in great quantities, as well as potted plants of spring flowers.

Violets have been extremely plentiful and proved popular at $2 per hundred. In spite of the colder, healthier weather prevailing, the death list was long last week, and funeral work was heavy. Green goods, especially Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri, are scarce and of high price.

Various Notes.

Walter E. Cook, representing Stumpp & Walter Co., New York, was a business caller last week.

The Doswell Floral Co. picked a fine lot of single violets for the St. Valentine's day trade.

F. J. Knecht & Co. are cutting some special Russell roses. R. F.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

The Market.

Although stock has become more plentiful, business continues good and there is little cause for complaint. The market is well supplied with roses, carnations, daffodils and tulips. Sweet peas are scarce and orchids are in good demand. Easter lilies and white carnations have sold well, owing to the large amount of funeral work. Paper Whites are scarce and sell quickly. The price of daffodils and tulips has taken a drop. Potted Von Sion daffodils find a ready sale.

Various Notes.

Everything is in fine shape at the greenhouses of Charles Bourne. He has a fine stock of spring plants and the Easter plants are coming along nicely, being timed just right for Easter.

The Baker Floral Co. has its houses crowded with plants for Easter. The lilies are fine and will come on properly for Easter. There are 3,000 roses potted for the Easter trade. Carnations at this place are now in full crop.

The W. E. Day Co. had an attractive St. Valentine's day window display.

Warner Bultmann has been busy with funeral work. He made up twenty to twenty-five pieces in one day. All hands are kept busy here. H. F. B.

DIRT BANDS—Experience in Using Them

H. B. WEAVER
Carnations Mignonettes
Sweet Peas Cut Flowers United Phone.

Bird-in-Hand, Pa., March 23, 1914.

F. W. Rochelle & Sons,
Chester, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your query would state that I planted seedling stock plants and snapdragon cuttings in the first lot of bands that I received from you early in January.

We took some of these out and planted them where they are to remain about the 15th of February. They made GOOD GROWTH while in the bands, and transplanted AS THOUGH they had never been moved at all.

I have now about 14,000 carnation plants started in 2-in. bands which are making a RAPID GROWTH, scarcely losing a plant in transplanting from the sand.

I also have about 20,000 aster plants transplanted in 2-in. bands which can stay there till time to plant out of doors WITHOUT FEAR OF BECOMING ROOT BOUND, as would be the case if I used 2-in. pots.

Plants SELDOM BECOME ROOT BOUND enough to injure them IN THE DIRT BANDS, and DO NOT REQUIRE NEAR THE AMOUNT OF ATTENTION that a pot plant does, in watering, shifting, transplanting, etc.

I make my bands and set them in flats, as I make them up, each flat holding 117.

When we get crowded indoors it takes but a short time to move the flats to a cold frame, where we harden them off before setting them in the field.

One man can set MORE THAN ANOTHER TIME AS MANY (twice as many) plants in the field from these bands and flats than he can from pots, and after he is through DOES NOT HAVE THE BOTHER OF GATHERING UP, CLEANING, and STORING AWAY A LOT OF POTS.

I believe anyone using these bands ONCE WILL BECOME A REGULAR CUSTOMER.

Yours truly,
H. B. Weaver.

Mr. Weaver grows carnations, mignonette, sweet peas, asters, etc. He ordered 5,000 Dirt Bands the first year, 60,000 the second year, 70,000 last year and has just ordered 50,000 more and a further order of 50,000.

PAPER POTS—Experience in using them.

BLACKADAR & CO.

Dauphin, Manitoba, Can., Dec. 4, 1915.

F. W. Rochelle & Sons, Chester, N. J.

Gentlemen: * * * We would say that we used all the Paper Pots we got from you to raise tomato plants.

Our weather is often very severe late in May, therefore we have to keep them inside and we were certainly very satisfied with the splendid results obtained from the Paper Pots.

In fact, WE DID NOT HAVE HALF ENOUGH TO FILL OUR ORDERS. WE CHARGED EXACTLY TWICE THE AMOUNT we did other years and yet our CUSTOMERS INSISTED ON HAVING THOSE IN PAPER POTS.

In our hot sun they never wilted.

We reserved a few for Primulas and certainly have some fine ones.

It was easier to keep them watered and growing during the hot months.

Wishing you success.

Yours truly,
Blackadar & Co.

Florist.

Reidsville, N. C., Nov. 2, 1915.

F. W. Rochelle & Sons,
Chester, N. J.

Gentlemen: I used some of your Paper Pots last spring, which were highly satisfactory.

I grew Roses, Salvias, Verbenas, Petunias and Geraniums in the Paper Pots for retail trade.

THEY NEARLY DOUBLED MY SALES.

I always had fine thrifty plants to send out and I delivered them in the pots, which insured them reaching my patrons in good condition.

I never had a complaint of flowers dying or wilting.

I buy some of my plants, which I set right in the pots.

They are ready for delivery within a few days.

When plants are set out there is no collecting pots or watering to be done.

I intend to use them altogether next season.

Yours very truly,
Mrs. W. T. Barber.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business conditions last week may be described as being unsettled but fair, largely on account of the uncertain weather, which had its effect on the supply of cut flowers and the demand. One day stock may be plentiful and prices low; the next day conditions may be reversed. St. Valentine's day, while creating no special demand, served to use some extra flowers. Roses, with the exception of red and short white for funeral work, were sufficient for all demands. Carnations in colors were shy, but white was to be had in any quantity. The demand for violets was not so large as was expected and some were left over, especially in the poorer grades. Beauties, while in good demand, could not be had at any price. Peas sold satisfactorily, but they were not of the best quality. Valley was sold out completely, but other bulbous stock, such as daffodils, tulips, etc., was not in heavy demand. Cattleyas, gardenias and novelties sold well. Some myosotis was to be had, but there was not enough of it to supply the demand. Forsythia and acacia have made their appearance and sell well. Pussy willow is in good demand. Smilax has been rather hard to secure, but other greens are plentiful.

Club Meeting.

The cold weather of February 14 kept many members away from one of the most interesting club meetings held this season. William E. McKissick gave an interesting talk on business from the wholesaler's point of view, which was well received. Mr. McKissick spoke of the methods of doing business today as compared with those formerly practiced. He also spoke of coöperation of those engaged in the trade. A number of valuable points were brought out that could be used to advantage by members of the trade.

The nomination of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President, James Hamilton; vice-president, J. M. Rider, W. E. McKissick, Albert Fiedler, Thomas Stevenson; corresponding secretary, N. F. Flitton; financial secretary, George Talbot: treasurer, F. G. Burger; librarian, C. M. Wagner. The essay committee announced that at the next meeting Otto Thilow, of Philadelphia, would address the club.

The transportation committee in charge of arrangements for the club's attendance at the Philadelphia National Flower Show reported that it was in communication with the Washington club relative to joining that city's members in the trip. The definite date for the trip will be decided on at the next meeting.

Various Notes.

The Seidewitz Flower Shop had a fine lot of myosotis for St. Valentine's day trade and it was easily disposed of. Basket arrangements of plants also were featured with good results.

Jesse P. King, of Mount Airy, is shipping fine orchid-flowering sweet peas to the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.

William H. Bode, of Govans, a retired florist and member of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, died at his home February 8.

Henry Lehr, who has been ill with rheumatism and the grip, while still confined to the hospital, is much improved and expects to be out in a short time.

Samuel Feast & Sons are showing some of the first forsythia of the season. Good potted lilacs were conspicuous and the window decoration for Valentine's day was appropriate and effective.

Edwin A. Seidewitz left February 15 to attend the Rotary conclave at Harrisburg, Pa., to complete arrangements for the convention to be held in this city February 22.

Pierce & Co. report a good Valentine's day trade and a long list of out-of-town orders.

The Hamilton Flower Shop had an effective window for Valentine's day. The floor was covered with green velvet, upon which was displayed baskets of cut flowers and plants. W. F. E.

Akron, O.— A street car recently ran amuck in Akron and crashed into the boiler room of McFarlands, Florists, at 491 Wooster avenue, where its wild journey came to a sudden end against the side of McFarlands' prize boiler. The heating system was out of commission from 9 a. m. to 6:30 p. m., and stoves had to be pressed into service to save the stock from exposure.

With Sunken Path

With Plant Benches

These Sunlight Sashes as adjusted on the greenhouses are removable at will. They may be transferred to Cold Frames or Hotbeds and are incomparably superior to all others for such use.

They are complete in themselves, for they have two layers of glass enclosing an air space that is a better protection than mats and shutters, and does away with buying and using these extra covers. Besides, the plants get all the light all the time and are stronger and earlier, also far more profitable.

CYPRESS SHINGLES BEST

If you would have the whole Greenhouse job standard—uniform throughout—you must put cypress shingles on the boiler room. And for the barn and other buildings about the place, nothing else will do the business and continue to do it, year after year, like cypress shingles.

REMEMBER that every endurance record in the history of shingles was made by cypress shingles.

Read from the report of the U. S. Gov't., in Bulletin No. 95, Forest Service, Department of Agriculture:

A shingle roof on a house at Greenwich, Conn., was said to have lasted 250 years; another in Brooklyn, N. Y., was reported to have lasted 228 years, and still another at Clifton, Staten Island, was still doing business after 200 years of continuous service. Cypress shingle roofs at New Orleans, La., that are 100 years old are no curiosity—plenty of them.

There is no discount on a Cypress shingle roof.

SAN FRANCISCO NOTES.

Two of the designers at the Pelicano, Rossi & Co. store have been seriously ill for several days, and the rest of the force is extremely busy, for there has been considerable funeral work in addition to the St. Valentine business.

Charles Willis Ward, of the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, Eureka, arrived last week from his long trip east, accompanied by R. T. Brown, and spent several days in San Francisco before proceeding to Eureka.

C. Kooyman recently got in a good-sized shipment of imported baskets.

Taylor & Madero, operating as the Presidio Florists at 2179 Union street, have dissolved partnership. Mr. Madero is continuing the business and Gus Taylor is starting another shop on McAllister street, near Fillmore, in the place occupied by Cleis & Jacobsen a couple of years ago.

There is an unusual quantity of odd-lot and bargain business in plants of various kinds. Several shipments of imported stock are being sold off at places about town, one such place being at 86 Second street, where the announcement is made that a large stock of plants just received from Holland is on sale. The offering consists of a large lot of rhododendrons, conifers, boxes, etc., and a large lot of rose plants. Several of the department stores also are offering bargains in the way of rooted plants, especially roses.

NOTICE

To all American Nurserymen and Seedsmen desiring to keep in touch with commercial horticulture in England and the continent of Europe: Your best means of doing this is to take in the

Horticultural Advertiser

Our circulation covers the whole trade in Great Britain and the cream of the European firms. Impartial reports of all novelties, etc. Paper free on receipt of 75 cents, covering cost of postage yearly. As the H. A. is a purely trade medium, applicants should, with the subscription, send a copy of their catalogue or other evidence that they belong to the nursery or seed trade.

CINERARIAS FROM SEED.

I have selected a few cineraria plants of choice colors, in 5-inch and 6-inch pots, and should like to know whether they will make seed and whether the seedlings will come true to the color of the parent plant. Is it necessary to pollinate? Should the colors be separated, or can all stand together on the bench? C. B.—Ohio.

The cinerarias will make seeds in abundance without pollination. It has been found almost impossible to fix the colors in cinerarias, especially in the small-flowered stellata section. If you want to save seed, place the plants apart before any flowers are expanded and place a fine piece of gauze or cheesecloth over the plants to prevent any pollination by insects. Even if you do this you may expect to get a large assortment of colors in your seedlings. C. W.

PLANNING A SMALL RANGE.

I have six city lots, each 50x150 feet, making the total area 150x300 feet. The long way of the tract is east and west. I am planning to build a small range of greenhouses on these lots. Will it be as well to have the houses run east and west as north and south? The east and west direction is more convenient, on account of the way the ground and streets lie. I am just starting and I wish to build the range in two sections, so I can have the boiler between the sections, as shown in the enclosed diagram. You will notice that in the diagram the six houses run east and west. Three of them, each 100 feet long, abut on one side of the boiler. The other three, each seventy-five feet long, abut on the other side of the boiler. In other words, the range would consist of three long houses if not cut through crosswise by the boiler shed. D. A. M.—Pa.

So far as the actual direction goes, it makes little difference whether the houses run east and west or north and south. However, instead of building the range in two sections, respectively seventy-five and 100 feet in length, and containing three houses each, with the boiler house between the sections, as is shown in the sketch, I would build three houses 175 feet in length, with the boiler house at the north end if they run north and south, or at the northeast corner if they run east and west. It costs less to build and pipe one long house than two of one-half the size, and there is less waste room. Even though only one house seventy-five feet long is to be built the first year, I would prefer to extend it rather than build another house on the other side of the boiler shed when more glass is desired. SILVER CUP IN CANADA

FOR SKINNER SYSTEM CARNATIONS

From one of our customers, Miller & Sons, Toronto, Canada, we have the following:

"Our Carnations were so fine this season that we showed them at the Horticultural Floral Show, at Toronto, and we won the silver cup against all the florists in Canada. We know that it would have been impossible for us to have done it had it not been for the Skinner Irrigation System."

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

FLORISTS FIGHT FUNGOUS FOES

In fighting fungi or foes in other forms, the most scientific method is the most successful. Modern floriculture is tested and applied science. Progressive florists are practical scientists and will readily appreciate the value, the money-making power, of the facts presented in this article.

THE CONTROL of fungous diseases of floricultural plants in the greenhouse may be effected in three different ways: First, by preventing the fungus from entering the plant; second, by curing plants already diseased; third, by growing disease-resistant plants, or by means of breeding and selecting, so as to make susceptible varieties resistant. At the present time the first method given is generally followed. The preventing of the fungus from entering the plant may be accomplished in a number of ways.

One of the most important facts that the florist must remember in the controlling of greenhouse diseases is cleanliness. Keep your greenhouses in perfect condition and you will rarely suffer from serious losses.

A Sanitary Greenhouse.

A good habit to cultivate is to pick up all the fallen leaves and rubbish you see in the greenhouse. It is a habit well worth while instilling in the minds of all employees working about the establishment. There is absolutely no reason why a greenhouse should not be kept as neat as the shop. Plants, like human beings, should be kept in a thoroughly sanitary environment in order to thrive. You can control, to a large extent, black spot of roses, one of the most common diseases in the greenhouse, by gathering the infected leaves on the plants and on the benches.

Under the general head of cleanliness be sure to include the removal and destruction of affected parts, such as leaves, twigs or whole plants, the avoidance of disease-bearing material, as old soil, and the prevention of wounds by careful handling. For example, the fungus causing branch-rot of carnations cannot attack sound plants, but enters only when wounds are present.

The selection of seeds and cuttings is, in many cases, the easiest and most natural method of control. How many florists know, when they purchase seeds, under what conditions and in what localities the seed plants were grown, the percentage that will germinate, or what disease may be carried on these seeds? No doubt a number of serious diseases are carried from one locality to another through seeds and cuttings. One of the best examples of a serious disease being disseminated by cuttings throughout the country is the snapdragon rust, which has now been reported from a large number of states. It is known that fungi are found on the seeds of several plants, which in one case cause a serious damping off, while later another fungus causes a destructive wilt in the field.

Clean Seed and Clean Soil.

Always select your seeds and cuttings only from the strongest and healthiest individuals and never send out seeds or cuttings from diseased plants. Seed selection is practiced to a considerable extent in other fields, but there is no line of disease-control requiring more attention, at the present time, among the florists.

Not knowing under what conditions the seeds you obtain have been raised, you must resort to seed disinfection. This has been neglected almost entirely by the florists, although it has many promising possibilities. In seed disinfection the seeds are subjected to a disinfectant long enough to kill the organism causing the disease, but not long enough to kill the seeds. The disinfectants generally used are formalin (forty per cent formaldehyde) and corrosive sublimate.

One of the most formidable groups of organisms, which cause considerable loss at times in the greenhouse, is the soil fungi. The only efficient means of controlling these fungi is by steaming the soil or by the use of a disinfectant. Steaming the soil is, beyond a doubt, the best method of killing all soil fungi. However, few growers will resort to steam sterilization because of the labor and expense involved. The use of a disinfectant like formaldehyde, while not so efficient, is more convenient and less expensive.

Greenhouse Fungicides.

The application of fungicides has probably, in the past, been the most highly developed phase of disease-prevention in plant pathology, but under glass the use of fungicides, especially those which discolor foliage, is limited.

With fungicides you can prevent most of the common spot diseases of floricultural plants, as well as several of the rusts. Among the more common fungicides that you can use in the greenhouse are Bordeaux mixture, ammoniacal copper carbonate, lime-sulphur, potassium sulphide, and flowers of sulphur.

A number of fungi are able to live for several years in greenhouse soil and the constant use of the same house or the same soil tends to increase the disease of that crop. As most growers change the soil in the houses every year, they avoid, to a large extent, the soil fungi. However, if you rotate your crops from one house to another yearly or every two years, you will avoid having trouble from year to year from air-borne fungi.

Two years ago the federal government established the plant quarantine act, and within the last year a number of states have passed quarantine laws. These acts, while seemingly a hardship on men importing and making interstate shipments of floricultural plants, will prevent the introduction of any new diseases. Although the federal act has been established only a short time, already the inspectors have discovered several serious diseases, which under this act have been kept out of the country, by means of a strict embargo on the plants on which the disease has been found. Thus you have been saved the possibility of having to combat a few added diseases which might become serious.

ANNOUNCING A SERIES OF ARTICLES BY

¶The Review is pleased to announce an arrangement whereby Mr. Peltier will contribute a series of articles on the scientific side of plant growing. ¶Mr. Peltier is well known as Associate in Floricultural Pathology at the University of Illinois, where there is the most complete equipment for the study of the problems of florists to be found at any of the institutions of research and learning anywhere in the United States. ¶Mr. Peltier's series, of which the accompanying article is the first, will deal with plant diseases and their control, with insects and insecticides, with soils and fertilizers, and with the general subject of plant breeding and the development of the special qualities that give a plant commercial value. He will answer inquiries.

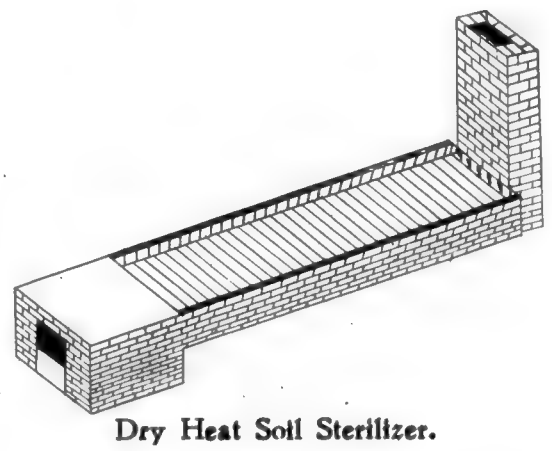
You will find it a much more difficult task to cure a plant already diseased than to prevent the disease. In only a few cases can you actually kill an organism which is already causing injury. Only with mildews, as the mildews on roses, where the fungus is purely superficial, is the use of fungicides beneficial.

Disease-Resistant Plants.

We now come to the third and probably the most important method of disease control; that is, the use of disease-resistant plants. Although the importance of this method has been well understood by scientists, the application of the principle by breeders of floricultural plants has not been taken up to any extent.

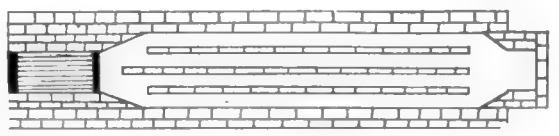
The breeder can undertake this phase of the work from two standpoints: First, the breeding of disease-resistant plants, and second, the selection of resistant plants of susceptible varieties. The principles involved are similar in the two cases.



Before a disease-resistant race can be bred, you must find individual plants resistant to disease. It is a well known fact that species in the same genus exhibit marked differences in resistance to disease. Select and use for breeding purposes the species which appear to be resistant, as well as any of the wild species of floricultural plants, which are resistant in many cases, even though they are much inferior to the highly developed cultivated varieties. Cross these inferior but resistant varieties with the more susceptible varieties and you will develop a productive as well as a resistant race. Even as species in the same genus vary as regards disease-resistance, so also varieties and races of the same species vary.

Immunity from disease of a resistant plant, as a rule, is not permanent. This is especially true where the vegetative parts are used to propagate the plant from season to season. It is, therefore, of importance to the breeder to carry on his work of selection and breeding indefinitely.

Conquest of Carnation Rust.



Among the breeders of floricultural plants the selection of resistant individuals has been carried out to some extent. A number of years ago a carnation rust spread over the whole country in a short time and caused a serious loss. The carnation breeders, after a time, began to discard seedlings which were susceptible to rust and used only the more resistant varieties for crossing. As a result, we find the carnation varieties offered on the market today to be highly resistant to rust, and growers now pay little attention to this once serious disease. What is true of carnation rust is also true of chrysanthemum rust. By discarding susceptible varieties and crossing the more resistant ones, the chrysanthemum rust has practically disappeared in this country.

There is still an unlimited amount of work to be done in this direction

Dry Heat Soil Sterilizer.

by breeders of floricultural plants. Your carnation breeder, for example, should produce a variety of carnations for the south that will be resistant to stem-rot and eelworms. At the present time, growers in certain localities of the south are finding it almost impossible to grow carnations, due to the ravages of these two diseases. The solution of the problem of yellows, which is general throughout the country and increasing in seriousness from year to year, also must be solved by the carnation breeder.

Your aster specialist, in his breeding work, should give you varieties resistant to wilt, a disease which causes, under certain conditions, a serious loss in the field every season. So, also, your violet specialist should develop varieties resistant to root-rot, a disease which has discouraged so many of you.

The production of varieties resistant to these diseases should go hand in hand with breeding for color, size of flower, and other points.

Cause of Disease-resistance.

The question might now be rightly asked by my readers: "What is the cause of disease-resistance in plants?" Immunity may be influenced by mechanical means of protection, rapid growth and the chemical make-up of the plant. Immunity may depend on the character of the plant, on the thickness of the wax layer, cuticle, cork or bark, or on the number, arrangement and location on the leaf or stem of hairs, stomates and lenticels.

For example, the wax layer, hairs, etc., on the leaf may influence the rapidity of drying after watering. We have found in some of our work here that the quick-drying varieties were less susceptible to a certain disease than the slow-drying varieties.

In the case of the carnation plant, the breathing pores on the leaves close quickly and tightly, thus keeping out rust infection. It has also been found that in some carnation varieties, even though the fungus enters the breathing pores, it is unable to penetrate farther.

Not only is the thickness of the cork necessary, but the rapidity with which cork is formed.

In some cases the plants grow so rapidly that they outgrow the effects of the fungus. However, in other plants the reverse is true, in that stunted plants may be more resistant to disease than the more rapid-growing plants.

Of the influence of chemical substances in plants on immunity, little is known. It has been shown, in some cases, that disease-resistance may be influenced by the acidity of the cell sap, the amount of sugars present in the plant, and the production by the plants of toxic-like compounds.

STERILIZATION BY DRY HEAT.

Dry Heat Cheaper Than Steam.

There have been frequent inquiries from small growers for a more economical method of sterilizing soil than the ordinary steam process. While the original method of diffusing live steam under the soil by means of perforated pipes is an excellent thing, it is not practical where the quantity of soil to be sterilized is not sufficient to warrant the investment in the necessary apparatus. Inasmuch as the principle of soil sterilization is simply to heat the soil to a temperature that will exterminate insects, fungi, spores, etc., it is immaterial what form of heat is used. Sterilization by dry heat has been tried and found more adaptable to the need of the small grower who has limited quantities of soil to be treated. The accompanying illustrations and descriptive matter on the dry heat sterilizer appeared in a recent issue of the Gardeners' Chronicle, English.

Figures and Facts.

The perspective view shows a dry heat sterilizer suitable for the purpose. It is constructed of bricks and will consume any kind of fuel. The floor on which the soil is placed is between the stove at one end and the chimney at the other. Under the floor are four parallel flues that radiate the necessary heat. The length of the outfit may vary, according to requirements, up to fifteen feet. The width is four feet six inches. The stove, or furnace, is two feet six inches by three inches, and the furnace entrance is eighteen inches wide. The fireplace is the same width, though it may be wider where it is intended to burn refuse. The connection between the fireplace and the flues is on a continuous line. The middle partition between the second and third flue comes as far as the inner side of the fireplace, so as to divide the current of both smoke and heat. This current is again divided into two more chambers or flues, as shown in the sectional view, as it is essential to have the floor heated evenly.

Heat Smaller; Treatment Longer.

The partitions of the flues are discontinued within eighteen inches from the aperture of the chimney, while the outside walls are built in a funnel shape till they join the inside of the chimney, the height of which rarely need exceed four feet over the floor of the sterilizer, unless the stove is situated between high buildings. The outside walls are raised the height of two bricks from the floor to hold the soil and to facilitate covering it during the process of sterilization. Once the stove is heated thoroughly the temperature of the soil reaches 130 to 140 degrees. It is left for two or three hours, when it is turned and left again for a similar period.

The heat is more accentuated when the soil is in a moist condition and kept covered with bags. The temperature to which the soil is heated by this means certainly is lower than when steam sterilization is practiced, yet one must bear in mind that the length of time the soil is kept at such a temperature compensates for this deficiency, and experience proves that the results are as beneficial to the crops.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Richmond, Va.—Ratcliffe & Tanner, Inc., has filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy in the United States District court. The debts were listed at $48,403.31, and the assets were given as $51,589.26, of which $34,000 is in real estate. The unsecured claims were listed at $28,281. John P. Leary and C. P. Jones, Jr., were appointed co-receivers. With the petition filed was a copy of the minutes of the corporation of the meeting held February 9, at which E. L. Tanner, Fritz Sitterding, Jr., and James A. Don Leavy were present. Among the principal creditors whose claims are unsecured are the following: M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, $192.99; Ralph M. Ward & Co., New York, $100; S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, $968.60; Richmond Cedar Works, Richmond, Va., $37.50; Van Zonneveld Bros. & Philippo, Holland, $423.43; Veldhuyzen, Van Zanten & Zonen, Holland, $369.32; J. D. Hooper, Richmond, Va., $83.22; Hammond Co., Richmond, Va., $56.29; H. Van Craven, Holland, $112.64.

Newark, O.—George L. Miller, who has done business under the name of Miller's Florists, has made a voluntary assignment for the benefit of his creditors. The assignee is E. T. Johnson, 703 Trust building, who will continue the business until a purchaser can be found. The establishment consists of about 25,000 feet of glass, with the usual appurtenances.

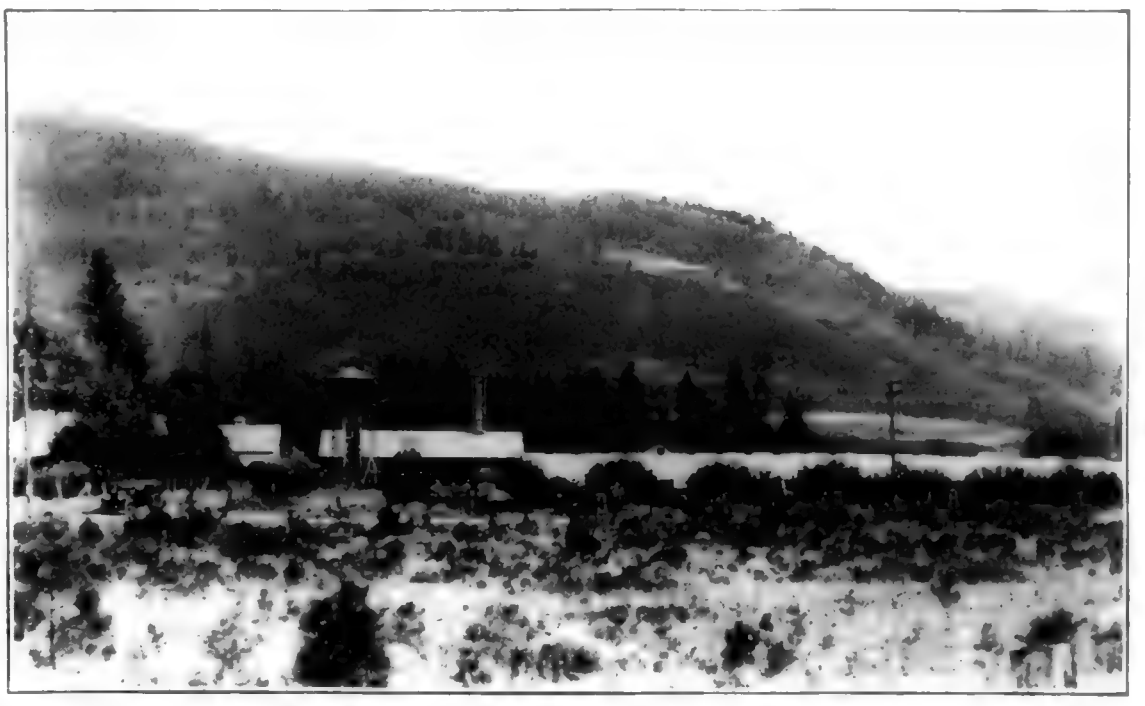
San Francisco, Cal.—With reference to the discontinuance of the business of the Oriental Seed Co., attorneys state that action was commenced against the company in the Justices' court, where judgment was obtained and all the stock and assets of the debtor sold out for $70, which was applied on the partial satisfaction of the judgment, since which date the address of the debtors has been unknown.

End View of the Range of Frache Bros., Grand Forks, B. C.

Superior, Wis.—Miss E. O'Sullivan, who was adjudged bankrupt January 4, has made application for her discharge, making the usual affidavit that she has surrendered all her property. March 18 has been set for the hearing, when creditors may appear and show cause, if any they have, why she should not be discharged of her debts.

AT THE FOOT OF THE ROCKIES.

In the foothills of the Rocky mountains in British Columbia and in the neighboring province of Alberta are situated the three establishments of the largest greenhouse company in the interior of British Columbia. Recent additions have increased the totals considerably, but the latest available figures show that Frache Bros., Ltd., had, at the time they were given, 40,000 feet of glass at Lethbridge, Alberta; 17,000 at Columbia, B. C., and 20,000 at Grand Forks, B. C.



The two accompanying illustrations show part of the concern's greenhouses at Grand Forks, where they have been established since 1902. This place, in the central part of southern British Columbia, with the excellent shipping facilities offered by three railroads, has at present no limit to its market. The climate, in addition, is of the best for the business, which includes not only the growing of flowers for wholesale and retail but also the growing of vegetables.

About six months ago the business was expanding so rapidly that the company offered 24,000 shares of stock at $1, par, per share, to the florists' trade, through the advertising columns of The Review, in order to raise the necessary capital to erect a large additional range of greenhouses at Grand Forks.

TO CARRY OVER CYCLAMENS.

Should cyclamens be kept growing on after they have bloomed in the spring or should they be dried off for a time? When should they be repotted to have them in bloom for next Christmas? C. W. P.—Can.

Do not dry off cyclamens at once after flowering, but keep them watered. As the leaves start to turn yellow, dry off moderately and shake out and repot about the middle of July. It hardly pays to carry over cyclamens unless you want large plants for exhibition purposes. C. W.

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

COHANIZING THE PUBLIC.

George Cohan is beyond question an expert dancer. Fame, such as it is, did not come to him, however, through his ability to execute difficult steps on the stage. In fact, he remained in comparative obscurity until he invented some fancy steps that were more spectacular than they were difficult of execution. The public did not know—did not care to know—that the wily George was putting one over. Other dancers, far more expert than Cohan ever has been, go through with their turns without playing to the gallery, get a scant round of applause from the few appreciative ones, and beat their retreat from the stage with good grace.

George Cohan is a better advertiser—by instinct, maybe—than he has ever been a dancer. "You never can tell" is a phrase that fits his case exactly in relation to theater-goers. He found out—more by accident, perhaps, than foresight—what the amusement-loving public wanted in the dancing line and then did his best to give it to them. The rest was easy—for him. In the meanwhile other dancers really more deserving than he have gone into the discard. No, one never can tell what will attract special attention from the public. And, be he actor or tradesman, one simply must attract attention from the public these days, if he is to play his own little game with any noticeable degree of success. Here's a case in point; and as it has all to do with a florist it should be of interest to florists:

A year and a half ago, to begin at the beginning, someone brought a pineapple top into the greenhouse of August C. Begerow, Inc., of Newark, N. J., and asked H. B. McKnight, the grower for this concern, if he thought it would grow. Mr. McKnight answered affirmatively and started to see what he could do with it. He planted it in sand containing a liberal amount of cow manure and has kept it under favorable growing conditions ever since. By autumn it was an exceedingly attractive plant, with a fruit three-quarters grown. The sequel:

This same pineapple plant was exhibited at the recent flower show given in Newark under the auspices of the Essex County Florists' Club. It was the cynosure of all eyes, as, in the society columns, they say of the reigning belle. It made a distinct hit, you might say—a common, plebeian pineapple top that under ordinary circumstances would have helped fill the garbage can. This pineapple attracted as much attention, seemingly, as it would had it been a century plant in full bloom. Later it appeared in the Begerow window.

It would be difficult to estimate in inches of newspaper space just how much the exhibit was worth in advertising to the Begerow concern. The advertising value must have been considerable, however. Obviously, Begerow, Inc., is not fondling any false hopes as to the commercial possibilities of discarded pineapple tops, but every florist who reads this article should realize that such things have advertising possibilities, particularly as show-window attractions.

CUSTOMERS' COMFORTS FIRST.

Although the foreground looks like a corner of a women's rest room, the illustration on page 19 is a view of a businesslike establishment, the retail store of G. H. Heelas, 318 Main street, Jamestown, N. Y. Mr. Heelas makes the place attractive to his customers through its conveniences, finding that an easy way to draw business.

The store is comparatively new, having been opened a little more than a year ago, but Mr. Heelas has had long experience as a retail florist. Before he opened his own store, he was for fourteen years manager of the shop of the Lake View Rose Gardens, at Jamestown.

The Pineapple as an Advertisement.

ALBANY FLORISTS ADVERTISE.

A post-mortem of St. Valentine's day business brings out the interesting fact that this year many stores resorted to printers' ink to boost the sale of flowers for that day, by advertising the appropriateness of roses, violets, etc., as valentines. Five florists of Albany, N. Y., believed their flowers and the sentiment of the day harmonized so well that they spent good money to tell the people of it through newspapers, billboards and posters. Instead of each doing his own advertising, the five combined their appropriations and thereby were able to put a more concentrated punch into the advertising. The five who coöperated in this publicity were the Rosery Flower Shop, William C. Gloeckner, F. A. Danker, J. T. Travison and H. G. Eyres.

Fifty billboards in all sections of the city were used, each four by nine feet and bearing these words: "Let Flowers Be Your Valentine." A large number of posters, 4x21 inches each and featuring the same slogan, were placed in the store windows. Although only five of the florists and a few of the growers contributed to the advertising fund, every florist was supplied with a poster. After paying for the posters and the billboards there was a surplus. This was expended in the four daily papers. The illustration on page 19 shows the newspaper ad in actual size. "At Your Service for St. Valentine's Day" is the catch line and the names and addresses of the advertisers are displayed in the center. While this advertisement undoubtedly brought good returns, it would have been more efficient if the advertisers in their hurry had not forgotten what they were advertising. The purpose of the ad was to suggest flowers as valentines, yet the word flowers does not appear in the ad, not to mention something more specific, such as roses or violets. Five confectioners or five stationers could have used the same ad by simply changing the names and addresses. That this was a profitable advertisement, however, is the claim; many of the readers evidently knew the names well enough to recognize what was being advertised.

William Gloeckner says the results of the publicity were plainly in evidence all day Saturday and Sunday, and Monday, Valentine's day, although it was below zero outdoors, Mr. Gloeckner says he did a bigger business than a year ago. Being conscientious, Mr. Gloeckner adds: "You probably recognize the slogan, or keynote, of our advertising, 'Let Flowers Be Your Valentine.' I got it out of The Review two weeks ago." Mr. Gloeckner is an all-year advertiser, at present having painted billboards advertising the F. T. D. "flowergram," the National Florist service and himself. The cost of the Valentine's day advertising was less than $50.

THE NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

Hotel Walton has been chosen as hotel headquarters for the National Flower Show, to be held at Philadelphia, March 25 to April 2.

Several additions have been made to the schedule in the way of special prizes. George C. Thomas, Jr., of Chestnut Hill, Pa., offers a prize of $50 in the classes for private growers for the best collection of cut roses, comprising the varieties Killarney or Double Pink Killarney, Lady Alice Stanley, My Maryland, Jonkheer J. L. Mock, Ophelia and Mrs. Aaron Ward. He also offers in the same section a $50 prize for the best collection of climbing roses in flower.

A splendid location has been decided on for the exhibits of retailers, and J. J. Habermehl's Sons, of Philadelphia, have reserved 600 square feet in this section. This reservation, with the others previously reported, insures a good representation of retailers. The orchestra is to be placed on a platform over the aisle leading from the main floor to the main floor extension, a position which is acoustically good and which forms a connecting link between the two floors.

The ladies having charge of the tea garden at the New York show are arranging to visit the Philadelphia show in a body, the friendly rivalry existing between the two cities in regard to their respective tea gardens creating quite an interest in the entertainment features of both shows. The Boy Scouts of Philadelphia will officiate as ushers at the show, and will place themselves at the service of the visitors with their usual ability.

The schedule for the show includes an aquarium exhibit such as never before attempted. Aquatic plants will, of course, be a feature in this section. There are over fifty classes in this section, and it will prove to be a unique feature of the show. The final schedule now is in the printers' hands and will be distributed about March 1. The trade space on the main floor now is practically all reserved, but some excellent locations on the main floor extension, which will be a popular section of the show, are available.

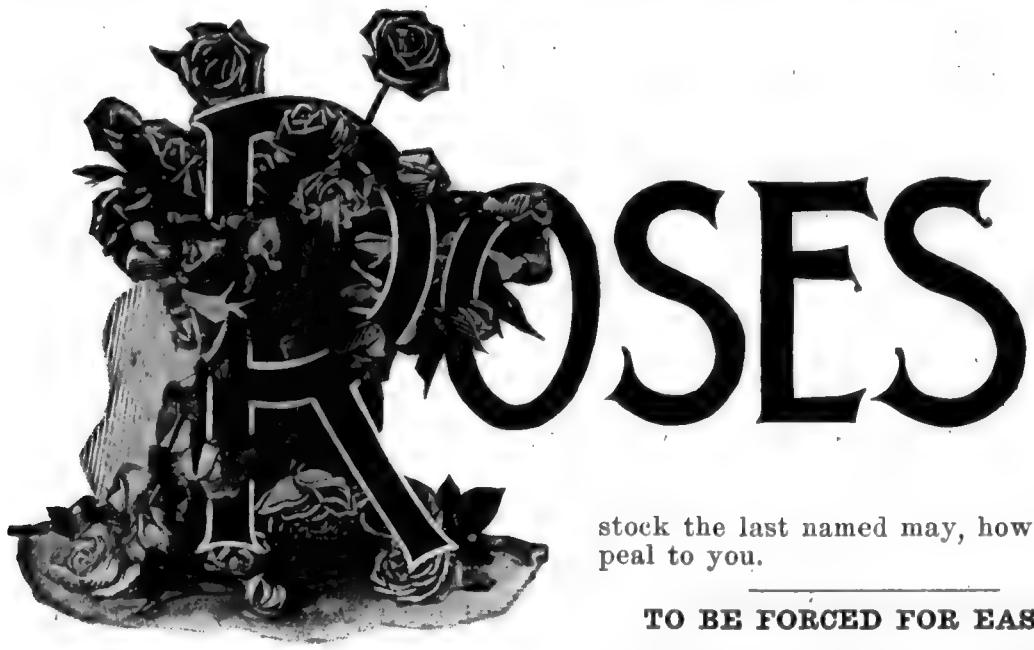
EXTERMINATOR OF MEALY BUG.

Please inform me of the best exterminator for the insects enclosed. They appear to be a kind of mealy bug and are troubling the geraniums as well as other plants. C. A. P.—Me.

If it is mealy bug you have, the best remedy is a force of water from the hose, properly directed through a spray nozzle. The bugs can be killed by fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas, but this is likely to cause some damage unless used with extreme care in a mixed collection of plants. C. W.



THE HILL CHANGES.

In pursuance of its plans for the extension of the business of the Hill family at Richmond, Ind., it has been decided to separate the establishments and July 1 Joseph H. Hill will take over the new carnation range, the Graves place and the Cincinnati retail store. The rose range will retain the name of the E. G. Hill Co. The Indianapolis retail store will continue under this direction but using the distinct corporate title, the Hill Floral Co. A separate corporation also may be organized to carry on the Cincinnati store. A contract has been made with the Lord & Burnham Co., through its Chicago office, for the addition of two houses at the Joseph Hill place, one a growing house 60x400, the other a propagating house 26x212. It will be recalled that a few years ago the original Hill place on the other side of town was turned over to Fred H. Lemon, to be conducted under the name Lemon & Co.

Under the new form of decentralized organization each member of the family and each establishment will specialize, although all will work together in close coöperation. The E. G. Hill Co., with E. G. Hill, Earl Mann and Miss Sarah Hill at its head, will specialize on roses; Joseph H. Hill and his establishment will specialize on carnations, and Fred H. Lemon will continue to center his attention on pot plants and the local retail trade.

Customers' Conveniences in the Store of G. H. Heelas, Jamestown, N. Y.

ROSE ROOTS ARE TOO DRY.

I am sending you under separate cover an American Beauty plant that seems to be affected with some sort of trouble. Can you tell me the cause of the trouble and a remedy for it? The plants are grown in a 150-foot house, on raised benches. The old wood was cut back and the young shoots are subject to this trouble. The foliage becomes light, then begins to droop and finally the plants die. Some time ago I found one affected plant in a bench of healthy ones. Sometimes the leaves first have a dark border, then turn brown and fall off. The night temperature is 58 to 60 degrees.

W. K.—Mo.

From the appearance of the specimen received, the plants were 2 years old, which had been rested for a while by withholding water and then started up again. The plants made new shoots, then turned yellow and died. This often occurs in starting up roses. The old soil around the roots is not thoroughly saturated before removing any of the soil. The new soil takes the water readily, but the ball of old soil around the plants will shed the water. The plants, receiving some moisture through syringing, will make weak shoots, but the soil around the roots is dry, which means that no new roots are made to support the new shoots. As a result the foliage turns yellow and, in time, the plants die. This is probably the cause of the trouble in this case, as the plants adjacent to the dead one may have taken enough water and made good growths at the roots. W. J. K.

GRAFTED ROSE PLANTS BEST.

I want to plant white Frau Karl Druschki roses for summer blooming for the wholesale market. Will own-root or grafted plants do best?

E. C. M.—N. J.

Frau Karl Druschki and all other hybrid perpetual roses are much better in your state when grafted or budded. Such stock possesses greater vigor than that propagated from cuttings, is far more floriferous and, at the same time, winters better. The usual stocks used for working hybrid perpetual roses on are the Manetti or seedling birch, and these are hardier than the roses themselves. There is no room for doubt that in the colder states grafted roses are much superior to own-root stock. If you are looking for the cheapest stock the last named may, however, appeal to you. C. W.

TO BE FORCED FOR EASTER.

Where would you keep potted roses that are to be forced for Easter? I have some of them under a bench, but I think they are too warm there. I also have a coldframe full of rhododendrons which I want in flower for Easter. How long before Easter should these be potted and housed?

F. G. E.—Ohio.

Roses and rhododendrons for Easter should both be in coldframes for some time to come, Easter being late this year. Three to four weeks' forcing would bring in the rhododendrons for a late Easter, while the roses may take six to eight weeks. W. H. T.

THE ROSE ANNUAL.

The yearly volume of the American Rose Society, soon to make its appearance, will mark a distinct departure from the type of society reports as known in this country. It has been edited by J. Horace McFarland with the idea of making it a volume of interest rather than of record.

"Inasmuch as this annual represents a distinct advance in the handling of the literature of rose culture in America," says Editor McFarland, "it is hoped to be the first of a series of annuals which will promote American rose growing in America at least as efficiently as it has been done in England for England.

"Each member of the American Rose Society will receive a copy of the annual in due course. The edition, which is considerable in size, covers only actual needs, and I have no doubt that the book will be out of print within three months. Associate members (those not engaged commercially in rose growing or as florists) can secure both a year's membership, the American Rose Annual and admission to all the rose shows held under the auspices of the society, for $1.

"The articles by Dr. Van Fleet and E. H. Wilson are of unusual value, and it will be found, I think, that the annual presents also, for the first time, the complete story with respect to rose insects and the lamentable lack of scientific attention so far to the control of rose diseases."

ADIANTUM FRONDS ARE BROWN.

The fronds of our maidenhair ferns are always brown, the year around, and the plants have not had a healthy growth for years. Can you tell us the probable cause of this? We transplant them every other year. When we do this we remove all the soil from them and divide them into two or three roots. We transplant them in March or the first part of April, using three parts sandy soil, three parts leaf-mold, one part peat and some oil meal. They make a particularly poor showing the first year after being transplanted.

P. F. C.—Cal.

It is taken for granted that these adiantums are grown for cutting, and the soil is too light in character to grow good fronds for that purpose. Besides, the oil meal is a somewhat doubtful fertilizer for use in such a case. If your soil is of a sandy character, it would be best to omit the leaf-mold, the peat and the oil meal, and use instead one part of dry cow manure to four parts of soil, breaking up the manure by rubbing it through a sieve of 1-inch mesh. Also, after dividing the ferns and replanting them, be careful in watering until the plants get a start, as overwatering during this period is liable to cause a serious check to the root action. W. H. T.

FLY AND MILDEW ON FERNS.

Kindly let me know what is the best way to kill white fly and mildew on Whitmani ferns in the greenhouse. Is it advisable to water the foliage in the evening? K. N.—Cal.

White fly is a rather difficult proposition to handle on ferns, from the fact that this insect is able to stand just about as much as the ferns, and sometimes more when there is much young growth on the plants. Try spraying them with, or dipping them in, a solution of Ivory soap, the solution to consist of half an ounce of the soap to one gallon of water. Use this treatment once a week for several weeks in succession, and always protect the plants from the sun while they are wet with the soap solution.

Flowers of sulphur, applied with a bellows, is the most effective treatment for mildew on plants in general. It is preferable to keep the foliage dry at night, and this is best done by watering early in the day. W. H. T.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

During the early half of last week the reaction from St. Valentine's day was felt to a large extent; the demand in all lines was small, but later business picked up and by the end of the week there was little surplus stock. The street fakers bought much stock Thursday and Friday for Saturday's trade, but that day was cold with high winds and it is doubtful if many of them obtained even the price of their stock. The largest surplus in any one variety was violets, both single and double, which were in poor demand for store trade. Callas were slow movers, but the Easter type sold well. White, in both roses and carnations, were none too plentiful, and colored varieties of both sold well. Valley is a scarcity even at good prices. Bulbous stock sold well, but prices have somewhat lowered. Gardenias have been in good demand. Smilax is scarce, but a good supply of other greens sold well.

Various Notes.

Louis Strunz has been handicapped by an attack of rheumatism, but now is better. He is sending in some fine hyacinths and azaleas.

J. J. Cummings has given up his horse-drawn vehicles and installed a delivery truck and a light car for salesman's use.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. is handling some fine Beauties, which were the first to be had in weeks.

James Glass has been showing fine azaleas. His bulbous stock and cyclamen are of special quality.

At the next club meeting, February 28, J. Otto Thilow will be the lecturer, and it is hoped a large audience will be present to hear his interesting talk.

F. C. Bauer's greenhouses are in fine shape. A large number of 3-inch roses, of which many are Radiance, are in good condition. Mr. Bauer is suffering from an attack of lumbago, which seriously interferes with his work.

Charles E. Meehan and Edwin J. Fancourt, of Philadelphia, were visitors last week. W. F. E.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Notwithstanding the heavy fall of snow, business opened with a good send-off for the week by the impetus given by St. Valentine's day. Innumerable socials created a big demand for violets and sweet peas. Business generally is good, but there continues a shortage of first-class stock. Prices are a trifle above those usually prevailing at this time, the large number of funerals calling heavily upon the supply.

Cold and Coal.

The most serious problem that the greenhousemen are facing at the present time is the inflated price of soft coal. It is many years since prices on coal have been so high in this city, and the dealers give no encouragement for any reduction in price in the immediate future. Most of the growers negotiate for their winter's supply by contract during the summer months, and those who have not used up their contracted supply are still receiving their coal at the contract price. The winter has been such a hard one on the coal pile that several of the growers are getting dangerously near the bottom, and to replenish they will have to pay the ruling price. Last summer the contracts were made at from $3.60 to $3.85 per ton, and last week as high as $8 per ton was quoted.

Various Notes.

An overheated stove in the greenhouse of Antone Piazzo, 296 Killingly street, caused a slight damage to the building from fire.

John J. Riley died at his home a few days ago. He was employed at the Swan Point cemetery for forty-three years. Three sons and two daughters survive him.

George L. Stillman was elected a director of the Automatic Telephone Co., at Westerly, last week.

Lippman last week opened a second retail store, at 222 Westminster street. He reports a big trade at his Blackstone hotel stand.

Vincenzo Bernarducce reports that last week was the busiest he has experienced since going into business. He had more than sixty funeral pieces.

Hopkins, the Florist, who recently purchased the Regester greenhouses, had one of his boilers give out during the cold snap last week, causing a loss of an entire house of lilies containing more than 3,000 plants.

Louis J. Reuter, of Westerly, was a business visitor to New York last week.

Nearly 100 bouquets and designs for the funeral of M. W. Morton, a prominent Masonic official, were well distributed among the dealers last week.

Joseph Foster, son of Mrs. Foster, who is with Vose & Son, of Woonsocket, has received an appointment as midshipman to Annapolis, Md.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

HESTER A. GETZ.

IF you are not a believer in woman as a business man, just note the progress of this Cleveland lady. The firm of Westman & Getz was established in 1902. It soon outgrew its location at Euclid and Eighteenth street, removing to 5423 Euclid avenue, in the heart of Cleveland, as it is known. Miss Westman died in 1911 and Miss Getz alone in five years has developed the business to a point where a larger organization is necessary; so the Westman & Getz Co. has been formed, Hester A. Getz, president and manager; H. W. Dickson, secretary and treasurer, with Charles E. Adams and C. E. Dickson associated. Miss Getz will devote all her energies to buying and selling, while Mr. Dickson will look after the office and financial end, which in this day and age calls for the closest kind of attention.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Dahlias.

It is too early to start dahlia tubers with any idea of planting them out, but there are probably some varieties of which you would like to increase the stock. In that case, some should be placed in heat and cuttings taken off, preferably with a heel, and inserted in a warm propagating bench. There are, of course, objections to the use of green cuttings which cannot be urged against dry roots. Cutworms may destroy them if they are not protected, and they lack reproductive powers when cut off. Still, great numbers are raised in this way and such cuttings will produce as fine plants and flowers as any which can be had from the dry tuber system.

Cannas.

It is too soon to start up the cannas unless you want to get one or two plants of each variety in flower before bedding-out time. You have noted how customers invariably select geraniums, verbenas, petunias or heliotropes that are in flower, in preference to larger and more vigorous plants that are not in bloom. Why not, therefore, flower one or two cannas and give your patrons an idea at least of what color they are buying? Look over the canna roots and cut away all moldy or decaying portions.

Show Pelargoniums.

Give show pelargoniums a final potting now, using a mixture of fibrous loam and cow manure, with some sharp sand and fine bone added. Drain efficiently and ram the soil firmly in the pots. These beautiful spring-flowering plants must have a cool house to be grown successfully. A temperature of 45 degrees at night is ample. As they are liable to be attacked by green aphis, give them a nicotine spraying or fumigation once a week. Pinching the shoots should be discontinued after the end of February.

Mignonette.

Mignonette will flower over a long period if liberally treated. Plants which have been flowering since late fall will be benefited by a mulch of old manure. In addition, a soaking of liquid manure can be applied once in ten days. Mignonette must have a cool house, not over 45 degrees at night, and no heating pipes should run below the benches in which it is grown. The soil must never even approach dryness, or the plants will soon "peter out."

Callas.

To keep callas flowering freely, it is necessary to give them not only an abundant supply of water, but frequent feeding. Liquid manure is good. The water supply will need increasing, now that the sun is gaining in power. Try the plan of standing each pot in a larger pan and pack around the sides with fresh cow manure. You will find in a few weeks that this manure is simply alive with active roots. The longer we grow it the more satisfied we are that the Godfrey calla is the variety par excellence for florists to grow. Its large flowers are purer white than the old C. Æthiopica and the plants average from 200 to 300 per cent more flowers.

Propagating Begonias.

Leaf propagation is much the best way to secure good plants of Lorraine and Cincinnati begonias and there is still time to insert a batch of leaves. They always root much more satisfactorily during cold weather, when the heating pipes and cutting benches are steadily warm. Lift and pot all leaves as soon as they are rooted. Do not wait for growths to appear. They will come in due course in the pots and will be much stronger than where the leaves are left in the sand until they appear.

DISEASED FORMOSA LILIES.

Enclosed I am sending a Formosa lily bulb. Will you please tell me what is the trouble with it? We had this same trouble last season. This year, out of 250 bulbs, seventy are affected in this manner. The bulbs were planted in 6-inch pots early in November. They have been in a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees. We have been told the bulbs were dug green.

H. B.—N. J.

This is a common trouble, though more in evidence usually on giganteums than on Formosas. It is undoubtedly due to digging the bulbs in an immature condition and then not allowing them a sufficient period of rest before starting them. Too much water in the early stages of growth is also bad and causes many lilies to become sickly. Until the pots are full of roots and the top growths are well started, lilies should be kept on the dry side.

C. W.

PUSSY WILLOW FOR FORCING.

What is the botanical name of the pussy willow for forcing?

E. C. M.—N. J.

Usually Salix pentandra. Sometimes S. vitellina is used. C. W.

Geraniums

GERANIUMS DAMPING OFF.

I have had trouble this winter in rooting geranium cuttings. Black rot ruins more than half of every batch. The stock plants appear to be healthy, making good growth. I take the cuttings at the second leaf joint. I use fresh sand, with a temperature of 50 degrees, and I keep the cuttings as dry as possible without shriveling the stems. I would blame the stock plants, but cuttings obtained from different sources act the same way. I would appreciate any suggestions. G. E. Y.—Kan.

I am afraid you are trying to root your geraniums in too low a temperature. For top heat 50 degrees will be all right, but the sand should be 60 to 65 degrees. If you will give the cuttings this additional bottom heat, using care in watering and not shading the cuttings, I think you will have better success. If your sand is a little too fine, add some finely broken coal ashes.

C. W.

TIME LIMIT FOR GERANIUMS.

Kindly advise me how late cuttings can be taken from geranium stock plants in order to have the plants in bloom by Memorial day. D. R.—N. Y.

You can take cuttings as late as March 1 and have plants in 3-inch pots in flower for Memorial day. These will, of course, be small plants compared with those from fall or early winter cuttings. C. W.

ROOTING GERANIUM CUTTINGS.

I would like information on how to root geranium cuttings. I have about 5,000 plants grown in 4-inch pots and later shifted to ground benches. They are in a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees at night, with an increase of 10 degrees during the day. The temperature in my propagating house is the same. This is heated by flue pipes. I lose from fifty to sixty per cent of the plants during the winter months, but have no trouble in the early spring and fall.

C. M.—N. Y.

A propagating bench containing clear, sharp sand, through which water passes freely, with a steady bottom heat of 65 to 70 degrees, and with a top heat of 15 to 20 degrees lower, will root geraniums well. If your sand is fine and the water does not pass quickly through it you can improve it by adding some fine coal ashes, or charcoal with the dusty portion screened out. The cuttings will not need shading and will not stand the amount of water needed for chrysanthemum, coleus or salvia cuttings. Allow them to dry out well between waterings. Remove them from the bed and pot them when the roots are a couple of inches long. If left in longer they are liable to develop stem-rot when potted. I think the probable causes of so many cuttings damping off are, using sand which is too fine, overwatering and a too high and humid temperature. C. W.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

"WANTED: COLORED OPHELIAS."

I read with great interest the article on "Newer Forcing Roses," that appeared in The Review of February 17, which was a synopsis of a talk by E. G. Hill before the Chicago Florists' Club, February 10. The paragraph headed "Wanted: Colored Ophelias," was particularly interesting, and I am pleased to state that we have a beautiful rose-pink sport of that grand variety. We have good plants of this sport and expect to exhibit blooms at the fall shows.

Fred Breitmeyer.

HOW O'CARROLL LABELS.

There may be as many ways of labeling plants in a bench as there are labelers in the business, but I think that the rule we follow in labeling plants is most proper, and I hope that others will think it so, for I recently convinced some one that my way absolutely was the best—a sort of "knockout punch" this conviction was. I believe that labeling of plants should be in accordance with reading or writing, from left to right. When a new variety is added, only start with the label, as in starting a sentence. We are living on American soil, and not in the orient, where the florists read and write from right to left.

William J. O'Carroll.

MORE ON LABELING PLANTS.

Referring to the question of the proper method of labeling plants in a bench, as stated in The Review of February 10, I would like to speak a word in favor of placing the label so that the rows of plants will read as a column of matter in a newspaper. Place the label in the first pot at the inside of the bench, at the left, and label the last pot of any one variety so that the end will have the same reading as the beginning. Then the next label and plants until the outside of the bench is reached, the next row being started from the inside of the bench. If this is done any amateur instinctively will label correctly, for it is the way he has been taught to read. The heading of all reading matter is at the start and not at the end. Do not place the row heading at the bottom of the first column row.

Frank J. McGregor.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Last week opened with the worst weather of the year, the thermometer registering 2 degrees below zero. During the week there was a rise of over 40 degrees, followed by another fall to zero. Frozen flowers, lots of them, added to the problems of the growers and wholesalers. The usual decorative work of the retailers goes on, with an encouraging increase as Lent approaches.

Red roses this week will be at a premium. American Beauties continue scarce and high, the choicest selling at $75 per hundred. Hadley at $50 and Hoosier Beauty at $20 have been of much service while this scarcity of Beauties has been so manifest. All other roses have held their quotations of the last few weeks remarkably well, and the novelties are as popular as ever this season. The market February 19 was oversupplied with carnations; the quality of these is superb; $25 per thousand was top price in quantities, but in small lots of the specialties $3 per hundred was obtainable. The lower grades sold at $20 per thousand and under.

Violets are low, notwithstanding the freeze and the discontinuance of the street industry. Orchids have started their journey upward, slowly but surely, and while 35 cents each is the average quotation for the select, some have sold at 50 cents each in small quantities. The tendency of prices is to advance. Valley sold last week up to $4 per hundred. There is a scarcity of the best flowers. Gardenias are plentiful, but prices remain as usual, the best selling at $4 per dozen. Longiflorum lilies continue firm at the figures of the last month. Tulips and daffodils dominate the bulbous stock market and receipts are large, especially of the former, only the best of the novelties being salable at a profit. Much of the common stock goes into the discard. Callas are more abundant. Southern gladioli are arriving and sweet peas increase in receipts weekly. Forsythia is used heavily in window decorations. Southern daffodils are looked for shortly and there is a fine variety of spring flowers, including daisies, calendulas, lilac, stocks, primulas and mignonette.

Various Notes.

New York day at the National Flower Show, March 28, will be "some day," from present indications. Chairman Miller is enthusiastic over it and acceptances already assure a party of more than 500. The optimists have predicted 1,000. The special rate secured is for transportation one way, dinner and admittance to the show.

The New York spring show, opening April 5, will outdistance any flower show ever held in this city. The exhibition space is nearly all taken and Secretary Young now is sending out the schedule with its $16,000 of prizes.

At the flower exhibition last week, given by the Horticultural Society of New York, Arthur Herrington's illustrated lecture on "Irises" was warmly commended.

Thursday of this week the Greek ball takes place. Florists and their friends to the number of 2,000 and over will attend. A large representation from the American Retail Florists' Association will be there, as well as nearly all the wholesalers. The decorations are immense.

The Essex County Horticultural Society enjoyed its annual banquet at the Auditorium, Newark, N. J., February 17. An attendance of about 100, including fifty ladies, enjoyed the evening. The tables were beautifully decorated by the members. President Hornecker acted as toastmaster. Many of the club's members were called upon to do their share of entertaining. Walter Sheridan and Charles Schenck, the New York wholesalers, made eloquent addresses. The evening was enlivened by professional musical and vocal artists. After midnight the young folks enjoyed an hour of dancing. The whole affair was delightful and a great credit to the young and vigorous society.

The stork visited the home of W. A. Sperling, secretary of the Stumpp & Walter Co., February 16, and left a baby girl.

Charles Millang this week will open, at 52 West Twenty-sixth street, a branch store, to be used exclusively for the sale of plants, bulbs, nursery stock and other Holland importations.

Miss Jacobs assumes the position of bookkeeper for Riedel & Meyer, Inc., this week.

Myer Gottlieb, of Fifty-eighth street and Madison avenue, February 19 celebrated the tenth anniversary of the establishment of his business, with a banquet at the Alps, given to his personal friends, employees and their families. The affair was a delightful one and congratulations on Mr. Gottlieb's success were general.

Joseph E. H. Morichard, "the smiling Frenchman," who represents the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., returned last week from a southern trip, and reports business in splendid shape in his territory. He says there is great enthusiasm throughout the south over the coming convention of the S. A. F., at Houston, Tex.

D. Minogue, formerly with the Peterson Nursery, Chicago, is now foreman of the landscape department of Woodrow & Marketos.

Guttman & Raynor have added a delivery automobile to their many facilities.

Nicholas Schreiner has returned to his first love and now is on the staff of salesmen of Riedel & Meyer, Inc.

Goldstein & Futterman have installed a new icebox and are ready to push for a first-class trade.

The MacNiff Horticultural Co. announces the opening of the auction season March 7—a sure augury of an early spring. The big store at 52 to 56 Vesey street is nearly ready for business in all its departments.

Bowling Scores.

The New York Bowling Club is rapidly approaching championship form. During the week of the International Flower Show several matches with the gardeners' clubs will be held. Early in March John Donaldson's Patchogue club will entertain the New York club. The scores February 17 were:

Player	1st	2d	Player	1st	2d
J. Miesem	178	159	W. H. S'brecht	155	152
C. W. Scott	202	179	H. C. Riedel	169	186
J. Fenrich	186	182	A. Kakuda	159	161
P. J. Smith	142	158	W. P. Ford	156	158

J. Austin Shaw.

Hancock, Mich.—Bert Nicholas, formerly magager of the Pearce Floral Co., of Lake Linden, Mich., and James H. Dale, nurseryman, have purchased the business, greenhouses and land of the A. M. York estate. The owners will continue the business at Laurium and Hancock under the name of Dale & Nicholas.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

There has been no noticeable change in market conditions since last report. A big change is expected before the end of next week, however, as the weather is almost of summer heat, which makes a vast difference to the local growers. St. Valentine's day business was satisfactory to all. There were enough cut flowers and plants to supply all demands. Corsages were popular for that day, so violets and orchids were in greatest demand. Carnations have declined in both price and quantity. Lilies and roses are more plentiful. Violets are in full crop. In bulbous stock, narcissi are the only flowers that have decreased in quantity. Cut flowers, as a whole, are plentiful and meet all demands.

Various Notes.

Business at Arthur Newell's is all that could be desired. The windows are attractively decorated with pans and boxes of bulbous stock, white lilacs and azaleas. Adolph Wren, formerly of the C. A. Dahl Co., Atlanta, Ga., is now one of the staff at this establishment. With his southern politeness and his ability, he is taking well with the trade.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. is receiving some excellent carnations from the greenhouses. Mr. Parker reports that 4,000 to 5,000 violets are now being cut daily. This firm will have about 4,500 lilies for the Easter trade.

The new Boyd place, on East Ninth street, is a big success. They have one house there, 35x130. At the old place in Independence, they have over 1,000 cyclamens in 5-inch and 6-inch pots and about 20,000 geraniums. They have a contract with a 10-cent store to supply spring plants. A large amount of funeral work is done at the new place.

Samuel Murray had an attractive window display of chorizema.

W. J. Barnes has a fine lot of miniature hyacinths in bloom.

Adolph Mohr is stocking his houses with bedding plants. He has one house filled with lilies and potted roses for the Easter trade.

William Foith reports that so far this season he has had more business than in any previous year to this date. He grows mostly for cut flowers, but is preparing for a large bedding plant trade this spring.

The Roberts Flower Shop reports business better than expected, especially in plants.

Business across the state line, for St. Valentine's day, was ten per cent better than last year.

The Linwood Floral Co. has its greenhouses well filled with bedding stock and funeral work was good all winter.

T. J. Noll & Co. have sold some more pots to the city greenhouses. They report business in supplies double that of last year. W. J. B.

OMAHA, NEB.

The Market.

Business in this city and vicinity during the last few months has been all that could be expected. Funeral work was exceptionally heavy. Bulbous flowers are the only plentiful stock in the market. Beauties are scarce and the few that have been seen are poor in quality. The Killarneys and other varieties have been of good quality but extremely short in quantity. An increase in the supply of roses is looked for. Carnations are arriving in heavy supply, but the quality is poor. Potted stock is fine, but the demand is not what it should be.

Various Notes.

J. F. Wilcox & Sons, of Council Bluffs, Ia., see a great future for the Mrs. Russell rose. It is their intention to drop about half their Beauties and replace them with about 20,000 grafted Mrs. Russell plants.

Lovgren & Swedland, who a few months ago opened a flower store at Fortieth and Farnam streets, state that they are well satisfied with the location and that business has been excellent.

George Sorensen is busy with bedding stock these days. He has a red seedling carnation that looks good.

Miss Parker, who was seriously ill for several months, is able to be back at her store. Her many friends will be glad to hear of her recovery.

Hess & Swoboda report business as being exceptionally good. Roses are off crop at present, but they soon will be cutting stock. Owing to a bad start, the carnations now are producing their first crop. Primulas, cyclamens, lilies and bulbous stock are exceptionally fine. Mr. Swoboda, who, while cranking his automobile, broke his arm, now is able to use it, but not to crank an auto on a cold morning.

Bowling Scores.

February 16 the boys from across the "muddy brink" turned out in full force and gave us a trimming we will not forget for a while. It is the first time, and we hope the last, that the Omaha bowlers were defeated. Following is the score of last week:

Council Bluffs.			Omaha.
Gardner	189	132	Rogers	165	136
Wilcox	151	127	Faulkner	123	164
F. Shaw	142	129	Suris	157	153
Lainsen	141	139	Floth	143	146
Arnold	109	100	Lee	104	153
Lubben	144	112	Howse	106	110
Osborne	102	170	O'Connell	126	84
Voss	163	169	Henderson	116	98
Reard	82	114	Sorenson	86	68
G. Shaw	112	91	Hines	99	70

L. S. H.

Dallas, Tex.—The partnership of Ernest Rische, Jr., and Charles C. Chollar, known as the Rische-Chollar Floral Co., has been dissolved, Charles Chollar retiring from the firm.

Houston, Tex.—Sealed bids will be received at the office of the city secretary until noon, March 6, for the erection of a greenhouse for the city. Plans, specifications and regulations may be had upon application to Maurice J. Sullivan, city architect.

Brunswick, Ga.—Whenever misfortune comes to C. S. Tait he grasps it by the forelock and disposes of it in a cheerful manner. Under date of February 15 Mr. Tait says: "I got a delayed valentine last night from Jack Frost, which bit off the buds of all my splendid sweet peas, growing outdoors. If it does not freeze tonight, the peas may sprout and 'come back.' I have a mile of them along a wire fence, many of them six feet in height."

Birmingham, Ala.—The McVay Seed & Floral Co., which is doing a good retail flower business, found it possible to largely increase the St. Valentine's day sales this year. This is a flower day that heretofore has not cut much figure in the south, but a good window display, with some attractive show cards, served to largely increase the sales this year. The flower department now is in charge of E. Olsen, who is a proficient window decorator. The president of the company is R. V. Mobley; the vice-president J. Howard Perdue; the secretary and treasurer R. V. Harris.

Jacksonville, Fla.—The women of Jacksonville held a floral tag day February 14, for the purpose of raising a charity fund. One order of 5,000 carnations was given to the Tomlinson & Key Floral Co.

Jacksonville, Fla.—The Riverside Gardens, the new branch of the Glen St. Mary Nurseries Co., of Glen St. Mary, Fla., had a successful formal opening. The gardens have become one of the show places of Jacksonville. This company was established in 1882 by G. L. Taber, the president and treasurer. H. Harold Hume is vice-president and secretary; J. K. Bowers, superintendent of Riverside Gardens; W. B. Mathis, field foreman; John Schnabel, greenhouse manager.

Charlotte, N. C.—The other day, when everybody on the street was wearing a carnation, a stranger might have thought it was Mothers' day or some other flower day, but it was only the opening day of the new store of W. W. Schlotz, at 8 North Tryon street. Mr. Scholtz had taken pains to inform the city of the formal opening of his new store, by means of ads in the papers, and, knowing the common failing of human nature for anything that is free, he had two free offerings for the occasion. One was a souvenir flower, the other was a jardiniere, containing a fern, free with a purchase of $1 or more. Mr. Scholtz's ads were ten inches deep and seven columns wide, and embellished with a good illustration. Who says the south is behind the times?

OBITUARY

Conrad Bergstermann.

Conrad Bergstermann, of St. Louis, Mo., died February 20, from a sudden heart stroke. He had apparently enjoyed the best of health up to the time of his death. Those who saw him at the dance of the St. Louis Florists' Club, February 18, little thought they would attend his funeral a few days later. He was a member of the St. Louis Florists' Club and of the Retail Florists' Association. He was born May 6, 1857, at Borgloh, near Osnabruck, Germany, where he learned the florists' trade. In 1885 he came to this country and immediately found work at his trade in St. Louis. Fifteen years ago he organized the firm of Pape & Bergstermann, but three years later he sold his interest and built a store and greenhouse at 3117 South Grand avenue, where he had a prosperous business until his death.

His wife died eight months ago. Edwin Nibling, Mrs. Hulda Ruff, his stepchildren, and Oscar Ruff, a son-in-law, are left to mourn his loss. The funeral took place February 23, from his late residence, 3117 South Grand avenue, to Concordia cemetery. The members of the Florists' Club and the Retail Florists' Association attended in a body. There were great numbers of floral offerings. J. J. B.

Conrad Bergstermann.

Roderick Royce.

Roderick Royce, veteran nurseryman of Shellsburg, Ia., died at his home February 8, after an illness of several months' duration. Mr. Royce was born in Monticello, N. Y., February 21, 1845. In 1867 he married Miss Charlotte Divine, of Liberty, N. Y. The following year the young couple moved to Shellsburg, Ia., where Mr. Royce started his nursery business. He was first associated with J. L. Budd, and later with Oscar Bergen.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

Spring seems to have broken its way through the cold winds and heavy rains at last, and we are having plenty of the early outdoor flowers. Even hyacinths are blooming in protected places. Farmers are plowing and gardeners are planting their cabbages, potatoes and peas. Daffodils are appearing on the streets and in the restaurants, and soon there will be loads of them everywhere. Tulips and hyacinths in pots are having their day, and they are selling, too. It seems to take a warm spring day to sell a pot of tulips. In roses the shortage of a week ago is rapidly disappearing. Another week of good weather will give us a good supply of everything. Funeral work has been heavy, and this, with the regular business in cut flowers, has consumed most of the stock. Corsage bouquets seem to be more in demand this spring than ever before.

Hardy ornamentals are selling rapidly now. In fact, those who deal in these are finding it difficult to keep up with their orders. As usual, there is a large demand for bulbs, now that they are beginning to bloom. It seems that the public never will learn that things must be planted some time before they are expected to bloom. The seed trade is finding business good, especially in early garden and farm seeds.

Various Notes.

The Hillcrest School Farm is planting roses in the field this week. The planting will include thousands of the most popular ramblers.

J. F. Corbitt has his place full to overflowing with bedding plants, even having them on shelves and under the edges of the benches. I have never seen so much good stock at his place before.

Joy's windows were especially decorated for Washington's birthday, one containing a large monument borrowed from the dealers in such things, surmounted with an excellent bust of Washington. In front of the monument was a cherry stump with a small axe sticking in it. The other window showed the best plants and flowers of the season. Many people stopped to look at the windows.

Geny Bros. have their windows decorated with excellent pot plants. They continue to cut quantities of fine roses and violets. They are selling the dwarf-growing Whitmani fern sport for table ferns. This is about the best table fern I have seen. Their sweet peas are coming freely now, with extra long stems.

McIntyre Bros. had almost a monopoly of the good sweet peas of the city until recently. They are still cutting plenty of orchids.

Leslie Little had a mishap in his greenhouse last week. While he was away the boys painted his pipes and then built a good fire. The fumes from the paint killed most of his plants back badly, and entirely killed the lettuce he had in a part of the house. F. B.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

A. Wiegand's Sons Co., of Indianapolis, says that the quantity of funeral work of late has been unusually large. George Wiegand had planned to take his family to Florida, the rigor of the Indianapolis winters affecting him more than in his younger days, but Homer persuaded him to abandon the trip to help during the busy season. We were speaking of the art attained in design work and how the far advanced in the profession have educated their patrons, when Mr. Steinkamp related a recent incident. Mr. Steinkamp's partner, Mr. Baur, one day answered a phone call from a particular patron, who ordered a token of sympathy for a deceased friend of 85 years. Mr. Baur was called up shortly afterwards by the same person, who stated that a mistake had been made in the age, that it should be 62 years. This change was made accordingly and the design rearranged to suit.

John A. Evans, of Richmond, Ind., says his salt ball is giving unlimited satisfaction to the users. The victims die a double death, being burned with thirst and drowned with water.

John Heidenreich, of Indianapolis, as usual is strong on moonvines, growing the largest retail stock in the city. He believes there will be a continuation of good business.

C. J. Ohmer, of West Palm Beach, Fla., has four acres covered with lath houses and is shipping large cuts of Asparagus plumosus, according to E. G. Gillett, of Cincinnati. W. M.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

WRAPPING papers, also tissue and wax papers, have advanced in price forty per cent in the last few months.

THE market prices of the materials of which paper boxes are made are said to have doubled within the year.

THE specialists in greenhouse building material report a larger number of inquiries, and for more important building projects, than in any season in recent years. One of the special features is the large percentage of inquiries which concern wide houses, from fifty to ninety feet.

THE margin of profit in retailing from one's own greenhouse has been so good any happy-go-lucky method of management sufficed. But rising costs are cutting down the florists' profit. It soon will be necessary to watch the pennies if there are to be any dollars in the business.

THE call for geraniums for growing on is the heaviest ever known. Many growers report the number of cuttings obtained last autumn as much less than usual, because of unfavorable weather conditions. Under glass, in many cases the stock plants have not given a good account of themselves.

To build a really large florists' business calls for talents rarely found in one man, the artistic and the financial. The best combination is a partnership in which one man's abilities are directed toward turning out high class stuff and the other's are centered on seeing that the firm takes in more than it agrees to pay out.

THE WAR HITS OUR COVER.

The basis for the dye used in producing the orange cover which has become so well known as a distinctive mark of The Review is a chemical named auramine. It is a coal tar product manufactured exclusively in Germany. The supply in America is exhausted. Last week The Review used the last of its supply of the orange cover and this week appears with the nearest obtainable substitute. It is nowhere near so good, though it cost considerably more than the stock heretofore used. Next week something entirely different will be used; after that, no one knows what. Papers of bright, attractive colors are practically out of the market. There is no chance of obtaining a fresh supply of the orange cover until the war is ended, or until the United States has developed a dye industry of its own. In the meantime, if The Review becomes a variegated journal, it will not be chargeable to the editor, but to the war in Europe.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

FIVE YEARS.

Thomas, J. C., Clarkdale, Ariz.
Green, C. H., Fremont, Neb.

TWO YEARS.

De Vries, Thomas, Santa Barbara, Cal.
Hemwick, Owen A., Stamford, Conn.
Richards Bros., Toughkenamon, Pa.
Lewis, Edward, Kansas City, Mo.
Winkler, Clarence, Hastings, Neb.
Niessner, H., Johnstown, Pa.
Nielsen Bros., Chicago.

The Review stops coming when the subscription runs out. The green notice with the last copy tells the story; no bills are run up; no duns are sent.

AGAIN, CAN YOU BEAT IT?

While Review ads never sleep, it is in the early months of the year that they seem most wakeful. While returns are almost uniformly good, the results at this season often are surprising; advertisers get returns so great as to be almost unbelievable when compared with the cost of selling merchandise by other methods. The evidence multiplies:

Please discontinue my ad for geraniums and coleus, as two insertions cleaned me out.—A. J. Peterson, Washington, Ia., February 10, 1916.

Please do not run that ad again; we are sold out and it is costing much postage to return the orders still coming in.—J. S. Bennett, Pawpaw, Ill., February 13, 1916.

The Review gave good results this week. We enclose $35.55.—F. W. Rochelle & Sons, Chester, N. J., February 12, 1916.

Please discontinue my ad for geranium cuttings and give me a chance to catch up. Your paper is enough to swamp any man with orders. —James Moss, Johnsville, Pa., February 14, 1916.

Please cancel my ad in The Review, as it has brought me all the orders I can handle.—W. B. Currey, De Land, Fla., February 7, 1916.

It is worth while noting that some of these advertisers offered plants, while one offered dirt bands, but the last one offered greens, his advertisement of two lines having appeared three times. He says he got "all the orders I can handle" and the cost was 60 cents!

When you hear a man complaining of the cost of advertising you can be pretty sure he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

ONE OF THE DANGERS.

It seems quite possible that business in this country now has become so good that it is to the disadvantage of florists as a class. The unprecedented export demand, together with a shortage in certain classes of raw materials, has resulted in a tremendous rise in prices, including almost every article used in greenhouses or flower stores. Of course general prosperity has some effect on the demand for flowers, enabling many to buy who can not do so during periods of unemployment, but it is a question if this has not now been fully offset by the increase in the prices of the necessities of life. The difficulties of doing business have been greatly increased by car shortages, the impossibility of securing prompt deliveries of necessary articles, and by other factors which make the average florist as much trouble as he was having a year ago, when the country as a whole was not nearly so well employed.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

So gradual was the change wrought in Chicago market conditions during the last week that it was effected without shock. Whereas there has for two months been a marked shortage in several standard items, there is now something approaching a glut in all but a few lines. A quite common state of affairs has prevailed as relates to demand. Shipping trade has maintained a normal volume, while local trade has, with the exception of a slight revival during the week's end, been decidedly lethargic.

The status of Beauties remains practically unchanged. There are scarcely enough of them, of even passable grade, to cut any figure on the market. Almost all other varieties of roses are plentiful, and though prices are somewhat lowered as a result, there is no difficulty experienced in clearing receipts. This condition has quite naturally had its effect on the demand for other kinds of stock.

Carnations of every kind are in large supply. The red varieties, however, seem to have the lead in demand. There is still too large a percentage of splits to be satisfactory. The supply of valley continues short. This, of course, is a strategy of the growers, who figure, and rightly, that any item kept on the short side of the market remains an object of interest and one to be coveted. Of Easter lilies there are more than enough. Callas, too, are fully sufficient to meet the demand. Cattleyas, on the other hand, are none too plentiful. The greater part of the last seven days violets moved in a most unsatisfactory manner, but February 19 and 20 a sudden demand for them for corsage purposes relieved the situation. But this demand ceased with the opening of the week. Sweet peas are decidedly scarce. All week the white varieties have been at a premium. This is undoubtedly attributable to the trouble growers have been experiencing with buds dropping. There are not a great many daisies to be found on the market, and as a result they clear readily. Snapdragon, calendulas and mignonette are not in large supply. Paper Whites are clearing well, but the supply is not large. There are liberal quantities of Romans, daffodils and jonquils and they move well con-

Our Rose Crops Are On Again

IT WILL BE GOOD NEWS to the trade that our Rose crops again are heavy. It is well known our supply includes all the newest and most popular varieties grown by men who know how—no better stock anywhere.

This week we announce a general reduction in price, as we again are able to fill all orders. Specially strong on Russell, Killarney Brilliant, Ward, Ophelia, Killarney and White Killarney.

Carnations

The quality of our Carnations is extremely good and the supply is the largest of the season to date—we can fill all orders, but we have no surplus, because buyers prefer our Carnations to any others.

Lilies

Use Giganteum Lilies for Funeral Sprays and for Wedding Decorations. These are the largest and showiest flowers for the money and we offer a large crop.

Bulb Stock

We handle more bulbous flowers than any other wholesale house in this part of the country. Tulips, Daffs, Jonquils. Of course the quality is good.

SPECIAL THIS WEEK:

Rainbow Freesia, ASSORTED COLORS $3.00 per 100

Beauties

As good as the market affords; a large supply.

Violets

A very large supply; prices extremely reasonable.

Spencer Sweet Peas

Our supply of Spencer (Butterfly) Peas runs into the tens of thousands daily. All colors. A splendid seller in your store.

FANCY FERNS

We pride ourselves on the quality of our hardy cut ferns. If your supply is not entirely satisfactory, try ours.

sidering the number of roses and carnations available. The demand for freesia is greater than for other bulbous flowers. Tulips are in more than sufficient supply to go around. Dutch hyacinths are meeting with a fair sale.

With the possible exception of Mexican ivy, greens are in sufficient supply, and are moving in a fairly satisfactory manner. Ferns are in poor shape; the shrinkage in picking over is heavy.

It Should Pay Big.

A. C. Spencer has conceived another of his bright ideas. He believes large numbers of people have stopped buying flowers because the prices have been too high this winter. But he is confident they will resume buying as soon as they find flowers again are moderate in price and good in quality. His idea is that the present and impending state of the market should be advertised by strong unsigned display ads in the daily paper, paid for by contributions, $1 from small retailers or growers, $5 from large ones, so that everybody would feel like chipping in. It seems like a scheme that would bring good results for everybody. The only trouble is to get someone to do the work. Mr. Spencer hopes to get the Tribune to get up such an ad and to set its classified solicitors at the job of submitting it to all the florists, the space to be used to depend on the sum of money raised. It takes about $100 per column to buy space in the Tribune.

The New Budlong Place.

As soon as frost is out of the ground, work will be begun on the three greenhouses of the L. A. Budlong Co., on one of its farms on the eastern edge of the town of Niles. These houses, which will be 600 feet long and three benches wide, will be devoted to the growing of roses. As yet, no one has been selected to superintend the plant. In connection with this departure on the part of one of the largest market garden concerns in the country, it is interesting to note that the founder of the company started in the general gardening business in this vicinity in 1857. As J. J. Budlong puts it, the erection of greenhouses by the company and the growing of cut flowers is the most natural thing in the world. For as land advances in value it becomes necessary to put it to a higher use, or rather to one that will yield a greater profit, in order to realize a return commensurate with the value of the land. Mr. Budlong said it would be interesting, were the figures available, to note the per-

RUSSELLS and ROSES

From now on, until the season is over, the House of Kennicott will be able to furnish any quantity of the popular Russell, as well as every other variety of Rose that the commercial "Flower-world" knows.

The Florists' Trade is divided into two classes—one, those who know that Kennicott's Quality Cuts are the kind to buy; the other, those who have never tried, and don't know anything about it.

To those who know, we need say nothing. To those who are still in the dark as to the Kennicott Kind of Flowers, let us say this: "Just give us a chance to make good. Now is the time."

Rose Prices in January.

Joseph Kohout, of Libertyville, says that if growers would keep a more exact record of rose cuts and cash receipts they would not lose anything by it. His record, he says, shows much of the talk of high prices in January to have been without warrant. He maintains that the quality of his crops has not varied much from year to year, the proportion of young plants being about the same each season and the cultural methods the same. His records show, he says, January, 1914, to have been the banner one. In January, 1915, he cut 5,230 more roses and received for them $241 less. In January, 1916, he cut 17,245 more roses than in the same month of 1914, and received $700 more for them, "only" $700 is the way he puts it. It shows an average net return for the increased cut of 4.06 cents each.

How does this compare with other growers' records?

flower house in the Atlas block for several years and Miss L. A. Tonner has been engaged in the florists' supply business since the days of Vaughan, McKellar & Winterson, with which firm she was employed. At one time she was with E. H. Hunt, and later it was she who started the supply department of the A. L. Randall Co. The bookkeeper for the new firm will be Miss Anna Tonner, a younger sister. The florists' business seems to run in this family, as the father and uncle and brother of the ladies were all florists.

The new firm will occupy rooms 205 and 206 of the Atlas block. At the present time the painters, decorators and carpenters are having things much their own way, but the house is transacting business.

Various Notes.

The development of a larger business is indicated by the incorporation of the Johnson Basket Co., with $2,400 capital stock. The incorporators are Charles A. Johnson, Oscar Leistner and Theodore Kirchen, all of whom are well known in the trade in Chicago. Mr. Johnson is a retail florist who developed baskets for his own use and found them so salable he began wholesaling. Mr. Leistner is a manufacturers' sales agent, who established a wide connection, first as sales representative of Ove Gnatt, perpetuator of foliages. Mr. Kirchen is Mr. Leistner's chief assistant.

It is interesting to note how now and then an old variety comes back. The Killarney rose was tried and practically discarded before its merit was discovered; perhaps it will be the same with Carnation Andrew Carnegie. Wietor Bros. have been watching the performance of a small batch of it retained by a neighbor and have concluded it is worth another trial, so they bought all the cuttings the neighbor can supply and will give it a whole house next season. The variety will be remembered as a scarlet sport of Harlowarden introduced in 1908 by the Chicago Carnation Co. Harlowarden was a remarkably free grower.

Did you ever see a pedometer? It looks like a watch, but it measures the distance a man walks the way a speedometer measures the distance a motor runs. Just for fun, Emil Reichling slipped a pedometer into his pocket one morning as he was starting out on his rounds of the Peter Reinberg greenhouses, where he is superintendent. At night, he was surprised to find he had walked over twenty miles that day. Repeated tests showed that he sometimes walked twenty-six miles in a day; never less than eighteen miles, all under glass.

One of the preventives of ennui at the Alois Frey establishment at Crown Point is a brown moth that lays its eggs in the snapdragons, where these hatch and become long, slim green worms, that wax fat on the tender leaves. Fumigation burns the foliage before it inconveniences moth or worms. A sharp eye and a busy hand is all that gives the crop a chance. Most of the moths are killed on the south glass in the morning.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The weather has played, as it frequently does, an all important part in the conditions surrounding the sale and purchase of cut flowers. Balmy, spring-like softness February 18 changed to arctic chill February 19, with damaging effect on Saturday's business. Carnations suffer, the heavy receipts being more than sufficient for the demand under these adverse conditions. The price fell a little, although the best flowers brought list prices. There were too many of them and the lower grades felt the decline more. Sweet peas of orchid type did fairly well, but the older style of so-called winter-blooming sweet peas were entirely out of the running. Unless exceptionally well grown, these ordinary sweet peas are too small and too short-stemmed to meet market requirements. Daffodils have recovered somewhat with lighter receipts; they are selling fairly well at prices that will make the average something like $20 per thousand. Good tulips are good stock, though most of the tulips are not good just now. Paper Whites are in lighter supply; freesia is fairly plentiful. Violets are doing rather better, at prices near $5 per thousand. Fine snapdragon is in demand; it can be had in limited quantity in yellow, white and several shades of pink, one of these approaching lavender. The receipts of roses, mostly short and medium grade, are heavier. They sell well. The fancy grades are in demand only in moderate quantity and only in the fancy varieties. Long-stemmed Beauties find a limited market. There are no mediums and only a few good shorts. Cattleyas are rather dull. Gardenias have been going well. Easter lilies are more plentiful, at prices that vary with the quality. Callas also are more plentiful; those that are not first-class, either as to culture or careful packing, suffer. There are heavy receipts of southern asparagus and moderate receipts of smilax and fine ferns. Taking the market as a whole, business is fairly active, with a tendency toward lower prices.

The National Flower Show.

A. Farenwald presided over a meeting of the flower show committee held at No. 1205 Widener building, February 17. It was announced that a prominent citizen was considering the purchase of 5,000 tickets to be distributed among the members of the garden clubs of the various schools. It was decided to invite the 100 inmates of the Widener Memorial Home for crippled children to be the guests of the National Flower Show one day during the exhibition, the florists to provide motor transportation from the home to the hall and wheel chairs in the building for those who need them. It was announced that 10,000 trade tickets have been ordered. These tickets are intended to be given away, not sold, by the purchasers. It was announced that the Boy Scouts had been engaged free of cost to distribute the programs during the show. It was announced that cups have been offered by Bailey, Banks & Biddle and by McDonald & Campbell. It was announced that at least two of the local papers will devote special supplements to the show on or about the second day that it is open. Charles Henry Fox announced that he has secured permission to extend four large banners across Broad, Market and Chestnut streets, from March 1 for one month. Charles H. Grakelow proposed as a special feature an art gallery, to be composed of flowers in picture frames, each florist to be entitled to enter and care for one exhibit in this gallery and to place his card on the frame.

Wet or Dry?

There has been a lively struggle over the character of the banquet to be tendered to the visiting florists during the National Flower Show. This contest narrowed down to the single question, "Shall we or shall we not have wine?" To this was added the side issue of where the banquet should be held. Those favoring an Adam's ale banquet also favored Horticultural hall, probably because of its association and freedom from the suspicion of having a bar. Those who fancy chickens, feathers and divers other beverages were inclined to the Bellevue-Stratford, although willing to compromise on the Hotel Walton. The drys urged that the profession was on parade before the world; that the governor of the state, the mayor of the city and other dignitaries might be there; that their wives and daughters and sweethearts would be there, and that if one person in the hundreds there assembled became, let us say, noisy, the pleasure of the great occasion would be marred. The wets urged with equal earnestness that a wineless banquet was like Hamlet with the Noble Dane left out; that to ask a man to be your guest at a great dinner and then waterlog him was a crime; that to accept hospitality everywhere and restrict your own hospitality was niggardly; that the speeches would lack fire and the interest would lag—in short, the affair would fail. The great wave of prohibition that is sweeping over the country has had its effect, and after the Florists' Club's entertainment committee's meeting was over it was announced that the drys had won by the odd vote and that the banquet would be held in Horticultural hall.

There is a curious little bit of history connected with this contest. When the convention of the S. A. F. was held here, August, 1907, the entertainment committee decided to take the convention to Wildwood, N. J. Wildwood is a strictly prohibition seashore resort, where, as the wets disgustedly remarked, "You not only did not give a man anything to drink, but made it impossible for him to get anything for himself." You see they had not been there and knew nothing of Holly Beach. So the wets rose in their wrath, called another meeting, dragged to it every man they could muster and most illegally overturned the Wildwood plan and carried the convention to Fairmount Park, with an alcove known to the elect near the banquet tent. Of course, the dry committeemen resigned at such high-handed measures.

The Market.

Unfavorable weather last week caused a little shrinkage in the volume of business. The first of the week the temperature was the lowest that it has been this winter. This was followed by warmer weather with rain, which melted the snow and made walking difficult. This, in turn, was followed by a cold snap. However, business is generally reported as fair.

Bulbous stock is arriving in increasing quantities, and the prices are more reasonable. Hyacinths, especially, are appearing in greater quantity and variety. Carnations are abundant and are normal in price. Orchids are still plentiful and cheap. American Beauties and the other leading varieties of roses are scarce and the prices keep up well. Valley is expensive. Violets, though not all of as high grade as might be desired, command a good price. Callas bring a medium price. Sweet peas are of fine quality and sell at reasonable prices. Excellent mignonette is arriving, and in greater quantity than heretofore this season. White lilacs have just made their appearance, but are not yet abundant. Daisies are arriving in considerable quantities. There continues to be a large amount of funeral work. St. Valentine business was fairly good, as was the business in connection with Washington's birthday. There was no great rush, however, on either occasion.

Various Notes.

Henry A. Strobell had a unique window display for Washington's birthday. Just as soon as St. Valentine's day had passed, he filled one of his windows with several thousand artificial cherries, some in small baskets and some in sprays or bouquets. In the midst of these was the representation of a tree stump, over which was draped an American flag. Near the base of the stump were a couple of hatchets.

Charles Trauth has been rushed with funeral work during the last ten days. He reports much more profit in the stock he handles now than there was in the same quantity a month ago.

S. S. Rogers, of the S. S. Rogers Nursery Co., has hit upon a novelty that has taken well in the short time that he has had it on sale. It is called a place-card basket. The baskets are 1½-inch, with a 2-inch handle, and are partly filled with sheet moss. In the top of each basket is a little partridge berry vine, with berries, a few fine fern leaves and one or two fine flowers.

The J. J. Wilson Seed Co. has received its full consignment of German seeds. Mr. Wilson reports that the outlook for business is good. R. B. M.

The Club Goes Visiting.

Thursday afternoon, February 17, the members of the Lancaster County Florists' Club journeyed to W. B. Girvin's greenhouses, at Leola, for a tour of inspection. Carnations are Mr. Girvin's specialty and the stock throughout the houses was fine. Mrs. C. W. Ward still remains the principal pink house, in which 10,000 Matchless are planted, was a mass of buds and blooms. It left no question in our mind as to the profitableness of the variety.

The February Meeting.

The party returned to Lancaster for the monthly meeting of the club, prior to which there were two delightful dinner parties, one at Hotel Brunswick and the other at Metfett's cafe. President H. A. Schroyer presided over the meeting. A committee was appointed to arrange for a ladies' night, to be held the last Thursday of April. Albert M. Herr, Lemon S. Landis, Frank L. Kohr and Rudolph Nagel were named to act on this committee. A representative of the Philadelphia Press presented an advertising proposition to the club in regard to the National Flower Show to be held next month in Philadelphia, in which the club decided to participate.

M. C. Wright, of the Lord & Burnham Co., gave an interesting talk on "Greenhouse Construction." More than a hundred lantern slides were shown of greenhouse buildings of fifty years ago down to the present modern constructions. It proved one of the most profitable and enjoyable lectures the club ever heard. The following were elected to membership: W. L. Keeny, of New Cumberland, Pa.; S. S. Pennock, D. J. Keohane and Amos G. Kauffman. R. Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., will give a lecture on "The Bulb Fields of Holland," at the March meeting of the club. The ladies are invited to attend this meeting.

The visiting committee has arranged a trip to Christiana to visit M. J. Brin-

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The first part of last week resembled somewhat the three or four days before Christmas or Easter. With the extra help everyone was kept busy filling orders for St. Valentine's. Stock of all kinds was more plentiful than expected, with the exception of two or three items. Flowers, such as violets, sweet peas, freesias, Roman hyacinths and the smaller varieties of roses, were in large demand for corsage bouquets. All kinds of bulbous stock and carnations sold heavily. American Beauties continue as scarce as the week previous, but there is a noticeable increase in the other varieties of roses, with Ophelia, Killarney and Sunburst in the lead.

Good carnations are scarce and move without any difficulty, while the inferior grades are more abundant and slow of sale. Red carnations cleared readily for Valentine's day. Bulbous stock is plentiful and sells rapidly considering the volume. Jonquils and daffodils are largely used in decorations, because they give a spring-like effect. Sweet peas are again becoming popular, which has an effect on the violet. Neither the doubles nor the singles are too abundant. Valley and orchids continue scarce, the former selling at $6 per hundred. Easter lilies are gradually increasing in supply. Snapdragons, mignonette, pansies, freesias and calendulas are moving nicely.

Potted plants, such as cyclamens, daffodils, tulips and hyacinths, prettily trimmed, were a feature for St. Valentine's day.

Various Notes.

F. G. Nelson, Burlington, Ia., called on the trade last week.

S. D. Woodruff & Sons had an exhibit of seeds, bulbs and plants at the convention of the hardware association.

W. Preisach, of Corfu, who built a greenhouse last summer 35x200 feet, intends to erect another house this summer 35x200. He reports that he is picking his share of stock and that business is good.

The Market.

Business for St. Valentine's was up to its usual good standing and flowers for the occasion were in fine condition. Most stores used the heart-shaped corsage box, which greatly added to the effect. We are having a dreary spell of weather, with snow continually falling, and some days without any sun at all. Outside temperatures have varied from zero to 25 degrees above. Nevertheless, stock has come along in fine shape.

This week's trade has called for a large quantity of potted plants, such as tulips, daffodils and hyacinths, of which there are plenty. Some fine azaleas are on the market. The cut flower supply remains about as usual. Good shipments of roses arrive each day and are usually cleaned up. Little is seen of short-stemmed stock, for which there is a strong demand, for funeral work. Russell, Ophelia, Hoosier Beauty, Sunburst and Ward continue to sell well. The supply of Golden Spur and other varieties of jonquils is fairly large and they sell readily. Daffodils move freely. Carnations are becoming more plentiful and sell quickly, especially in the lighter shades. Calla lilies sell well, but little is seen of Easter lilies. Valley is of good quality. Paper Whites bring the growers more returns than they have in several years, but are getting cheaper. Yellow and white tulips move freely. Violets sell satisfactorily and orchids are good and sell fairly well. Sweet peas, which are fairly plentiful, are being used freely in corsage and basket

Various Notes.

Miss Lillian Wheeler, well known to the trade in this vicinity, will open a store in South Clinton street, near the Lyceum, within the next week or two. I am sure the trade wishes her good luck.

George Cramer is back in town again and assisted one of the florists over the St. Valentine's rush.

Horace J. Head has been home for several days, suffering from tonsillitis, which developed into quinsy. He is making satisfactory progress.

At the monthly meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association, held at Musicians' hall, East Main street, February 14, the members and their families were entertained by Miss Amy L. La Vigne, reader, and Miss Anna Cleary, soloist. Each item was thoroughly enjoyed. Refreshments were served and a good time was spent. Charles H. Vick presided. At the March meeting the proposed flower show, to be held in connection with the Rochester Industrial Exposition, will be discussed.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Supplies are becoming somewhat unwieldy for the demand. Weather conditions have not been of the best for flower production, but the demand has not been robust. Of a few flowers there is as yet no noticeable surplus, but the majority now are somewhat too abundant. Roses continue to hold the best position and of these there is really no surplus, but prices now show a sagging tendency. American Beauties continue scarce and high; select flowers make $6 to $9 per dozen. Ophelia, Sunburst, Russell, Hadley and Killarney Brilliant sell well. Ophelia continues easily the most popular rose we have. Sunburst will soon displace Ward entirely, but it is not so good a color. Killarney and White Killarney clean up well. Carnations now drag considerably and many are carried over each day. Matchless now comes of better quality and is popular as a white. Pink Delight is the most prominent among flesh pinks, but Alice has many friends and it will be more heavily planted here next season. It has a larger flower than Pink Delight and is a freer bloomer. An objection is that it loses its color sooner than Delight. For that reason it needs pinching a little earlier.

Violets are low and do not sell well. Sweet peas of good quality clean up nicely. They are abundant. Yellow marguerites bring fancy prices, as high as $4 per hundred in some cases. Dutch bulbous flowers are abundant and prices show recessions on all the items. Murillo and La Reine are the favorite tulips. Golden Spur and Silver Spur are the best narcissi. As yet there is no surplus of snapdragons. Lilies, callas and valley are abundant. There is a good supply of calendulas, mignonette and freesias. There are plenty of cattleyas, but gardenias continue scarce and bring from $3 to $6 per dozen. English primroses, wallflowers, anemones, forget-me-nots, cornflowers and leptosynes are seen among the other flowers. Asparagus is not abundant and sells well.

of our most successful bulb specialists, whose flowers always gain top market prices. He considers Murillo and La Reine the two leading commercial tulips, although he grows Couronne d'Or and one or two other varieties. Golden Spur is the best narcissus, followed by Victoria. He had one batch of 12,000 Golden Spurs which rooted finely and threw up good foliage, but all the flowers were dead in the bulbs. Some Victorias in the same shipment are acting in the same way. He cannot determine what caused the trouble. It was not heating, for that discolors the bulbs. The shipper suggested gas as a probable cause, but why did this not destroy the embryo foliage as well?

At the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, March 21, William H. Judd, of the Arnold Arboretum, will read a paper on "Trees and Shrubs for Spring Planting."

The Welch Bros. Co. reports business as showing a vast improvement over 1915. Roses are about equal to the demand, but there is an ample supply of other flowers and greenery.

H. W. Vose, of Hyde Park, was first in the market with the Victoria narcissus, always a favorite here. He also has ornatus, princeps, Von Sion and Golden Spur. In tulips he makes a specialty of Prosperity, in addition to La Reine and Murillo.

At Galvin's Park street store business has been good of late. They are showing some handsome acacias, lilacs, rhododendrons and other flowering plants, and always have a good orchid display.

In the report of the last meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club I inadvertently omitted reference to a superb vase of Rosette, from A. A. Pembroke. These were from 2-year-old plants which had not been cut back and Mr. Pembroke said they were far ahead of the 1-year-old plants in every way.

particularly well this season with Ophelia, Killarney, White Killarney and Ward roses. The carnations are the finest this concern ever had, Pink Delight, Mrs. Ward, Beacon, Benora, Matchless and Enchantress Supreme being the leaders.

S. J. Goddard says that Carnation Pink Sensation brings him more money than any other variety. His largest producers of flowers to date have been Alice, Beacon, Matchless and Pink Delight, in this order.

W. S. Phelps, of Lexington, has a fine crop of Roman anemones in bud. He grows ranunculi in quantity. He is one of the few growers of hardy delphiniums under glass. Of these Belladonna and Chinensis now are well advanced. He finds them a well paying crop. Other perennials also are forced.

The spring show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will be held March 17 to 19. The schedule is somewhat restricted, an act of courtesy to the coming Philadelphia National Show. Only preliminary schedules have been issued. The general schedule is in the hands of the printer, and I hope that next year an effort will be made to have them ready by January 1. The appropriations are made sufficiently early for this to be easily done, and any specials could be easily announced in a supplementary list.

Louis Smith, of Tewksbury, the violet, sweet pea and marguerite specialist, is passing cigars on the arrival of a bouncing boy at his home.

No finer house of Lilium giganteum in this section is to be found than that of John McFarland, at North Easton. The plants have an evenness and vigor

A. M. Davenport is propagating the English winter-flowering begonias in quantity this season. He finds Mrs. Heal the best and the demand for it far in excess of the supply. He is planning to show plants at the March and May shows in Boston, but the demand for flowering plants is so good that he finds it difficult to keep plants wanted for this purpose out of the buyers' hands.

Seed stores report an excellent volume of mail orders. The severe weather has so far kept down counter trade.

The Market.

The weather last week was fine, causing increased activity in business and also causing stock to arrive in heavy supply. The great increase in the quantity of violets resulted in a big slump in prices; sales were reported at $2 per thousand. The most noticeable feature was the shortage of roses. A great crop, however, is predicted should the bright weather continue. Carnations, on the other hand, were plentiful and some of them were dumped for want of demand. These are exceptionally fine in quality. There is a big demand for bulbous stock and few are left over after the morning sales. Southern daffodils hurt the sale of home-grown stock. The best Spencer sweet peas sell at a good price. There is a big de-

Various Notes.

One of the best social affairs ever given by the Florists' Club was held February 18, at Kleekamp's hall. The club's trustees deserve great credit for its success. The hall was beautifully decorated with plants and cut flowers. A large bouquet, made of fifty-seven varieties of flowers, came from the Missouri Botanical Garden. The young folks came out in full force and occupied the dancing floor until midnight. About 100 couples were in attendance. It was voted a grand success and will surely be repeated before the close of the dancing season.

David S. Geddis, head of the floral department at Vandervoort's, was on the sick list last week, but is now ready to arrange for a big representation at the National Flower Show at Philadelphia, next month.

The County Growers' Association will hold an important meeting March 1. Acting-President Edwards and Secretary Joseph Deutschmann are arranging for a large attendance. Their slogan is "Come early and get a seat."

Andy Von Hoffman, manager of Waldbart's Grand avenue establishment, was laid up with the gout last week. From latest reports, however, he was back on the job, doing two men's work.

It is reported that Henry Blixen has severed his connection with J. F. Ammann & Co., of Edwardsville, Ill., with whom he has been for several years, and that he will soon build a range of houses.

H. G. Berning handled a fine lot of American Beauties last week. He says roses have been scarce of late, but he looks for a big crop from now on.

The trustees of the St. Louis Florists' Club will meet this week to arrange for a miscellaneous flower show, to be staged at one of the wholesale houses March 9.

Werner Bros., of Clayton, have cut some surprisingly fine roses, valley and carnations. The Sunburst roses are of exceptionally fine quality. A big rose crop is predicted from this place.

There will be a large party from here at the eleventh annual convention of the Illinois State Florists' Association, at Moline, Ill., March 7 and 8. A pressing invitation was extended by Secretary J. F. Ammann to all members of the club.

John Himmer informs me that he and his brother, Nick, have moved from Clayton to Webster Groves, where they have cleared a 40-acre tract, on which they will build a house or two this summer.

Fred Foster, who is at present on Sixth street, reports that he will move to new quarters on Olive street, but the exact location is not announced. The many railroad officials moving from Olive street to Broadway make available twelve fine store rooms.

F. C. Weber, Sanders, Young Bros. and F. H. Weber report an excellent St. Valentine's day business. Violets were the leader in demand. Joseph Witek, Kalisch Bros. Floral Co. and John Boerm also report a big call for violets for St. Valentine's.

of the St. Louis Florists' Club will be held at the home of Secretary J. J. Beneke, 3648 Humphrey street, March 2, when interesting topics will be put into shape for discussion at the next meeting of the club.

The Retail Florists' Association held its monthly meeting February 21. According to President Charles Young and Secretary Weber, the meeting was well attended and full of interest.

A report of the death of Conrad Bergstermann will be found in this week's obituary column. J. J. B.

The Market.

Business was unusually good last week, and the florists are satisfied with the results of the St. Valentine's day business. The general opinion is that the volume of business this year far surpassed that of St. Valentine's day last year. There was an ample supply of stock to meet the demand, with the possible exception of short-stemmed roses, which were none too plentiful. Violets, sweet peas and roses took the lead for corsages. Spring flowers in all varieties were in demand, especially for filling heart-shaped baskets. Violets sold at $2 per hundred. Valley sold well at $1 per dozen. Roses brought from $1 to $5 per dozen. Carnations went well at 75 cents and $1 per dozen. Most of the bulbous stock brought $1 per dozen, while snapdragons retailed at $1.50 per dozen. The medium-sized plants sold well. The florists' windows were full of suggestions for table decorations for Valentine's day parties.

The quality of stock at this writing is excellent. The sunshine has helped the roses and carnations to a marked degree; sweet peas have become more numerous. There are many wedding orders booked for this week and business continues to be brisk.

Various Notes.

ration for a banquet last week. Yellow carnations and jonquils were used in great quantities. This concern also had several decorations for Washington's birthday parties.

The Doswell Floral Co. reports a record business for Valentine's day. Violet corsages were greatly in demand and bulbous plants met with a fine sale.

A. J. Lanternier & Co. had a fine Valentine's day business in baskets and blooming plants. Roses were somewhat scarce.

Markey Bros. report a satisfactory Valentine's day business at their new location on Harrison street. Blooming plants of medium size sold well.

Visitors last week were J. P. McCarthy, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia; Ernest F. Hoehl, of S. S. Skidelsky & Co., Philadelphia; I. M. Bayersdorfer, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia. R. F.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, John M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Thirty-fourth annual convention, Chicago, June 20 to 22, 1916.

THE floods in Holland have done little if any damage to seed, bulb or nursery interests.

LAST week's boat from Copenhagen landed 571 parcels of Danish seeds at New York.

CAPTAIN BURNET LANDRETH, of the D. Landreth Seed Co., Bristol, Pa., and secretary of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League, recently returned from a winter vacation in Cuba.

MAIL orders, which were a bit backward during January and the first part of February because of the severely cold weather, began to gather volume with the arrival of the first spring-like days. It promises to be a short season.

THE principal difficulty California growers will have in producing all the flower seeds this country needs lies in holding assistants long enough to bring expert labor to bear on the development of recognized and dependable high quality.

THE Horticultural Advertiser (British) reprints items that have appeared in America relative to the arrival of German seeds via neutral countries and says, "It would seem there is still great need for our blockade to be made more effective."

IT is stated that in the vicinity of Santa Cruz, Cal., there have been planted some twenty acres of Freesia Purity and some three acres of Calla Æthiopica for bulbs. The marketing of the crop is expected to be in the hands of some half dozen growers and jobbers.

H. G. HASTINGS, of Atlanta, enjoys a chuckle every time he thinks of the first page ad in a little Arkansas paper that came to his attention recently, wherein a candidate for congress assures the voters that, if he can displace the present incumbent, he will see they get their free seeds regularly and not "on the eve of election."

THE active head of the Blair-Harper Seed Co., which is opening for business in the mail order seed line at Aurora, Ill., is Donald Blair, a graduate of the Minnesota College of Agriculture, class of 1907. For a time he was a seed expert for the state of Wisconsin, until he formed a partnership with the Harper

DREER'S Extra Selected SWEET PEAS

We aim to confine our list of Sweet Peas to the very best varieties and only those which can be used by florists for cutting. We have added a number of the choicest new varieties of the Spencer type to our list this season.

Orchid-flowered or Spencer Sweet Peas

This type is distinguished from the grandiflora sorts by the extraordinary size of their flowers and by the standard being crinkled and wavy. They usually bear four blossoms on a stem, and are as easy to grow as the commonest sorts. A fair crop the past season enables us to offer them at prices much lower than ever before.

"Long Lost" Lettuce

Pkt., 25c; oz., 50c; 2 oz., 90c; ¼ lb., $1.50; ½ lb., $2.75; lb., $5.00, postpaid. ⅓ off to the trade.

The most wonderful Lettuce produced in the whole world during the past one hundred years. Excels all others on the market as a shipper, as a keeper, in quality, in sweetness, in flavor, in color, in profits, in reliability, in hardiness. Produces the best early heads, large heads, sure heads, solid heads, compact heads, tender heads, globular heads, firm heads, uniform heads.

LONG LOST LETTUCE.
The Jewel Recovered.

On June 8, 1915, Mr. Carl Hoffacker, of Union Co., N. J., writes: "Although weather conditions were not exactly favorable, your 'Long Lost' Lettuce seed produced most solid, tender, white heads, proving it a 'jewel recovered,' and giving more satisfaction than any other variety grown."

On July 10, 1915, Mr. A. E. Steffa, of Tama Co., Iowa, writes: "In a trial of 27 varieties of Lettuce, your 'Long Lost' Lettuce stood at the head for solidity of head and long-standing, also was the most uniform."

On Aug. 3, 1915, Mr. John J. Sickles, of Monmouth Co., N. J., writes: "Your 'Long Lost' Lettuce is the best I ever saw. Got Big Boston beat a mile. Refused to take one dollar a head for it. I grow fancy Lettuce."

On June 7, 1915, Mr. Henry Tubbs, of New Haven Co., Conn., writes: "Your 'Long Lost' Lettuce is all O. K., and next Spring I shall get all my seeds from you."

On June 21, 1915, Messrs. Gibney Bros., of Marion Co., Mo., write: "We set out a fine lot of transplanted 'Long Lost' Lettuce plants. They grew fine and made a fine lot of heads, very large and creamy. We think it a fine Lettuce and will try it again this Fall."

On June 19, 1915, Mr. Wm. B. Hill, of Clermont Co., Ohio, writes: "I gave your 'Long Lost' Lettuce seed an outdoor test and must say it is fine. Can't be beat. But it has been so awfully wet here. Finest flavored, better than I ever ate. All who have eaten it pronounced it fine. Will give it a better trial next year. Will get it out earlier."

On Oct. 8, 1915, Mr. George E. Bradley, of Aroostook Co., Maine, writes: "The 'Long Lost' Lettuce seed I bought of you last Spring has done the best I ever had any Lettuce do, both in greenhouse and garden."

LONG LOST LETTUCE.
The Jewel Recovered.

As a splendid shipper, "Long Lost" Lettuce far surpasses every other Lettuce, including the Big Boston.

As we started with less than an ounce of seed, you can quickly realize the amount of seed we have produced this year is very limited. We therefore urge you to send us your orders immediately if you want to grow the "Long Lost" Lettuce this season.

The famous Tomato grower, John Baer, says "Long Lost" Lettuce is the very best Lettuce the market gardeners ever knew. There has never been any Lettuce equal to it, for it is something extra good.

On June 21, 1915, Mr. I. R. Schnebly of Grundy Co., Iowa, writes: "The 'Long Lost' Lettuce seed grew fine. It is very handsome in appearance, excellent flavor and the most valuable variety I have ever grown."

On June 26, 1915, Mr. Ben H. Kegly, of Cecil Co., Md., writes: "I received an order of 'Long Lost' Lettuce seed from you early in the Spring and it has proven to be the most wonderful Lettuce I have ever grown."

On July 24, 1915, Mr. G. Ralph Laighton, of Rockingham Co., N. H., writes: "I take pleasure in saying that your 'Long Lost' Lettuce has done splendidly with me this season. The heads were very large, solid and crisp, and the flavor excellent. I have another crop of 'Long Lost' Lettuce that will be maturing soon and have also sown seed for a late crop. I shall continue cultivation of the 'Long Lost.'"

On June 7, 1915, Mr. S. W. Carman, of Lancaster Co., Pa., writes: "In regard to your 'Long Lost' Lettuce, there is none better or as good. It beats any I ever had in quantity and nice, tender heads. Flavor can't be beat."

On June 19, 1915, Messrs. Vogt Bros., of Baltimore Co., Md., wrote: "The 'Long Lost' Lettuce is the very best heading Lettuce we have ever raised, and will stand the heat, as heads will burst open before going to seed. We do not want anything any better."

On June 15, 1915, Mr. Wm. Horner, of Baltimore Co., Md., writes: "The 'Long Lost' Lettuce which I purchased from you early this Spring is all that it is claimed by your firm. I like it so well I purchased some more. I certainly recommend it to market gardeners."

On June 19, 1915, Mr. Cris Gebb, of Baltimore Co., Md., writes: "The 'Long Lost' Lettuce turned out for me just as it is advertised. I want no better."

On Aug. 9, 1915, Mr. Henry Seymour, of Vanderburg Co., Ind., writes: "I have words of praise for your 'Long Lost' Lettuce. First, it stands drought better than any other kind. Second, it matures quicker and makes larger heads in less time than any Lettuce I know of. Third, it is tender, crisp and of a very fine flavor."

On June 14, 1915, Mr. John Trabandt, Wholesale Market Gardener, of Baltimore Co., Md., writes: "Bolgiano's 'Long Lost' Lettuce is without doubt the best Lettuce I have ever raised."

QUALITY.

Earliest and best in 28 varieties; brilliant, deep red color; smoothest; no core; almost free from seed; delicious flavored; far more solid and meaty than any other; no culls; ripens even up to the stem; perfect beauties; uniform in size and ripening; picks two to one to any other variety; from 105 to 122 perfect fruit to the vine; a perfect shipper; blight proof.

EARLINESS.

Ten days earlier than Earliana in Canada; the earliest Tomato in New Jersey; 10 days earlier than Globe in Florida; planted six weeks later but came first in Texas; 3 weeks ahead of any in Virginia; 3 weeks ahead of any in New York; 3 weeks ahead of any in Washington; 2 weeks ahead of any in Maryland; set out May 30, picked ripe fruit June 17, in New York.

After having been successfully grown by the leading florists, market gardeners, truckers and farmers in every tomato growing State in the United States, Canada, Mexico, Cuba and many of the European countries, it is pronounced by all to be The Earliest and Best Tomato on Earth.

Produces perfect, solid, high crown, beautiful, brilliant, deep red shipping tomatoes in 30 days, from large, strong, well matured plants in veneer bands, with roots undisturbed.

JOHN BAER—HIMSELF

Gives a Friendly but Earnest Notice to His Friends and Fellow Market Gardeners.

Baltimore Co., Md., Jan. 1, 1916.

I hereby inform my Many Friends, the Market Gardeners, Canners, and the Public in General, I have placed my entire 1916 supply of "John Baer" Tomato Seed, which I personally grew and selected, with J. Bolgiano & Son, of Baltimore, Md. Any seed offered by any other source is not my production, and I cannot feel morally responsible for the results it may produce.

I have given this Tomato my greatest care and attention for many years and take pride in seeing that my Fellow Market Gardeners are getting only seed that truly represents the result of my life work.

(Signed) JOHN BAER.

Fifty to 100 fruit to each plant.

Ripens evenly, right up to the stem.

Twenty-four fruit exactly fill a six-carrier basket.

Each beautiful "John Baer" Tomato weighs about 6½ ounces.

Mild, deliciously sweet flavor. The finest flavor you have ever tasted.

Most perfect High Crown Tomatoes ever grown, entirely free from core.

Just enough foliage—will stand plenty of manuring without going to vine. Set plants 3x3½ feet.

Almost seedless; it requires 6 to 8 bushels of "John Baer" Tomatoes to make one pound of seed.

No cripples, no scalds, no blight, no cracked, no wrinkled, no one-sided, uneven, scarred fruit. When dead ripe will not burst.

The "John Baer" Tomato is the result of Fifteen Generations of Improvement and Selection for earliness, quality, shape, fruit, color and shipping quality.

Palmyra, N. J., June 19, 1915.

Messrs. J. Bolgiano & Son.

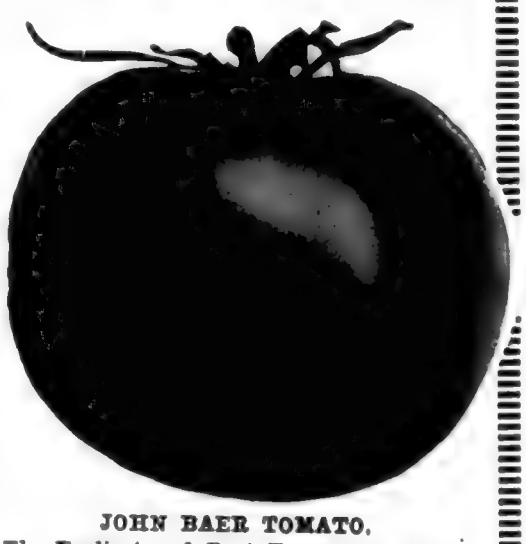
Dear Sirs—Last winter I sent to your store and bought some "John Baer" Tomato seed. On Thursday, the 17th of June, I picked a number of fine, ripe Tomatoes and have picked some every day to date. I planted them in the open field April the 21st. If we had not had so much cold and cloudy weather in May I think I could have picked by the first of June. I planted them in the same field with "Earlianas" and they are far ahead.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) PENNEL COOPER.

JOHN BAER TOMATO.
The Earliest and Best Tomato on Earth.

From Market Growers' Journal of Louisville, Kentucky, Sept. 1, 1915.



"'John Baer' has withstood the rigors of this season the best of all the varieties we have, which include also Bonny Best, Earlibell and June Pink. The excessive rains of the last four weeks have caused our entire plantation to become affected with the œdema. The 'John Baer,' however, does not seem to suffer from it, as a very much smaller proportion of its foliage dies than with the other varieties. 'John Baer' is a very good variety for heavy soils."—Maplehurst Gardens, Southern Michigan.

G. BRUNNER'S SONS, FLORISTS.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Feb. 7th, 1915.

J. Bolgiano & Son.

Gentlemen—Out of 50 "John Baer" plants I picked on an average of a half bushel every other day, when on my other plants I did not average a small measure a day. By me "John Baer" is more than you claimed for it in your ad last year.

The heads were very large, solid and crisp, and the flavor excellent. I have another crop of 'Long Lost' Lettuce that will be maturing soon and have also sown seed for a late crop. I shall continue cultivation of the 'Long Lost.'"

On June 7, 1915, Mr. S. W. Carman, of Lancaster Co., Pa., writes: "In regard to your 'Long Lost' Lettuce, there is none better or as good. It beats any I ever had in quantity and nice, tender heads. Flavor can't be beat."

On June 19, 1915, Messrs. Vogt Bros., of Baltimore Co., Md., wrote: "The 'Long Lost' Lettuce is the very best heading Lettuce we have ever raised, and will stand the heat, as heads will burst open before going to seed. We do not want anything any better."

On June 15, 1915, Mr. Wm. Horner, of Baltimore Co., Md., writes: "The 'Long Lost' Lettuce which I purchased from you early this Spring is all that it is claimed by your firm. I like it so well I purchased some more. I certainly recommend it to market gardeners."

On June 19, 1915, Mr. Cris Gebb, of Baltimore Co., Md., writes: "The 'Long Lost' Lettuce turned out for me just as it is advertised. I want no better."

On Aug. 9, 1915, Mr. Henry Seymour, of Vanderburg Co., Ind., writes: "I have words of praise for your 'Long Lost' Lettuce. First, it stands drought better than any other kind. Second, it matures quicker and makes larger heads in less time than any Lettuce I know of. Third, it is tender, crisp and of a very fine flavor."

On June 14, 1915, Mr. John Trabandt, Wholesale Market Gardener, of Baltimore Co., Md., writes: "Bolgiano's 'Long Lost' Lettuce is without doubt the best Lettuce I have ever raised."

JOHN BAER—HIMSELF

Gives a Friendly but Earnest Notice to His Friends and Fellow Market Gardeners.

Baltimore Co., Md., Jan. 1, 1916.

I hereby inform my Many Friends, the Market Gardeners, Canners, and the Public in General, I have placed my entire 1916 supply of "John Baer" Tomato Seed, which I personally grew and selected, with J. Bolgiano & Son, of Baltimore, Md. Any seed offered by any other source is not my production, and I cannot feel morally responsible for the results it may produce.

I have given this Tomato my greatest care and attention for many years and take pride in seeing that my Fellow Market Gardeners are getting only seed that truly represents the result of my life work.

(Signed) JOHN BAER.

Fifty to 100 fruit to each plant.

Ripens evenly, right up to the stem.

Twenty-four fruit exactly fill a six-carrier basket.

Each beautiful "John Baer" Tomato weighs about 6½ ounces.

Mild, deliciously sweet flavor. The finest flavor you have ever tasted.

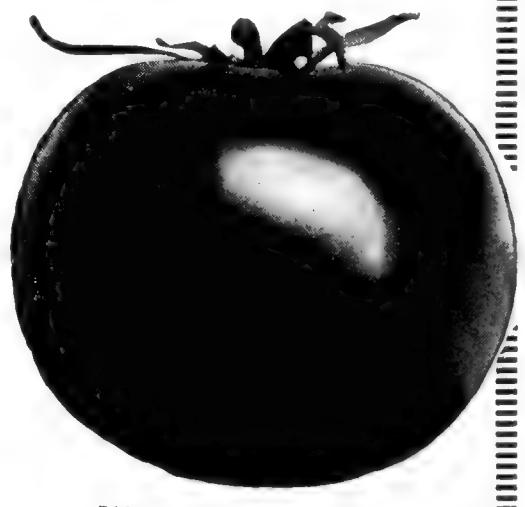
Most perfect High Crown Tomatoes ever grown, entirely free from core.

Just enough foliage—will stand plenty of manuring without going to vine. Set plants 3x3½ feet.

Almost seedless; it requires 6 to 8 bushels of "John Baer" Tomatoes to make one pound of seed.

No cripples, no scalds, no blight, no cracked, no wrinkled, no one-sided, uneven, scarred fruit. When dead ripe will not burst.

The "John Baer" Tomato is the result of Fifteen Generations of Improvement and Selection for earliness, quality, shape, fruit, color and shipping quality.



Palmyra, N. J., June 19, 1915.

Messrs. J. Bolgiano & Son.

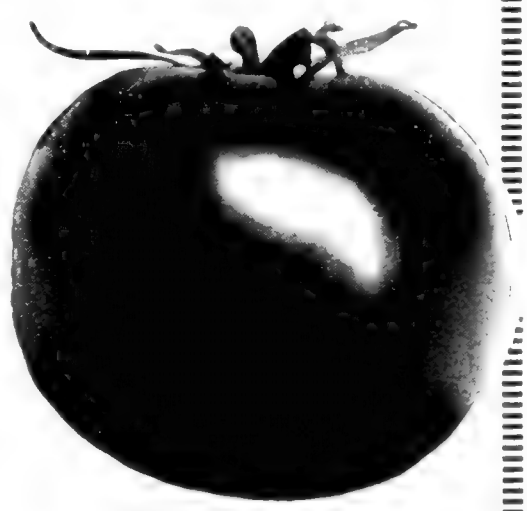
Dear Sirs—Last winter I sent to your store and bought some "John Baer" Tomato seed. On Thursday, the 17th of June, I picked a number of fine, ripe Tomatoes and have picked some every day to date. I planted them in the open field April the 21st. If we had not had so much cold and cloudy weather in May I think I could have picked by the first of June. I planted them in the same field with "Earlianas" and they are far ahead.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) PENNEL COOPER.

JOHN BAER TOMATO.
The Earliest and Best Tomato on Earth.

From Market Growers' Journal of Louisville, Kentucky, Sept. 1, 1915.



"'John Baer' has withstood the rigors of this season the best of all the varieties we have, which include also Bonny Best, Earlibell and June Pink. The excessive rains of the last four weeks have caused our entire plantation to become affected with the œdema. The 'John Baer,' however, does not seem to suffer from it, as very much smaller proportion of its foliage dies than with the other varieties. 'John Baer' is a very good variety for heavy soils."—Maplehurst Gardens, Southern Michigan.

J. Bolgiano & Son.

Gentlemen—Out of 50 "John Baer" plants I picked on an average of a half bushel every other day, when on my other plants I did not average a small measure a day. By me "John Baer" is more than you claimed for it in your ad last year.

WANT TAX ON MAIL TRADE.

A large number of petitions are being received at Washington, by the various members of Congress, from individuals and associations all over the country, urging the enactment of a law placing a tax upon the business done by mail order houses. A number of bills having this in view have been introduced into the House of Representatives, but it is doubtful if anything will be done towards such legislation at this session. A tax of this kind would only be assessed against firms doing an interstate business. A large number of seedsmen, nurserymen and florists would come under the law. The proceeds from the proposed tax measure are to be divided among the various states in proportion to the amount of the business done therein by mail, such moneys to be applied to the maintenance of good roads.

C. L. L.

AN INTERNATIONAL YARN.

This is the story of a perspicacious Hollander, some hard-headed Hamburgers, a canny Scot, certain gentlemen who said they were from Missouri, and the British Foreign Office. The general outline is facts, but no certificate of verity goes with the details, some of the trimmings possibly being the result of repetition.

To begin at the beginning, as the story tellers say, there lives amid bright bulb fields in Holland a busy little man who never misses a chance to turn an honest dollar. Chance, mind you; he's ready to take a chance. And the European war affords long chances aplenty.

Last autumn, so the story goes, this astute Hollander slipped up to Hamburg and said he could use a few million valley pips if the price were right. Well, it was; $7 is the figure mentioned. But the Hollander must have six months' credit.

Now, the British government hasn't objected to the movement of the small quantities of pips of Danish or Dutch origin, but it has a strong dislike to seeing anything German sailing the seas. Also, a German can see as far as anybody through the hole in a grindstone and the Hamburgers were wise to the Hollander's game; moreover, they knew what he was up against. So they said, "We'll make it an object to you to pay cash." Report has it the deal was closed by the gentleman who cultivates the bright bulb fields laying down $25,000 obtained from his home bank and taking over behind the dikes the nice little lot of five million first-class pips.

So far, so good.

The British government has issued permits for the unmolested movement of German goods owned by neutrals prior to a certain date. Our Holland friend held one of these permits. It said he might ship valley pips, a limited number, 300,000 as the story goes. So he shipped, and he shipped, and he shipped. It is believed two millions of the five were afloat before the British called a halt.

And there is where the canny Scot

Sow Some Sutton's Seed Specials

YOU know how it is these days; your customers are always asking for something new. If you haven't that something new and novel, your competitor more than likely has. He sells what you ought to have sold. It's an old, old saying, as true as 'tis old, that "the man who looks ahead is the man who gets ahead."

One of the largest "looks ahead" right now is our catalogue. In it you can find not simply a few varieties, over-displayed to magnify their importance, as in some catalogues, but a surprising quantity of strictly high-class things.

All those bronze, silver and gold medal winners, shown at the San Francisco Fair, are listed.

They have already advertised themselves so broadly that you can't afford to pass them by. At least you will want some of those glorious giant-flowered Antirrhinums that won the gold medal.

Send 35c for our 190-page catalogue. The money will be refunded on your first order amounting to $5.00.

comes in. He deals in valley, among other more important things. But he felt that this is a bad year for the international trade in Hamburg pips unless the shipper can show a perfectly straight record for the British. Perhaps it was patriotism, perhaps only prudence, the disinclination to take the chance that looked good to the Hollander, but the Scot is said to be doing nothing in valley this season.

Still, with full knowledge of all that goes on among the valley dealers at Hamburg, one scarcely could expect he would sit still and see the Dutchman slip his customers the pips no cautious man would handle. Anyway, there isn't any evidence the Germans put the Britons wise, unless they did it through the Scot.

Well, the Holland speculator still has the balance of his pips and a strong suspicion a British agent watches his every little movement with its meaning all its own.

But to go back to the pips that quietly floated past the British blockade. That's where the men from Missouri come in!

A carload of the pips finally landed in Chicago. The consignee wanted those pips as badly as anyone could. Only he didn't want them to flower so soon! So he turned them down. Eventually the broker found a grower who was willing to save what he could out of the lot. The shipments that went to the Pacific coast were even harder to handle and the expenses were heavier.

But nobody has heard a whimper out of the Hollander. He took a chance and he's game.

baskets, plant tubs, rattan or wicker ferneries, willow baskets, mahogany ferneries, cement boxes and vases, all equipped with the Illinois self-watering device.

Northboro Dahlia and Gladiolus Gardens, Northboro, Mass.—Two catalogues, general and wholesale, each giving greatest space and prominence to dahlias, but also listing "a few of the leading and popular varieties" of gladioli. The general catalogue, which is a 20-page, illustrated book, also offers cannas, peonies, etc.

Berkeley Dahlia Gardens, Denver, Colo.—"Dahlias Imported and Grown by Mrs. Charles O. Bell"; a 12-page, illustrated catalogue, printed in large, clear type.

Metzner Floral Co., Mountain View, Cal.—A neat 20-page booklet, offering some of the company's novelties and specialties in gladioli, petunias, carnations, geraniums, pelargoniums and pansies; also about a dozen varieties of seeds.

Suburban Seed Co., La Grange, Ill.—An illustrated, 48-page catalogue of seeds, bulbs, plants and general nursery stock. Among the noticeable features of the book are the instructions in gardening, which occupy about twelve pages.

Young's Seed Store, St. Louis, Mo.—"Young's Garden Book for 1916," containing comprehensive lists of seeds, plants, nursery stock, fertilizers, garden requisites, etc.; seventy-four pages, illustrated, and bound in an attractive colored cover. "Don't buy old seeds; buy Young's," says the company's slogan.

DEPENDENT VALUES

Almost all values are dependent upon the mass organization of civilized life. The price of a diamond is not measured by the sweat of the miner nor the skill of the cutter, but by the community desire for it. The price of lilies is not regulated by the cost of production, but by the demand for them. Popular demand can be created for anything good. In the sale of flowers it is important. Flowers are a semi-luxury. The demand for them is regulated by custom or habit. Habit is a natural or acquired disposition to act in a certain way. The disposition to buy flowers is due to a natural or cultivated taste for beautiful things. Therefore to support and increase the habit of flower-buying, you must advertise flowers, and supply your customers with the best there is, that they may be pleased and buy continually. The pure white lily is a beautiful example of floral art if properly produced. It is appropriate for many occasions and has a refinement about it that is lacking in so many common flowers. Lilies will always please if they are of good quality. To be sure of good lilies get Horsehoe Brand Giganteum bulbs—they will give you results that will create the demand your business requires. Send for prices.

Not how cheap but how good.

logue, handsomely illustrated and making its appeal in an artistic and effective manner. At the beginning are several pages of instructions about transplanting, spraying, etc., with formulas for the making of insecticides and fungicides.

Blue Hill Nurseries, South Braintree, Mass.—"Specimen Evergreens, Trees, Shrubs, Roses, Vines and Herbaceous Perennials," a 32-page catalogue, in narrow, pocket form, without illustrations.

A. H. & N. M. Lake, Marshfield, Wis.—"Art in Landscape Gardening," a 16-page booklet on the beautifying of private and public grounds.

W. W. Wilmore, Jr., Wheatridge, Colo.—Two price lists, one of them a 16-page general catalogue, illustrated, the other an 8-page wholesale list. Though gladioli are the specialty and are so treated in the catalogues, there are also offerings of cannas, dahlias, phloxes, irises and miscellaneous perennials.

Gunn Seed Co., Lincoln, Neb.—Second annual catalogue of seeds, vegetable plants, roses, bulbs, flowering and foliage plants, shrubs, poultry supplies, garden implements, etc.; thirty-two pages, illustrated.

Peter Henderson & Co., New York, N. Y.—"Henderson's Farmers' Manual," containing what may safely be called a complete list of field seeds, such as grains, forage crops, root crops, potatoes, cotton, tobacco, etc.; also farm implements, fertilizers and other supplies; forty-eight pages, illustrated. Various grass mixtures are offered, for the lawn, the open field and the woodland.

Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J.—Another excellent sample of catalogue making, such as this company is in the habit of producing; it contains 160 pages, and the paper, typography and illustrations are all of the best quality. Besides a comprehensive line of hard-wooded nursery stock, including nut-bearing trees, the book offers lawn grass seed, perennials, decorative and flowering plants, pot-grown forcing plants, plant tubs, etc. The rose list occupies eighteen pages.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Business Washington's birthday was satisfactory. Red flowers of all kinds were the best sellers and red carnations brought up to $6, the other colors going at $4 per hundred. There was a marked shortage of the best grades of American Beauty roses, but the ordinary grades are coming in more plentifully. The latter are bringing $6 per dozen. Forget-me-nots were in little demand and cattleyas sold well at $5 and $6 per dozen. Narcissi are somewhat scarce and there are not nearly as many jonquils on the market as there have been. Freesia is plentiful and hangs fire. Large quantities of extra fine sweet peas are coming in and these meet with a good sale. Cornflower was in much better demand and cleaned up quickly. Valley met with a fair sale. Lilies, both Easter and rubrum, are only in light demand, the former bringing $1.50 and the latter about $1 per dozen in the long-stemmed grades and about half that price for the short stock.

Various Notes.

The Washington Chamber of Commerce is making extensive plans for an active 1916. All the committees have not yet been formed, but E. S. Schmid has been appointed to the retail trade committee; F. W. Bolgiano to the school committee; William F. Gude to the membership committee; George H. Cooke and William H. Ernest to the manufacturers' committee. C. L. L.

We sold our advertised 10,000 salvias in one day. We enclose 20 cents in stamps to pay for the ad in The Review. —Stuhldreher Bros., Mansfield, O.

We have disposed of nearly 100,000 carnation plants this spring. Please discontinue the ad in The Review. The plants were fine, but we think much of the success in moving so many of them was due to your valuable paper.—The Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa.

AMERICAN BEAUTIES

We are receiving daily a large supply of CHOICE BLOOMS. Best in the market

Our usual large supply of CARNATIONS on sale every morning at 7:30—the entire cut of 200,000 plants.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

A few fine days have worked a wonderful change in conditions. Less than a week ago everyone was regretting the shortage of flowers. This week the wholesale houses are full of choice stock of all kinds. Roses have improved greatly in quality and increased in quantity. Violets have not had enough hot weather to suffer, while bulbous stock apparently is coming in by the carload. All the little spring flowers are arriving rapidly, and carnations are again at their best. A couple of dull days materialized in the middle of the week, outside of which the trade has been remarkably good. Funeral work keeps up well and there is a good deal of entertaining going on, which helps to clean up stock. The windows of the retailers are attractive with daffodils and shrub branches. Acacia Baileyana is popular for this purpose, as well as many of the flowering peaches and almonds.

Various Notes.

The beautiful pink carnation, Mrs. Welch, which I frequently noted last season, is again in fine condition with the growers, Elgert & Martin. The color is of the best, and after a week in the store or house it still remains stiff and attractive. It is just about the perfection of an outdoor or lath house carnation. This firm has acquired a lease on two acres of land in Covina, and intends to cover at least an acre with lath and use the rest for growing carnations. Until now there has been no retailer in Covina, and Elgert & Martin intend to open along this line. They have excellent stock, all of which has heretofore been wholesaled in this city.

Frank Wilhelm left February 15 for Salt Lake City, Chicago and other points. Mr. Wilhelm has sold most of his stock and leased his property, and intends to stay some time in the middle west before returning to California. Since going out of business here, he has worked as foreman for H. W. Turner at Montebello. He has made many friends during the five years he has resided in the Angel City.

Arthur Gleave, of Gleave's Flower Shop, Santa Barbara, has been in the city looking over stock. He is more than satisfied with the business done at the store since the opening, about Christmas time.

The L. A. Floral Co. is handling the entire cut of the pink carnation, Mrs. Welch, grown by Elgert & Martin, and reports favorably on its wonderful lasting and shipping qualities. F. Sperry says that since the railroads have resumed operation they have had a wonderful trade in out-of-town shipments.

G. M. Bridgeford, of Eagle Rock, is bringing in exceptionally good forget-me-nots.

G. W. Smith reports business good at the store at Seventh and Figueroa streets. The nursery end also is booming and Mr. Smith says he never knew bulbous stock to move so well.

M. L. Germain, president of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., reports an increase of approximately one-third over the business of this time last year. This applies to all departments. In the nursery department a brisk demand is noted for small 2-inch stock of all kinds.

F. McCabe, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, called on the trade last week.

The California Cut Flower & Evergreen Co. is handling large quantities of daffodils, about 4,000 per day of northern stock, as well as large quantities of locally grown flowers.

O. C. Saakes is making several improvements in his store and reports business as being good.

At the Wolfskills' & Morris Goldenson store John Gordon, last week, had a striking window. The center was of violets, flanked with daffodils and the feathery, beautiful flowers and foliage of Acacia Baileyana.

George Watson is shipping magnificent carnations from the new range at Covina junction.

At the present writing nurserymen are working double time to keep up with orders, balling and planting, all of which has been hindered by rain. The present hot weather is not likely to last, but if it does, the planting season will be greatly curtailed. The seed business also is brisk.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Retail business is active, some of the leading stores reporting the heaviest Valentine's day business in their recollection, while funeral and decorative work keeps up well. Conditions could hardly have been more favorable for Valentine's day. The weather since February 12 has been warm and bright, and the flood of spring bulbous stock—daffodils, narcissi, freesias, etc.—found an enormous demand. Of course prices have been low and growers' profits are small. Daffodils are peddled all over town and there is a line of small boys selling them to autoists all the way from Oakland to Hayward. It is the same with violets, which are in full crop and fine. The cut of carnations has increased greatly and prices are easy. Roses hold up fairly well, as only a few growers are bringing any in, but the stock appearing is fine, and with a strong shipping demand good prices rule. There is a good shipping business in violets, and a heavy demand for asparagus, of which there is hardly enough for local needs. Adiantum and other greens sell well. Anemones are in limited supply and few tulips are being cut. The tulips so far have not been so good as those of last year, and the trade is beginning to think the season's stock as a whole is inferior. The hyacinths, however, are good, and a few nice lots of iris have been sold. The supply of valley is scant and irregular. Easter lilies are improving steadily. Gardenias are appearing again and orchids continue plentiful, though the Valentine's day offering cleaned up well. Stocks, forget-me-not, mignonette, etc., are coming in better. Fruit blossoms are plentiful, almond especially making a fine appearance, and acacia continues popular. Rhododendrons are beginning to come forward and azaleas still hold their place. Cinerarias make an unusually fine showing and primulas occupy a prominent position. The planting season for nursery stock, long delayed by rain, now is in full swing, and as the time favorable for such work will be rather short, the stock is being rushed out in great quantities. The spring-like weather has brought quite a rush in the local seed business.

Various Notes.

The San Rafael growers and florists are making good progress with preliminary arrangements for their spring flower show, holding frequent meetings to transact the necessary business, and a number of growers on that side of the bay are already working on material for exhibition.

According to some of the San Rafael growers, last month's frost in that district killed many cinerarias, pelargoniums and other plants.

Domoto Bros. now are bringing in quite a lot of valley and say they will have some to offer for a long time to come.

Many of the smaller growers have for years been in the habit of bringing their stock for sale to Bush street or St. Ann street, in front of some of the wholesale flower establishments, making quite a crowd in that vicinity at 7 a. m. Being so long unmolested, they began to feel that they had a vested interest in the street. For some reason, however, the police recently decided to shut down on the custom, and one morning last week made a raid on the growers, giving several of them a free ride to the station. Since then the growers have been holding forth in a part of the basement of the California Flower Market.

The E. W. McLellan Co. is getting an exceptionally fine cut of Sunburst roses, also a good cut of Cecile Brunner, many of the latter being shipped to New York. This company's other roses are coming in well, and few other growers have large crops to offer.

Joseph's new window scheme is the talk of the town. He has placed an aviary in the side window, consisting of several doves, canaries, and brilliantly colored birds, with oak limbs, a floor of sand and moss, and goldfish as accessories. It is separated from the store and the front window by a pretty green lattice, and the whole is decorated with various kinds of flowers, a magnificent collection of orchids being used one day last week and a great mass of daffodils the next.

T. Mosco opened for business last week in his new store at 20 Geary street. He is making an attractive display on a rather unpretentious scale, and has the interior neatly fitted up in green tones, with furnishings to match. He reports a satisfactory start.

Schwerin Bros. last week brought in the first good Pink Pearl rhododendrons of the season. The stock looks nice and has been well received. They also have been bringing in forced hyacinths and tulips.

E. James has been putting on the market a large lot of cinerarias during the last few weeks. Much of the stock was exceptionally good and made a fine showing at the stores, particularly before the spring stock came in so abundantly.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. is laying out a large planting for the Fitzhugh place at Woodside.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee has been shipping many violets and says stock is quite plentiful now, though it was hard to get for a time. She has been trying some shipments of pussy willow, which has been plentiful. She finds that the gardens and flower shows at the exposition have brought a great deal of attention to California flowers.

Miss Rothschild, of the Bellevue Florists, says business is picking up. She believes that San Francisco needs a larger population to support the trade as it has been conducted for the last few years; but from present indications she believes the needed growth will now come fast.

Podesta & Baldocchi are specializing in orchids this season and have been doing some advertising along this line. They have maintained excellent orchid displays, using many of the less plentiful varieties as well as the ever-present cattleyas.

Frank Pelicano now is bringing in a nice cut of his new violet, Quaker Lady, though he has not yet enough of them to sell other than at retail.

Jack Olson, of the New Roserie, has been busy this month executing many dinner decorations, in addition to a steady run of funeral work. He finds the potted tulips and hyacinths extremely popular during the fortnight or so that they have been in.

W. Bingham has bought out the Jordan Park Flower Shop, at 323 Clement street, which has been conducted for some time by F. E. Stratton.

Miss Jennie Miller, formerly of Modesto, is opening a new flower shop at 617 L street, Merced, Cal.

Charles Willis Ward has returned to Eureka and is ready for the receipt of large shipments of foreign plants and shrubs from Avery Island, La., for which arrangements were made during Mr. Ward's eastern trip. Plans are being drawn for a new lath house, 264x644 feet, at the Eden establishment near Eureka. S. H. G.

Business last week showed the effects of the stimulus of the near-spring weather that prevailed all the week. Valentine's day was observed by many with gifts of cut flowers and potted plants. ers, who are familiar with the wants of customers in eastern markets, complain that several of the festal days, including Valentine's day, are poorly observed here, in regard to flowers, but dealers who have had many years' experience in this market declare that the custom of patronizing the florist on these days is becoming more general each year. So the situation is hopeful.

There is plenty of cut stock to fill all wants, perhaps excepting the roses. Carnations are abundant and of fair, though not prime, quality. Bulbous stock is prime. Darwin tulips have appeared. The prices of daffodils have stiffened after a tendency to slump. Fine orchids are shown, Cattleya Trianæ and Lælia Schrœderi being the favorites. There still are offerings of good cyclamens, begonias of the Lorraine type, primulas, azaleas, genistas, cinerarias and ericas, which, with the potted bulbous stock, make quite a variety. The first open blooms from outdoor laurustinus and Primula veris have come in. Sweet peas are few and of poor quality. The supply of home-grown violets has increased and the imported stock shows better quality. Nurserymen are busy shipping orders that accumulated during the bad weather.

Club Meeting.

About forty members attended the meeting of the Portland Floral Society held February 15. F. A. Van Kirk, secretary of the growers' committee, reported that copies of the letter relating to credits and authorized by the society had been mailed to all dealers whose addresses were available. He exhibited a book in which the dealers' names were alphabetically arranged, with spaces for noting reports, and he urged all the growers to report delinquencies in payment. This record will be open to inspection by the growers. A resolution authorizing the president to send floral offerings in the name of the society to the funerals of members or of their immediate families, was offered by the board of trustees and was adopted. Two new members were elected and three applications for membership were made.

The president called attention to the need of public education as to what to buy and what to avoid buying in bedding stock, porch and lawn decorations, ornamentals, etc., and how best to care for them. On motion a committee of three was authorized to prepare articles for the spring garden sections of the Sunday papers appearing early in March. S. W. Walker, A. J. Clarke and J. G. Bacher compose the committee.

F. A. Van Kirk, secretary of the committee on exhibitions, reported that the spaces in the floral center planned for the rose festival, June 7, 8 and 9, had been oversubscribed and final contracts prepared for signing. The final arrangement and location of the displays will be governed by the committee, in order to prevent clashes in color or any other inharmonious feature. The entertainment program consisted of a general discussion of insecticides, which was opened by J. F. W. De Jong and A. H. Harrison, representing the Tobacco Products Co., of Louisville, Ky. In relative cost and value, fumigating was compared with spraying, and many good ideas were offered by the visitors and by the members as to the best methods to use to control certain pests. The meeting adjourned and all enjoyed refreshments in the dining hall.

Damages to greenhouse properties by the recent storms were mentioned. Henry Kahn lost considerable glass, broken by the ice falling from telephone and light wires that pass over his houses. It seems that the wire or twig or any object that formed a nucleus was not in the center of the wrapper of ice, but was near the lower edge. In melting, the wrapper soon turned over and freed itself, so that bars of ice about one and one-half inch in diameter fell. The entire range of E. E.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Vice-president, John Watson, Newark, N. J.; Secretary, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

Forty-first annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 28 to 30, 1916.

RODERICK ROYCE, of Shellsburg, Ia., died February 8, after several months of illness. Details are given in the obituary column.

H. C. C. MILES, of Milford, Conn., was reëlected secretary of the Connecticut Pomological Society at its recent meeting at Hartford. This was the twentieth year of Mr. Miles' election to office.

JOHN HALL, secretary of the American Association of Nurserymen, 204 Granite building, Rochester, N. Y., has started a campaign to increase the membership prior to the Milwaukee convention, June 28 to 30. He advances the argument that the reorganization plan adopted at the Detroit convention, as soon as it is in full operation, will greatly increase the value of membership.

HORTICULTURAL IMPORTS.

While almost every steamer from a European port brings a few bags of seeds, the principal imports in all horticultural lines come via Rotterdam. The Zaandyk, which docked at New York last week, had these consignments, according to the manifest filed at the New York customhouse:

American Express Co., 57 cases plants; 86 bags seed.
American Shipping Co., 7 cases trees.
Darrow & Co., 3 bags seed.
W. Foster, 80 cases roots.
O. G. Hempstead & Son, 40 cases roots; 24 cases pips.
Peter Henderson & Co., 1 case bulbs.
Hudson & Randolph, 9 bags seed.
P. C. Kuyper & Co., 12 cases pips; 71 cases bulbs; 27 cases roots; 49 cases shrubs; 145 cases trees.
H. Langeler, 3 cases bulbs.
Lunham & Moore, 5 cases trees; 14 barrels seed.
McHutchison & Co., 89 cases trees.
MacNiff Horticultural Co., 1 case trees.
Maltus & Ware, 45 cases bulbs; 227 cases trees.
J. C. Murray, 123 bags seed.
Richard & Co., 12 cases trees.
Sheldon & Co., 21 bags seed.
Stumpp & Walter Co., 38 cases bulbs.
F. B. Vandegrift & Co., 2 cases trees; 5 barrels seed.

MUNICIPAL CONTRACTS.

Because the Oklahoma statutes provide that shade trees planted in streets of towns and cities shall be paid for by special assessments against the abutting property, the Supreme court decided the other day that a nursery could not enforce a contract made with a town where the contract did not contemplate compliance with those statutes (153 Pacific Reporter 628).

The nurseryman sued for $510, the price of 3,000 locust trees planted along the streets of the town, under a contract whereby the town agreed to pay that amount in this manner: "All money collected from the property owners for the trees up to July 1, 1912, at which time there shall be a town warrant issued for the balance remaining unpaid." The trial of the case resulted in a judgment favorable to the nurseryman, but on the town's appeal to the Oklahoma Supreme court the judgment was reversed, the higher court saying: "One who deals with a municipality does so with notice of the limitations on it or its agents' powers. All are presumed to know the law, and those who contract with a municipality or furnish it supplies do so with such knowledge. If they go beyond the limitations imposed they do so at their

Hurry your Orders for SWAS-TEEKA Gold Medal Set CANNAS

THESE three Special Gold Medal Winners at the Panama Pacific Exhibit, San Francisco, are our biggest 1916 sellers. Antoine Wintzer just tells me that they are going like hot cakes. If you want some, we would suggest your getting your letter into the first mail possible.

Here's Their Description:

SAN DIEGO

4 feet. Described as Chinese Orange or Persian Yellow in color. The crimped petals are remarkable for substance, which enables them to withstand the hot summer sun without wilting, and another charm is in the buds, which are dark bronze, harmonizing with the golden bronze foliage. Grand in every way.

Strong plants, 75c each; $6.00 for ten.

GOLDEN GATE

4 feet. The flowers open almost pure gold, but soon become richly rayed with orange crimson and apricot; throat deep carmine red. Foliage green.

Strong plants, $3.50 for 10; per 100, $25.00

CITY OF PORTLAND

3½ feet. The color is a beautiful glowing pink, deeper in color than its parent, Mrs. Alfred F. Conard, and the flowers are produced in greatest profusion on strong, erect, branching stalks. It is an early and continuous bloomer, blooming freely in hot or cold weather. Canna experts last season pronounced it the "Finest all-round pink Canna to date."

Strong plants, $3.50 for 10; per 100, $25.00

SOME CHOICE BEDDING KINDS

It's no small job to pick out a list of the best Cannas for foundation "garden spotting," or bedding plantings. Mr. Wintzer is always glad to make suggestions, so feel free to call on us. Here is a selection of thirteen that Mr. Wintzer says can't be beaten:

peril. Section 574, Rev. Laws 1910, provides: 'The council may enact ordinances for the purpose of planting, maintaining and protecting shade trees in the streets and avenues, whenever the same is petitioned for in the manner provided for in this chapter, for petitioning for sidewalks, and for the purpose of paying for the same shall have power to make assessments and collect the tax in the same manner as is provided by this chapter for assessing and collecting taxes for sidewalks.'

"It thus clearly appears that the expense of planting shade trees in the streets and avenues must be paid by the owners of the property in the same manner that the expenses of sidewalks are provided for—payment by the individual owner and not by the municipality.

"The petition does not aver that the necessary petition to authorize the council to enact ordinances for the purpose was filed or that ordinances were enacted under this section of the statute for the purpose of planting the trees in question. If the required petition had been filed, and the necessary ordinances passed, the council was without legal authority to bind the municipality to pay for any part of said trees, as is provided in the contract sued upon. The contract is void and does not impose any liability on the municipality."

CHICAGO NOTES.

C. L. Washburn was called up on long-distance phone at his home in Hinsdale and informed that a certain retailer must have 2,000 roses at once, to be used in funeral work to be delivered by 9 o'clock the next morning. Mr. Washburn called up one of his store force, Joseph Einwick, who rolled out of bed and went down to the store of Bassett & Washburn to get out the order. So far everything was fine, but next morning when Ernest Anderson opened the place he found that vases had been moved and that stock was missing. He at once got the janitor and together they called a policeman. The three were about to start a burglar hunt when Joe showed up with explanations.

A new automobile will be added to the delivery service of Joseph Ziska & Sons this week, according to Raymond Ziska, who is in charge of that end of the business.

Read This Unsolicited Testimonial

Lima, Ohio, Jan. 19, 1916.

Mr. Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass.

Dear Sir: We thought it might be interesting to you to receive a report of your new carnation "ALICE," as grown in this territory. "ALICE" has made a wonderful showing with us. We are growing some twenty different varieties of carnations. To date we have cut more blooms per plant from "ALICE" than from any of the other varieties. The blooms come almost 100 per cent perfect. This carnation has proved all that you claimed for it, and we do not hesitate to say that we believe this variety to be the very best carnation of its color being offered the Trade today.

You are to be congratulated on "ALICE." Very truly yours, the thoughts of Philip Schupp, manager of the J. A. Budlong wholesale house, again turn to the quest of stone artifacts in the forgotten corners of Illinois and Indiana.

The construction of five houses by the Geo. Wittbold Co., at Edgebrook, Ill., is well under way. Three of them measure 10x300 feet and will take the place of those torn down on Buckingham place to make way for the first section of the apartment building to be built there by Louis Wittbold and his associates. The other two, 10x280 feet, are to be used for growing cyclamen exclusively. The work of rebuilding the houses facing Aldine avenue, at the rear of the Buckingham place establishment, is being done by a crew of men under Mike Winandy.

To diversify his manner of spending week ends, Guy W. French, of French & Salm, accompanied a friend in a Reo car from Union Grove, Wis., to Morton Grove, Ill., in the snow storm of February 18. He makes a cheerful report of their crop of Russell roses.

Thora Clemenson has been removed from the South Shore hospital to her home, 7801 South Shore avenue. Here she will be under the immediate care of her uncle, Dr. Peter Clemenson.

A satisfactory run of wedding decorations and funeral work was done by George Kaspar, 4005 West Twenty-sixth street, last week.

Heavy funeral work last week is reported by the Armitage Floral Shop, 2065 Milwaukee avenue.

Visitors.

One of last week's visitors was James W. Davis, of Bettendorf, Ia., and Terre Haute, Ind. Mr. Davis devotes his principal attention to vegetables, but he always has an eye on the possibilities in cut flowers and pot plants. While here he arranged with the Lord & Burnham Co. for the immediate erection of two more of the big houses, 76x600, at the Terre Haute range, which will make five there, and for one more house, also 76x600, at the range at Bettendorf. At Bettendorf the Lord & Burnham Co. will erect another iron frame house 41¾x300 feet, for the Davis Floral Co., a company separate from the other two.

Belle Washburn

THE BEST RED CARNATION

WASHBURN QUALITY WINS!

RESULTS ARE WHAT COUNT!

WINNER of the Silver Medal of the American Carnation Society, at Buffalo, 1915; also WINNER of the SAME MEDAL in the same class at ST. LOUIS, 1916; First prize at the Illinois State Fair, at Springfield, Ill., September 22 and 23. It has never been beaten at any exhibition. The color is a most brilliant red. The size of the flower is 3½ inches. Stems 24 to 36 inches long, strong and stiff. We have never had a burst calyx, all flowers grading firsts; and, best of all, it is a constant bloomer, giving a steady run of flowers equal in number to the Enchantress family. It has a spicy odor, much greater than the average Carnation. It comes in full flower by the 1st of December and then continues steadily through the balance of the season.

The color is the most brilliant red of any Carnation now in the market. We have grown this variety for five years, it being one of our own seedlings, and we now have 30,000 plants benched in our greenhouses at Greggs, of which 12,000 are for the cut flowers and 18,000 devoted to rooted cuttings. Rooted cuttings now ready for delivery.

Price of the rooted cuttings is $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000. We will bill 500 at the 1000 rate price.

Every cutting guaranteed strong and well rooted.

We have 1500 plants growing in our greenhouses at Hollywood, Cal., devoted exclusively to rooted cuttings.

Orders for Pacific Coast States will please be sent to our Western Branch, care of E. B. Washburn, 252 South Orange Grove Avenue, Pasadena, Cal.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

The Posy Shop, of Fremont, O., had a good showing of cinerarias and primulas for St. Valentine's day.

T. J. Enright, of Fostoria, O., is devoting practically all his space to carnations.

George M. Palmer, of Findlay, O., has opened a retail store in the business district. He is making a good display of potted plants and baskets.

Mr. Swan, of the Swan Floral Co., of Lima, O., has been suffering from neuritis in his right arm.

With J. C. Fletcher as guide, a trip through the greenhouses of Rolf Zetlitz, of Lima, was most interesting. There are about 90,000 feet of glass, devoted principally to roses and carnations. About 15,000 carnation plants are grown in one section. The Alice carnation is the favorite and is considered by Mr. Fletcher to be the best commercial variety, being light pink in color and a prolific bloomer, with good, healthy plants and strong stems. Of the roses Russell is the favorite. Hoosier Beauty will replace Richmond next season.

William Gerlach, of Piqua, O., had a good St. Valentine's day business. Perhaps the quality of flowers and plants had much to do with it, for there surely was some beautiful stock on display.

L. A. Thomas, of Troy, O., has had a good run of funeral work. The demand for potted plants has been good.

George Frisch, of Dayton, O., has been suffering from a nervous breakdown during the last six weeks. He is slowly recovering.

The Heiss Co., of Dayton, had a handsome display of potted plants and novelties for St. Valentine's day.

Harriet Van Meter, of Springfield, O., displayed a choice assortment of spring plants for Valentine's.

The junior prom at the state university, Columbus, O., kept the Block Floral Co. busy making corsage bouquets. Carl Block introduced the pendent bouquet with great success, making more than fifty of this one kind.

The Livingston Seed Co., of Columbus, had a unique window display for Washington's birthday, featuring colonial bouquets of red, white and blue.

Baby primroses, cyclamens, cinerarias, begonias and azaleas impress one most favorably on a visit through the greenhouses of W. W. Horlacher, of Dayton. Among the novelties grown are dwarf German lilacs, French daisies and genistas. W. T. U.

The Sensational Yellow Mum of the Year

MRS. M. R. MORGAN

A PURE GOLDEN YELLOW EATON

We guarantee this to be the best-selling late-midseason Yellow Mum on the market

Took Third Prize at big Cleveland Flower Show in Big Yellows. Packs and travels perfectly. It is such a profitable variety to grow that we grew no other variety at our greenhouses last season. It is an intensely brilliant yellow sport of Yellow Eaton and finishes the season at Thanksgiving. We find no equal as a keeper.

ROSES

RED RADIANCE—A sport of Radiance that will be welcomed as a valuable addition to the list of greenhouse Roses and will be of greatest value for the garden. Grafted or Own Root, 2¼-in., $2.50 per doz., $17.50 per 100, $150.00 per 1000.

MRS. WM. R. HEARST—A clear, dark pink sport of My Maryland. The equal of Maryland in habit and growth, and far superior to it in color. Grafted or Own Root, 2¼-in., $2.50 per doz., $17.50 per 100, $150.00 per 1000.

HOOSIER BEAUTY—Deep, rich crimson in color. We have a large stock of this new Rose and can fill your order to your satisfaction. Grafted, 2¼-in., $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100, $140.00 per 1000; OwnRoot, 2¼-in., $1.50 per doz., $10.00 per 100, $90.00 per 1000.

HADLEY—With both Hadley and the above-named variety we have to offer the two best red Roses in commerce. Grafted, 2¼-in., $1.50 per doz., $12.50 per 100, $120.00 per 1000; Own Root, 2¼-in., $1.00 per doz., $7.50 per 100, $60.00 per 1000.

CARNATION NOVELTIES

MISS THEO—(Littlefield & Wyman.) We have 4000 plants of Miss Theo growing here at Cromwell. We can verify the assertion that it is the most prolific Carnation on the market today. The color is true rose pink. The flower is well formed, but not large. It will be a profitable variety. Rooted Cuttings, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

NEBRASKA—We can fill your order for this new scarlet. It appears to us to be one of the finest of the novelties of the year. Rooted Cuttings, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

RED WING—From observation of this variety growing, we believe it is well worth a thorough trial. It looks prolific and the flowers are of fine quality. Rooted Cuttings, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

ALICE—By far the finest light pink Carnation from the standpoint of freedom and profitableness. We have excellent stock for February delivery. Rooted Cuttings, $6.00 per 100, $50,00 per 1000. We cannot accept orders for Good Cheer for earlier than March 15th delivery.

THE BIG FOUR

OPHELIA, DOUBLE WHITE KILLARNEY, KILLARNEY BRILLIANT and MRS. AARON WARD—The four best greenhouse Roses for general growing, $12.50 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

These varieties are better grafted than own root. If wanted on own roots, the price is $7.50 per 100, $60.00 per 1000.

MRS. GEORGE SHAWYER and LADY ALICE STANLEY—On their own roots, $7.50 per 100, $60.00 per 1000.

BEDDING PLANTS

COLEUS, HELIOTROPE, SALVIA, PETUNIAS, FUCHSIAS and other stock. VINCA VARIEGATA cuttings. Write us your wants. Refer to the classified ads.

GOLDEN GLEAM OUR NOVELTY FOR 1916

As a novelty of the year we are offering a seedling of our own raising. It is a bright, glistening yellow in color; medium dwarf in growth. Fully as good two to a plant as single. Matures Oct. 20th to Nov. 1st. Second crown buds were the best. 2¼-in., $1.50 per doz., $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

LAST SEASON'S NOVELTIES

Rooted Cuttings, $7.00 per 100, $60.00 per 1000.

CRYSTAL GEM—A fine, pure white. Midseason.

EARLY FROST—The best early white variety. We have a big lot ready for delivery.

GOLDEN QUEEN—The best yellow since Chrysolora. This is the general opinion.

MARIGOLD—A fancy 'Mum for the careful grower. When well done, it is the best yellow variety in commerce.

MODELLO—Bronze, maturing in early November. Handsome as a Cactus Dahlia.

WHITE CHIEFTAIN—For early delivery we offer fine stock of this high-class variety at $4.00 per 100, $35.00 per 1000. This means January and February delivery, and we have ample stock for your requirements.

GOLDEN EATON—Better in color than Yellow Eaton. One of the finest of the new 'Mums. Early delivery, $4.00 per 100, $35.00 per 1000.

A NEW POMPON

PEACE—A beautiful shell pink; one of the finest varieties ever offered. 2¼-in., $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100.

SINGLES

RAMONA—Deep, rich bronze in color. One of the finest varieties ever offered. Exhibited in the winning five vases at Cleveland. 2¼-in., $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100.

DUSKY MAID—Orange-bronze in color. Well-built, semi-double flowers carried well apart on spray. The finest variety for Thanksgiving. 2¼-in., $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100.

The Cromwell Gardens Set and the Mount Greenwood Set are offered in our catalog. Look them over. They are improvements on existing varieties and worthy of general growing.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus

We make a specialty of seedlings. We offer now 50,000 seedlings ready for potting. Big, strong seedlings. Big value at $8.00 per 1000; 2500 at $7.50 per 1000; 5000 at $7.00 per 1000.

We deliver anywhere, all charges paid, for 50c. per 1000 in addition to price quoted.

The Market.

Trade St. Valentine's day was heavy, according to reports. There was a large demand for sweet peas, violets, valley and the smaller roses for corsages, and other stock, such as roses, carnations and spring flowers, came in for a share of the trade. Everyone was well satisfied with the day's business. It is a day we can count on for good returns. Funeral work has been large; there seems to be no end to it.

Roses have been somewhat scarce, especially pinks, and the demand has been heavy. Carnations are in heavy crop, but they are a little soft. Sweet peas are fine and find a ready sale, especially in corsages, which have been increasing rapidly. Violets are holding their own and their quality is good. Lilies are scarce and the demand for them is satisfactory. Bulbous stock is coming in heavily and finds a ready sale.

Various Notes.

The Livingston Seed Co. has installed a new refrigerator, which was in working order for Valentine's day. There was a good display for the event.

Graff Bros. report trade as being good Valentine's day and a great demand for sweet peas.

The Munk Floral Co. made a good display in the new windows, which add greatly to the appearance of the store.

DIRT BANDS

Very soon every grower will be making free use of dirt bands for the growing of all plants. Certainly, no florist can afford to pass them by. They are time and money savers, producing better plants at less cost and with less labor. It simply is a question of getting the best band.

Our new READY-USE dirt band tells its own story. Send a postal for free samples and see how it does it. It comes to you ready to set the plant in, which means saving of very valuable time required to fold the ordinary strips of paper commonly offered for bands.

We make plain bands, too, from high-grade, hard finish stock. Samples will be sent. Compare them with others and put them to any test. It is not how cheap, but how good, is our motto.

PRICES OF PLAIN SQUARE DIRT BANDS.

	1000	5000	10,000	20,000	50,000	100,000
2-in.	$0.70	$2.20	$ 4.10	$ 7.70	$17.25	$30.00

3½-in.	1.00	4.40	8.80	16.10	39.00	75.00
4-in.	1.10	5.40	10.20	21.00	48.00	92.00

Plain bands require folding, but our simplified instructions make it easy.

PRICE OF READY-USE SQUARE DIRT BANDS.

	1,000	5,000	10,000	50,000	100,000
2x2x2-in.	$1.00	$4.00	$ 7.50	$35.00	$60.00
2½x2½x2-in.	1.10	5.00	9.00	42.50	85.00
3x3x2-in.	1.25	6.00	10.00	47.50	92.00

Our ready-use bands are complete and ready to set up. The lap is glued down and each band opens up square. No folding required, nor time lost in setting them up.

Send a postal for free samples of our bands and decide for yourself. All orders positively cash. State whether express or freight shipment. We guarantee satisfaction.

The Market.

Business has been keeping up remarkably well. Funeral work this month is perhaps the largest in the history of the trade. Stock of all kinds is plentiful. Sweet peas are in abundance and are sold at 50 cents per hundred. According to reports received from all the florists, the St. Valentine's day business showed a big increase over last year's. The stores had special window displays and February 12 the daily papers had a page devoted to the florists advertising flowers as valentines.

Various Notes.

The New York Floral Co. is busy with funeral work. It had an attractive window display for St. Valentine's day. One of the novelties worthy of special mention was a heart-shaped basket filled with Francis Scott Key roses and forget-me-nots.

Baldwin reports business as being good. He is featuring some fine primroses, tulips and hyacinths.

T. B. McClintock is cutting sweet peas, carnations, valley and lilies, and reports business good. Mr. McClintock is looking forward to a big Easter business.

Anton Schultheis is showing fine plants of azaleas, primulas, cyclamens, tulips and daffodils.

A. L. Besancon & Co. have been unusually busy with funeral work and decorations. They are preparing to move to their new store in the Life Insurance building.

G. R. Clark says that the seed business is starting in nicely. Miss Loftus and Miss Clifford are confined to their homes with the grip. Miss Kennedy has returned after a three weeks' visit to Albany and Troy, N. Y. F. J. M.

Hagerstown, Md.—A fire of unknown origin recently destroyed the boiler room and damaged four greenhouses at the range of H. A. Bester & Sons.

Batavia, Ill.—Escaping gas from defective mains February 16 entered the greenhouses of Andrew Anderson in sufficient quantity to cause a loss estimated by Mr. Anderson at $6,000.

NEPHROLEPIS JOHN WANAMAKER
Introduced August, 1915

The Wanamaker Boston has more than made good. Everyone who has received early shipments from us has been greatly pleased with the variety and repeat orders have been coming in daily. We have a very large stock. A "sport" from Nephrolepis Scholzeli, with longer, narrower, gracefully drooping fronds. It is not so compact in growth as Scholzeli and therefore does not decay in the center, and is a durable house fern. It is a rapid grower, making an abundance of fronds, and is quite distinct from any other Nephrolepis. The following prices are for immediate and spring delivery:

2¼-inch pots, strong plants, $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000.
4-inch pots, strong plants, $25.00 per 100; $225.00 per 1000.
6-inch pots, strong plants, $50.00 per 100.
8-inch pots, strong plants, $12.00 and $15.00 per doz.
Large specimens, $2.50, $3.00 and $4.00 each.

Greenhouse Heating.

WARNING! DON'T GET CAUGHT.

The fuel situation is such that, while nothing may happen, the man with greenhouse property depending on his alertness should not permit his fuel supply to be low any longer than it takes to get the bunkers filled. Act today.

As is well known to all florists, the miners' contract with the coal operators expires April 1. The negotiations looking to a renewal of the contract, in progress last week at Mobile, resulted in a disagreement and a recess of one week during which each side can obtain fresh instructions from its principals. All Fools' day possibly will not see a cessation of mining, and then again it may. The only wise course for a florist is to have enough coal on the place to last through the season.

Because many large interests are taking the course here advised for florists and storing coal, the demand for cars is more than the railroads can supply. Congested traffic conditions make the movement slow and it is said some mines are not getting more than forty per cent of the cars they requisition. These causes make the list quotations a mere matter of form; one seldom can buy coal for immediate delivery at the market price; a premium must be paid.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

My greenhouse is 28x70, six feet high to the eaves and thirteen feet to the ridge. It has a 3-foot concrete wall all around, with three feet of glass above the concrete. Both ends are exposed. The house runs east and west and the boiler is at the southwest corner. The top of the boiler is on a level with the return pipes. The house is piped as follows: One 3-inch flow runs from the boiler across the west end to the north side of the house and then east; this flow is supported on brackets attached to the purlin posts, about two feet below the glass, and has a fall of six inches. At the east end this pipe is connected to nine 2-inch returns, passing under the beds. At the south side of the house there is a 2½-inch flow, two feet below the glass and supported on brackets in the same way as at the north side; this flow is connected to eight 2-inch returns.

I am using a 7-section, cast-iron Capitol boiler; its grate is 18x36. There is a 35-foot brick chimney; the flue is twenty-four inches in diameter at the base and sixteen inches at the top.

Kroeschell Boiler, Generator and Heating System: Insure Perfect Results

"Having promised you a letter as soon as we had passed through a good, fair test, I consider it now almost timely. We had the thermometer 18 degrees below and we've just gone through a blizzard bad enough for any season and am very well pleased to inform you that our heating system was equal to the occasion. So far as we have gone, am certainly well satisfied with the Kroeschell Boiler, Generator and Heating System.

Am I using the boiler to its full capacity? I have no trouble in maintaining a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees in zero weather. I am planning to build another small house, 28x34, of the same construction as the present one. A. L. M.—Neb.

The radiation is about right for 60 degrees in zero weather, although the distribution of heat would have been a little better if one 2½-inch flow pipe had been used on each plate and another three feet below the ridge, with fifteen or sixteen 2-inch returns on the walls and under the benches.

One can judge better regarding the capacity of a boiler by noting its performance than by estimating what it should do from the grate area. However, it seems safe to say that the boiler described should heat the additional radiation, although it might be necessary to give the fires frequent at-

THE HEATING PROBLEM SOLVED

Judging strictly according to mechanical merits, it's the METROPOLITAN PATENTED BOILER you want.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel and less attention than any other boiler on the market.

The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface.

Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit:—Smooth, perfect finished castings. Push nipple connections. Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals. Deep ash pit, making the removal of ashes a slight task. Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean. Grates that are made for hard usage and long service. And above all, they are Fuel Saving, not Fuel Wasting.

We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50 per cent in coal.

You can't know (at best you only think you know) what the temperature is in your greenhouses, nights and during your absences, unless you have

THE STANDARD RECORDING THERMOMETER

PRICE, $25.00

It has made thousands of dollars for many florists and may do as much for you. Your plants must have certain, steady temperature to do their best. Use this thermometer and you will know whether they are getting what they need. It leaves a written record under lock and key.

"Please send me 25 record plates like the enclosed sample, and I want to say that the machine bought a good many years back is keeping up its good work right along. The recording thermometer is a very useful adjunct to good plant growing and should be in every man's greenhouse, as reference to it may often tell what is wrong with a batch of plants, and avoid blaming the temperature when it is not the fault of the temperature.

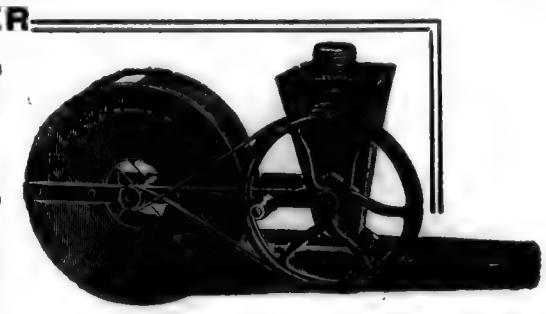
USE THE PEERLESS BLOWER



DESTROY MILDEW

Distributes Sulphur, Lime, Slug Shot, Grape Dust, Tobacco Dust, Paris Green or any other powdery substance. Does the work evenly, so every leaf receives its due proportion, without any being wasted. By using the Peerless, a 200-ft. greenhouse can be perfectly powdered in less than five minutes. Florists say:

"It's a great improvement over the bellows."

Ask your jobber for the Peerless or order direct from us. Price, $4.00 F. O. B. Chicago.

tention when the temperature is below zero outside.

PIPING THREE NEW HOUSES.

I am enclosing a rough sketch of my proposed greenhouses, which I expect to build this season. The range will consist of three connected houses, each 25x120, running east and west. The height to the gutters will be eight feet. House No. 1, the south house, will have a 3-foot concrete wall at the south side, with five feet of glass above the concrete. In this house I shall want a temperature of 60 degrees. In house No. 2, the next house to the north, the required temperature will be 55 degrees. House No. 3 will need a temperature of 50 degrees. I shall use a steam gravity system, with 1¼-inch returns. The outside temperature here sometimes drops as low as 18 degrees below zero. How many lines of 1¼-inch pipes will be required in each house?

F. R. G.—Kan.

For the south house, 25x120, with five feet of glass in the south wall, for a temperature of 60 degrees when it is 15 to 18 degrees below zero outside, we would put in one 2½-inch overhead flow pipe and twelve 1¼-inch returns. If raised beds are used, we would place two returns under each of the benches and the remainder of the returns on the walls. For house No. 2 one flow and ten returns should be used, and in house No. 3 we would put in one flow and eight returns, for 50 degrees.

PIPING STEAM TO RESIDENCE.

We have one horizontal tubular boiler, 16x66, with which we are heating our greenhouses, using steam heat. We wish to run a line to our residence, which is about 1,000 feet distant. Kindly inform us whether this would be practical. If so, what size of pipe would be necessary for the steam line and the return pipe? What would be the best method of insulating the pipes?

H. H. M.—Mo.

The size of the dwelling and the amount of radiation required to heat it should be considered in determining whether it can be heated to advantage from a central plant, but we would not recommend the use of such a system unless the amount of radiation in the residence is at least twice as great as the number of feet from the boiler to the residence, which can hardly be the case in this instance.

In case a central heating plant is used for the dwelling, a main about two and one-half inches in diameter should be used as the supply pipe, with a 1½-inch pipe for the return. A concrete tunnel should be used for the flow and return pipes. All pipes should be covered with asbestos pipe covering, and care should be taken to have them properly provided with expansion joints.

"TO-BAK-INE" FUMIGATING PAPER

is the strongest fumigating paper on the market, each sheet being saturated with a definite amount of pure nicotine, making it an extremely convenient and neat insecticide for fumigating purposes; it is also free from ammonia, which is present in ordinary tobacco smoke and extracts. To-Bak-Ine Fumigating Papers are recommended for use on delicate flowers and plants. Put up in hermetically sealed tin cans of 24 full length sheets; ½ case, 6 cans, 144 sheets; 1 case, 12 cans, 288 sheets. To-Bak-Ine Liquid and To-Bak-Ine Fumigating and Dusting Powder are the STANDARDS.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

The Market.

The temperature went up to 55 degrees February 17, and dropped to 8 degrees below zero the following night, which was about the most severe change we have had during this remarkably mild winter. There was a slight break in business during the week, which probably was due to the shock received by everyone on learning the intention of the government to levy taxation on certain business profits, but confidence in the country's resources still seems strong and the week-end trade was just as lively as if nothing had happened.

St. Valentine's day brought out a fair number of patrons, and there was hardly sufficient stock of any kind to meet the demand. The violets were simply magnificent, nothing like them ever having been grown here before. As many as 230,000 were picked and found a ready market. All kinds of stock are becoming more plentiful, but the shortage has been felt since Christmas, largely owing to the unfortunate way in which the bulbous stock upset everybody's calculations.

Various Notes.

Walter Thompson is glad to be back again to care for his excellent stock after having been laid up with influenza for nearly a month. W. J. Jones has been suffering from a severe attack of pneumonia, from which he is slowly recovering. W. G. P.

Elkhart, Ind.—The owners of the West View Floral Co., N. A. Harold and F. S. Jones, have purchased the business of Hugh Hills, on Prairie street. This company formerly was the W. H. Troyer concern.

The Market.

Business was good last week. Prices remain steady, though flowers are more plentiful. Bulbous stock is about the only thing that is cheap. Tulips are coming in with longer stems and are of better substance.

Various Notes.

Ernest Chamberlain reports business as being much better at his new stand. This week he has had some attractive signs placed in the windows.

S. E. Shaw is cutting some fine sweet peas. His carnations are in better crop than they have been for several months.

Frank L. Gray has recovered from his recent attack of the grip.

Julius Rusitzky, the proprietor of the Flower Mart, is the proud father of an 8-pound baby. W. M. P.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The market is strong on carnations and bulbous stock, while roses remain scarce. Lilies, valley, forget-me-nots, snapdragons, etc., are picked up on sight.

Various Notes.

A visit to C. Merkel & Son, of Mentor, found the men busy with preparations for Easter. Their rambler roses never looked better, and with three of their largest houses full of them they should have enough to meet all demands. They are erecting another 400-foot Foley house to hold this stock, which soon will have to be spaced. The lilies, French hydrangeas, lilacs, spiræas, etc., are in the best of condition.

The entertainment committee of the Florists' Club, which consists of Frank J. Ritzenthaler, chairman; Walter E. Cook and Charles J. Graham, conducted a trip of inspection to the West Technical high school Thursday, February 24. They have issued a call for all who wish to join the Florists' Glee Club to meet Monday evening, February 28, at the Hollenden hotel, at which time the organization will be completed. All members of the Florists' Club and their friends are invited to attend this meeting. F. A. F.
